When you operate, kneel before the Almadel with clothes of the same colour in a closet hung with the same colours also, for the holy apparation will be of the same colour. And when he is appeared, put the earthen bason under the Almadel with fire and hot ashes and three grains of mastic in powder, to fume as above written, and when the angel smelleth the perfume, he turneth his face towards you, asking the exorcist with a low voice why he called the princes of this Chora or Altitude. Then you must answer as before, saying: I desire that my request may be granted, and the contents thereof may be accomplished, for your offices make appear and declare that such is to be done by you if it please God, &c. You must not be fearful but speak humbly, saying: I recommend myself wholly into your office, and I pray unto your princes of this Altitude that I may enjoy and obtain all things according to my wishes and desires, &c. You may further express your mind in all particulars in your prayers. Do the like in the two other Choras that follow.

The angel of this second Altitude appeareth in the form of a young child with clothes of satin and of a red rose colour, having a crown of red gilly flowers upon his head, his face looking upwards to heaven; and is of a red colour and is compassed round about with a bright splendour, as the beams of the Sun. And before he departeth he speaks to the exorcist saying: I am your friend and brother. And he illuminateth the air round above with splendour, and he leaveth a pleasant smell, which lasteth a long time, &c.

Of the Third Chora or Altitude

In this Chora you are to do in all things as you are before directed in the other two. The angels of this Altitude are named as followeth: Eliphamasai, Gelomiros, Gedobonal, Saranana, and Elomnia. They appear in the form of children or little women dressed in green and silver colours, very delightful to behold, and a crown of bay leaves, beset with flowers of white and green colours upon their heads. And they seem to look a little downwards with their faces, &c. They speak as the others do to the exorcist, and leave a mighty, sweet perfume behind them, &c.

Of the Fourth Chora or Altitude

In this Chora you must do as in the others, and the angels of this Chora are called Barchiel, Gediel, Gabiel, Deliel and Captiel. These appear in the form of little men or boys with clothes of a black colour, mixed with a dark green, and in their hands they hold a bird which is naked, and their heads are bear, only it is compassed round and beset with ivy and berries. They are all very beautiful and comely and are compassed round with a bright shining of divers colours. They leave a sweet smell behind them also, but it differeth from the others somewhat.

Of the Proper Times for Invoking These Angels

Note there are twelve princes ruling besides those in the four Altitudes, and they distribute their office amongst themselves, every one ruling thirty days, or thereabouts, every year. Now it will be in vain to call any of those angels unless it be those that then governeth, for every Chora or Altitude hath its limited time according to the twelve signs of the Zodiac, and in what sign the Sun is in, that angel or those angels that belong to that sign have the government. As, for example, suppose I would call the two first of those five that belong to the first Chora. Then choose the first Sunday on March, that is, after the Sun is entered Aries, and then I make my experiment. And so do the like if you will the next Sunday after again. But if you will call the two second that belong to the first Chora, then you must take the Sundays that are in April, after the Sun is entered Taurus.

But if you call the last of the five, then you must take those Sundays that are in May, after the Sun is entered Gemini, to make your experiment in: do the like in the other Altitudes, for they have all one way of working. But the Altitudes have a name formed severally in the substance of heaven even as a character, for when the angels hear the names of God that are attributed to them they hear it by the vertue of that character. Therefore it is in vain to call any spirit or angel unless you know what names of God to call them by. Therefore observe the form of this following conjuration or invocation.

The Invocation for to Call Forth Any of the Foresaid Angels

O thou great, mighty, and blessed angel of God N, who ruleth as the chief and first governing angel in the first Chora or Altitude in the East, under the great prince of the East whom you obey, and who is set over you as king by the divine power of God, ADONAI, HELOMI, PINE, who is the distributer and disposer of all things holy in Heaven, Earth, and Hell, I the servant of that God ADONAI, HELOMI, PINE, which you obey, do invocate, conjure and entreat thee N, that thou forthwith appeareth. And by the vertue and power of the same God, ADONAI, HELOMI, PINE, I do command thee forth by him whom you do obey and who is set over you as king by the divine power of God, that you forthwith descend from thy order or place of abode to come into me, and show thyself plainly and visibly here before me in this crystal stone, in thy own and proper shape and glory, speaking with a voice intelligible unto my understanding.

O thou mighty and blessed angel N, who art by the power of God ordained to govern all vegetables and animals, and causeth them and all other creatures of God to spring, increase and bring forth according to their kinds and natures, I the servant of the same your God, do entreat and humbly beseech thee to come and show unto me all things that I shall desire of thee, so far as in office you can, or be capable to perform, if God permit to the same.

O thou servant of mercy N, I entreat thee and humbly beseech thee, in and by these three names of your true God, ADONAI, HELOMI, PINE, and do constrain thee in and by this powerful name ANABONA, that thou forthwith appeareth visibly and plainly in thy own proper shape and glory, in and through this crystal stone, that I may visibly see thee, and audibly hear thee speak unto me, that I may have thy blessed and glorious angelic assistance, familiar friendship and constant society, communication and instruction, both now and at all other times, to inform and rightly instruct me in my ignorance and depraved intellect, judgement and understanding; and to assist me both herein, and in all other truths, else what the Almighty Adonai, the king of kings, the giver of all good gifts, shall in his bountiful and fatherly mercy be graceously pleased to bestow upon me, Therefore O thou blessed angel N. be friendly unto me, and do for me so far as God hath given you power in office to perform, whereunto I move you in power and presence to appear that I may sing with his holy angels: O Mappa-la-man! Hallelujah! Amen.

Note this invocation is to be altered according to the Altitude and angel you wish to call forth.

When he is appeared, give him or them a kind entertainment, and then ask what is just and lawful, and that which is proper and suitable to his office, and you shall obtain it.

[1] I. R. F. Calder, "John Dee Studied as an English Neoplatonist," 2 vols. Ph. D. diss. (The Warberg Institute, London University, 1952); Peter J. French, John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus (London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1972); Nicholas H. Clulee, John Dee's Natural Philosophy —between science and religion. (London and New York: Routledge, 1988); William H. Sherman, John Dee, the Politics of Reading and Writing in the English Renaissance (Amherst: University of Massachusetts Press, 1995).

[2] See list in Peter French, John Dee: The World of an Elizabethan Magus, pp. 216–29.

[3] Many of these apparent conflicts are still with us today. Charles Tart, Body Mind Spirit (Charlottesville: Hampton Roads, 1997), observes that Scientism, a belief that scoffs at anything that doesn't fit our supposedly scientific beliefs, has become "the world's most powerful (and negative) religion." It is interesting to note that most modern religious studies carefully avoid Scientism.

[4] Frances A. Yates, The Rosicrucian Enlightenment (Boulder: Shambhala, 1978), p. xii.

[5] Some have argued there are actually two systems: the Heptarchic system (represented by this manuscript and Dee's Heptarchia Mystica), and the Enochian system, represented by later records, especially TFR.

[7] Although there has been some criticism of Dr. Yates' work in recent years, I have found the views of Roberts and Watson to be the most balanced: "The influence of the later work of Yates herself will be widely apparent for although that often seems hasty and over-enthusiastic, our own research has frequently confirmed rather than contradicted hers. . . ." Julian Roberts and Andrew Watson, John Dee's Library Catalogue (London: The Bibliographical Society, 1990), p. 26.

[8] R. Turner writes, "Mistakes abound in both the Crowley and Regardie printed Enochian texts. I counted 91 in the first Call alone when comparing these with Dee's original manuscript (see Sloane 3191, British Museum)." Cited by Colin Wilson, "Introduction to the Necronomicon," Gnostica, 48, Nov. 1978, p. 62.

[9] The first edition was limited to 500 copies. Another version was produced by Christopher Whitby as his doctoral thesis. This had a small reprinting as John Dee's Actions with Spirits, 2 vols. (New

William Sherman, John Dee, p. 149.

11

These records were published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon as A True & Faithful Relation . . . Between Dr. John Dee . . . and Some Spirits (TFR). Casaubon's main intent in publishing this material was to discredit Dee's reputation.

12

For example, he is credited with coining the word "unit," which he used to translate the Greek "monas." He also coined the word "Britannia."

Hans Ankwicz-Kleehoven observes, "Just as no distinguished foreigner at the beginning of the nineteenth century omitted to pay his respects to Goethe in Weimar, so it was good form in the Germany of circa 1500 to have called on Trithemius at Sponheim." Cited in loan P. Couliano, Eros and Magic in the Renaissance (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1987), p. 166.

William Sherman has given us an excellent sense of it in his book; see especially p. 40.

19

"Dee could hardly have held a more prominent place in . . . the genesis of the British Empire." See William Sherman, John Dee, pp. 148 ff and passim.

20

A large element of Dee's patriotism was his fascination with the Arthurian legends. He was largely responsible for reviving interest in them. Dee believed himself to be of royal descent.

21

British Library, Sloane manuscript 3188, fol. 65a. See also John Dee, General and Rare Memorials pertayning to the Perfect Arte of NAVIGATION (GRM) (London: John Daye, 1577).

[22]

Johannes Trithemius in De Septem Secundeis (translation in William Lilly, Worlds Catastrophe, London, 1647), wrote that world history was governed by the rules of seven angels, each ruling 354 years and 4 months. The angels told Dee that "the 7 Governours have almost ended their Government" (TFR, p. 4). Dee's copy of Cyprian Leowitz, De Conjunctionibus Magnis Insignioribus Superiorum Planetarum (Leuingen, 1564), has "underlinings and a few notes" (item 631, R&W).

[23]

GRM (1577) is dated 5540, and A Playne Discourse . . . concerning the needful reformation of ye vulgar kallender (Oxford: Bodleian Library, Ashmole MS 1789, article 3, 1582) is dated 5545.

[24]

The title page for Dee's General and Rare Memorials shows a timeline of history of something over 6,000 years. If 6,000 years is significant to him as it was to others, his calculations would put the end at A.D. 2037.

[33]

For example, "AGLA" and "ARARITA" are acronyms derived from verses of scripture. See Cornelius Agrippa, De occulta philosophia Libri Tres (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1992), book 3, chapter xi,

p. 428.

For example, Arbatel, De Magia Veterum (Basel, 1575), p. 21, Aphor. 14: “da mihi unum de spiritibus tuis, qui me doceat ea, quae vis nos discere & cognoscere, ad laudem & honorem tuum & utilitatem proximi.” (“Grant me therefore one of thy spirits, who may teach me those things which thou wouldest have me to know and learn, to thy praise and glory, and the profit of our neighbour.”)

35

For example, Cornelius Agrippa, De occulta philosophia, book 2, chap. 22, pp. 314–18.

36

There have been a number of recent books and movies with the theme of Dee’s magic.

41

Judaism was outlawed in England and much of Europe at the time. Note Dee’s comment “we can hardly trust anything in the Jews hands . . . they are a stiffnecked people and dispersed all the world over.”

46

It is not clear why Roberts and Watson make this identification. They note Francis Maddison's theory that Aldaraia = Ar. Al Dirâya "knowledge, cognizance, acquintance," but that is only hypothetical. They also note that Dee sent a servant (20 October 1595) to recover his Arabic book from Mr Abbot (?) at Oxford and (19 November 1595) "my Arabik boke restored by gods favor." Reginald Scot, Discoverie of Witchcraft (New York: Dover Publications, 1584/1973), published extracts from magic handbooks; many deal with scrying (e.g., pp. 148–9, 232–5, 238–9, 245–6, 249–50). Francis Barrett, The Magus (London, 1801; reprint: Secaucus: The Citadel Press, 1975) pp. 135bis ff, published scrying instructions from Trithemius (or pseudo-Trithemius). See also manuscripts Sloane 1317, 3846 (art 6), 3848, 3949 (arts. 1, 3), 3851, 3853 (art. 9), 3854 (art 5).
50

According to Couliano, mnemonics, along with eroticism, is an essential component of magic, "to such an extent that it is impossible to understand [magic] without first having studied the principles and mechanisms of the first two" (Eros and Magic in the Renaissance, p. xviii). See also Frances A. Yates, The Art of Memor, and Giordano Bruno's De magia in Jordani Bruni Nolani Opera latine conscripta (Neapoli, 1879–91). English translation in Robert De Lucca, Richard J. Blackwell, and Alfonso Ingegno, Giordano Bruno, Cause, Principle and Unity: And Essays on Magic (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1998).
51

I. P. Couliano, Eros and Magic in the Renaissance, p. 5.
52

He mentions scrying in his Monas Hieroglyphica (1564).
53

See "The Scryers of John Dee," Chris Pickering, Hermetic Journal 32, pp. 9–14. Another example of Dee seeing angels may be TFR 25, where he writes "Thereupon I perceived the presence of some good spiritual Creature, and straight way appeared the good Angel. I.L."
54

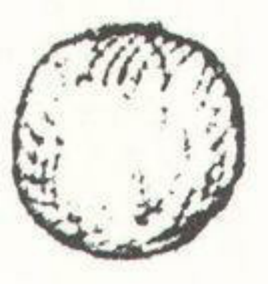
This friend was Edward Kelley, a.k.a. Edward Talbot.

55

Above this entry, someone wrote, “You that rede this underwritten assure yourselfe that yt is a shamfull lye, for Talbot neither studied for any such thinge not shewed himselfe dishonest in any thinge.” Dee added the comment, “This is Mr. Talbot or that lerned man, his own writing in my boke, very unduely as he cam by it.” There are also some additional notes by Talbot/Kelley that have been erased. Diary quotations are from James Orchard Halliwell, ed., The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee (New York: AMS Press, 1968) pp. 13–16.

56

Although Christopher Whitby (John Dee’s Actions with Spirits, pp. 138-141) questions whether the obsidian mirror was actually Dee’s, it is commonly accepted. John Pontois, Dee’s heir, was said to have “a certain round flat stone like Cristall which Pountis said was a stone which an Angell brought to doctor dye wherein he did worke and know many strange things . . .” See R&W, p. 61. See figure 8.1 in Nicholas Clulee, John Dee’s Natural Philosophy. This probably was the scrying stone that the angels mysteriously delivered on 21 November 1582 out of “the uttermost part of the Roman Possession.” Dee describes it as being “half an inch thick” (5 May, 1583), although Dee’s drawing of the former in Sloane 3191 clearly shows a sphere whereas the mirror is flat and has a handle.



57

Quoted in Christopher Whitby, John Dee’s Actions with Spirits, p. 92. Compare with the drawing and description found in (pseudo-?) Trithemius. The Art of Drawing Spirits in to Crystals in Francis Barrett, The Magus, book 2, p. 128 (York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 2000). In addition to Raphael, Gabriel, and Uriel, Trithemius includes Michael.

58

Nicholas Clulee, John Dee’s Natural Philosophy, p. 206. See the first action, where, after “fervent prayers to God,” Saul is asked to look into the stone and see “yf God had sent his holy Angel Anael.”

59

As an example, British Library Sloane manuscript 3849 (“Manner of Proceding in order to discover in the Crystall”) starts out with the seven Psalms before proceeding to ask Jesus to send the three angels “ancor annasor anelose.” Reginald Scot, in his 1584 edition of The Discoverie of Witchcraft (book 15, chapter 12), quotes from a magical text at length on how “to have a spirit inclosed into a christall stone or berill glasse, &c. First thou in the new of the moon being clothed with all new, and fresh, & cleane araie, and shaven, and that day to fast with bread and water, and being cleane confessed, saie the seaven psalmes, and the letanie, for the space of two daies, with this praier following . . .”

60

For example, see TFR, p. 25: “There appeared to E.K. a round Globe of white smoke over my head” (a UFO?). MLQ, 10 April 1583: “there appeared in the corner of my study a blak shadow.” Sometimes, the whole chamber appeared in the stone (e.g., MLQ, 15 March 1582).

The Key of Solomon the King (Clavicula Salomonis), first translated and edited from ancient manuscripts in the British Museum by S. Liddell MacGregor Mathers (London: George Redway, 1889; reissued, York Beach, ME: Samuel Weiser, 2000, p. 93). Mathers' reading most closely follows British Library manuscript Additional 10862, folio 116v (consecration of vestments): "Amor, Amator, Amides, Ideodaniach, Paucor, Playor, Anitor, per merita eorum sanctorum Angelorum . . ." The same manuscript again invokes these angels during the consecration of the silk cloth on fol. 64v: "Adonay, Anosbias anereneton, agla, athanatos, agyos, ancor, anachor, anilos, Theodomos, agnefeton, Cedyon, Lamet, Cetelfares, cos, Tetragrammaton." Strangely, Mathers omits this conjuration. Mathers' other manuscript authorities read as follows: Sloane 3091, fol. 84v: "ancor, amacor, amade. Theodonia, Pancorpsagor, Anotor, parles merites des Saints Anges, . . ." Harley 3981 fol. 112v: "Ancor, Amacor, Amade, Theodonia, Pancor = psagor, Anitor, par les merites des Saints Anges . . ." Kings 288 fol. 111v: "Anco, Amacor, Amade, Theodonia, Pancor, Psagor, Anitor, parles merites, des Saints Anges . . ." Ancor, Amacor, Amides, Teodonia, Pancor, Amitor, par les merites des Saintes . . . Sloane 1307 (missing from chapter on vestments but includes the following for consecrating the parchment fol. 109v:) "Autor, Amaur, Theodomos, Phagar, Abacri, adestote ad custodiam istius carte." Other manuscripts of the Key of Solomon in the British Library not used by Mathers preserve some valuable readings: Sloane 3847 fol. 46v (consecration of clothing): "Anchor, Anachor, anilos, theodonos, phagor, Ianitor, per merita Angelorum sanctorum . . ." fol. 60r (preparation of parchment): "Ancor, anacor, amlos, Theodomos, Phagor, adestote in custodia huius carte" fol. 60v: "Lazay, Salmay, Dalmay, Adonay, Saday, Tetragrammaton, anepheneton, Cedyon, Aryon, Anereneton, Athanatos, Theos, Theodomos, anilos, pes, kyros, abos, Theophilos, Onoy, Zoron, Largon, Lazaryon, Theophilon, Tisyon, Alyon, Occinomos, Zacharion, Sydion, Agla, Joth, heth, he, vau, el, emanuel, Ja Ja, Vah, ancor, anilos, Theodonas angeli sancti dei . . ." Additional 36674 fol. 15v: "Antor, Anator,et Anabis, Theodomas, lanitor [or Iamtor], by the desertes of the holy Anngells . . ." Sloane 2383 fol. 16r (preparation of parchment): "Anator, Amacor, phaidos, theodomos, plagar, abacar, adestote ad custodiam istius Cartae" fol. 25v (silk cloth): "Adonay, amatias, anaton prieumaton, agla, Ensoph, Cadon, antor, amacor, anilor, [26r] Semanphorus, Samceuaia, tetaph, soned, saemonim. Eos bos, Elohim."

In nomine . . . placebit: “In the name of God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit. Amen. O almighty, eternal, true and living God, be pleased to deliver me! O Lord of Lords, King of Kings, Jehovah Zebaoth, make haste to help me!(cf. Psalm 70) Glory be to God the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit: as it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be, world without end. Amen. Teach me to perceive and understand properly (O Creator of all things), for your wisdom is all I desire. Fix your word in my ear (O Creator of all things), and fix your wisdom in my heart. O Lord Jesus Christ (you who are the true wisdom of your eternal and omnipotent Father) I most humbly beg your Divine Majesty that you consider it proper to send me the speedy help of some pious wise man and experienced philosopher for realizing and perfecting above all fully those things which will be of greatest value for increasing your praise and glory. And if no such mortal man now lives upon the earth who is fitting for this work, or who may have been assigned by your eternal providence to the performing of that service for me, then truly I most humbly, most ardently, and most faithfully ask from your divine majesty that you grant to send me down from heaven your good spiritual ministers and angels, namely Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and also Uriel: and (from your divine favor) any other true and faithful angels of yours, who may completely and perfectly train and teach me in the true and accurate knowledge and understanding of your secrets and wonders (concerning all your creatures, and their nature, properties, and best use) and necessary knowledge for us mortals, to the praise, honor, and glory of your name, to my firm solace and otherwise (through me) the solace of the greatest number of your faithful, and to the confusion and ruin of the wicked. Amen. Let it be O Jehovah Zebaoth; let it be O Adonay; let it be O Elohim. O blessed and omnipotent Trinity, praised above all things, grant me (John Dee) this petition, in such a manner that will be most pleasing to you. Amen.” -Ed.

Angelus . . . praedominans: “Angel or intelligence now presiding over the whole world.” -Ed.

Etymologia: Gratiosa / Afflicta Dei / Misericors: “Etymology: Favored / Distressed of God Merciful.” Dee considered Hebrew etymology important and discusses meanings and roots of various words in various works of his. It seems he had at least a rudimentary command of Hebrew grammar as well. -Ed.

119

4 Angeli . . . Quaternarii: “4 angels presiding over the 4 quarters of heaven, as Agrippa notes in the Scale of the number four (Occult Phil., Book 2, ch 7).” This grouping of the Archangels is common in medieval and Renaissance occult works. In Liber Juratus, one of the earliest books of the Solomonic school of magic, these four angels are known as the “Angels of the 4 winds.” Agrippa, in his work, De Occulta Philosophia, book 2, chap. 7 (Leiden: E. J. Brill, 1992), pp. 266, calls them the “four angels ruling over the corners of the world.” The Magical Calendar of Tycho Brahe gives the same.

Michael and Gabriel are the only two angels mentioned by name in the Old Testament. Raphael is mentioned in the apocryphal Book of Tobit, and Uriel is well-known in noncanonical lore. Annael is relatively unknown. -Ed.

Etymologiae: Fortitudo . . . praevalesceus: “Etymology: Michael: Strength of God; Gabriel: either made very strong or very powerful or strength of God; Raphael: Medicine of God; Uriel: Light of God.” -Ed.

121

Anna . . . Deum: “Anna, et Annah, is a particle of the supplicant and confessor: consequently it may not be unreasonable that it indicates praying and confessing God.” Dee’s theory is that the name Annael derives from Hebrew “Ana” meaning “pray,” or “lament.” The more usual explanation of Anael is that it is equivalent to Haniel, and means “Grace of God.” Johannes Trithemius, in De Septem Secundeis (translation in William Lilly, Worlds Catastrophe, London, 1647) refers to him as the “spirit of Venus.”- Ed.

As our noble teacher Eliezer haKalir says: ‘Truth is his seal.’ This can be proved by arithmetical calculation. If we multiply Ehieh (meaning ‘essence’) by Ehieh we will get 441, which is the same as Emeth, the word for ‘true’ or ‘truth,’ and the same as Adonai Shalom, which means ‘Lord of Peace.’” Compare with Joseph Gikatilla (b. 1248), Gates of Light, translated by Avi Weinstein (San Francisco: Harper Collins Publishers, 1994), p. 222: “Thus the Sages said ‘EMeT is the seal of the Holy One, Blessed be He.’ . . . Therefore, upon His seal is written EMeT, to teach you that all the hosts of letters from the first aleph to the [but not including] mem [which is in the middle of the alphabet] look to bring favour . . .” See the introduction for a discussion of the seal Emeth. Betwixt the end of the 3rd book, whose last action was May 4, 1582, & the beginning of this 4th book whose first action was on Nov. 15, 1582, is a great chasme of time. Occasioned perchance by some falling out with E. Kelly which is implied in this mention of Reconciliatio Kelliana. This is the first time that Edward Kelly appears to bee the seer, at lest under that name, there beeing no account, neither in the printed nor Mss. books how hee came to Dee. Queue: If Edw. Kelly was not the same with Ed. Talbot this latter beeing his assumed name, perchance after he was in orders. For Weever in his Funeral Monuments speaking of Ed. Kelley the Necromancer, sayes hee also went by the name of Ed Talbot. -E.A. Dee’s diary fills in some details of this period: “May 4th, Mr. Talbot went. May 23, Robert Gardener declared unto me hora 4½ a certeyn great philosophicall secret, as he had termed it, of a spirituall creatuer, and was this day willed to come to me and declare it, which was solemnly done, and with common prayer. July 13th, Mr. Talbot cam abowt 3 of the clok afternone, with whom I had some wordes of unkendnes: we parted frendely: he sayd that the Lord Morley had the Lord Mountegle his bokes. He promised me some of Doctor Myniver’s bokes.” James Halliwell, ed., The Private Diary of Dr. John Dee (New York: AMS Press, 1968), pp. 15–16. -Ed.

This Character seemes to stand for Carmara, as apperes from severall places in fol .2.a. & b. & many other. It appears by a note of Dr. Δ (De Heptarchia &c: Cap. i.) that Michaell & Uriel were present at the begining of these revealed Misteries & gave authority to Carmara to order the whole Heptarchicall Revelacon. Perhaps this authority was entred in the first lost leafe of this 4th booke (thowgh Dr. Dee calls it the 2d Booke in his Note.) see Chap: 2 at the begining. By a marginall note at the beginning of the first Chapter, it should seeme, that the Dr. meanes by the first Booke the Action only of the 16 of Nov. 1582, & by the 2d Booke the Actions of the 17, 19 & 20 of Nov. 1582. But his marginal note of 19 should be 20 of Nov. for so it appears by the Actions entred. The 21 of Nov: vizt: the action of that day he calls the Appendix of the 2d chapter. -E.A. John Davis is mentioned in Dee’s diary as early as 1577, but Dee probably knew him as a boy. He was evidently one of Dee’s pupils, and one of the principal players in the search for the Northwest Passage. He stole at least seventy books from Dee’s library after Dee left for Europe in 1583. The reformation of the Kalendar. -Δ. On 24 February 1582, Pope Gregory XIII ordered the use of the “Gregorian” calendar, and the English court deliberated over its response. Dee was one of the authorities commissioned for a report. According to his diary, Dee delivered his proposal to reform the calendar to Lord Burghley, Treasurer of England on 26 February 1583. It caused considerable controversy. The court opinions were all favorable, and the Queen approved a draft proclamation to adopt the reform, but it was rejected by the bishops because they didn’t want to appear to be following the Catholic lead. -Ed.

They were, in fact, readmitted into England in 1655 after petitions from Menasseh Ben Israel. See David S. Katz, Philo-Semitism and the Readmission of the Jews to England (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1982), chapter three for details. There is more on this in his most recent book, The Jews in the History of England (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1994). PREFACE Bibliographers will readily agree that this is worth doing. They will remember that Dee was not merely an alchemist and spiritualist, but a really learned man, and one who had done his best, by petitions and otherwise, to stimulate interest in the rescuing of MSS. from the dissolved monastic libraries and to induce the sovereign to establish a central national collection of them. They will also be aware that we have but very few sixteenth-century English catalogues of manuscript collections, and that the investigation of the destinies of a dispersed library may be made to throw much light upon the formation of the collections which still exist.

In 1842 J. O. Halliwell edited for the Camden Society a volume entitled The Diary of Dr. John Dee. To the diary itself, which extends with considerable gaps over the years (1554) 1577 to 1601, he appended the catalogue of Dee's manuscript library, taken from an autograph MS. in the Gale Collection at Trinity College, Cambridge (O. 4. 20). This catalogue it is my purpose to reprint here, and to furnish what information I can about the books entered in it.

It will be as well, before we embark upon the examination of the catalogue, to have before us the leading dates in the life of the owner of the books. John Dee was born in 1527. When the Diary begins, we find him living at Mortlake. In 1583 (on September 21) he left England, with the impostor Edward Kelly, for Bohemia and Poland, whence, after a most unsuccessful and detrimental sojourn, he returned to Mortlake in December 1589. In 1595 he was made Warden of Manchester College (now the cathedral): in 1604 he came back to Mortlake; and in 1608 he died there in poverty.

Our catalogue was made on September 6, 1583, just a fortnight before he started for the Continent. As soon as he was fairly off, a raid was made upon his house by the less respectable residents in Mortlake (among the better sort he seems to have been popular and well-liked), his books were, to some extent, dispersed, and valuable scientific instruments broken or stolen. On his return six years later he was able to recover, it is said, three-fourths of the books, but the apparatus was gone for ever. The cause of the raid was no doubt Dee's dealings with spirits, which not unnaturally earned for him the reputation of being a sorcerer.[1]

The catalogue of 1583, then, cannot be regarded as a full record of the manuscripts which Dee possessed at the time of his death. Some volumes will be entered in it which were lost or destroyed soon after it was made, and, on the other hand, during the twenty-five years that elapsed between its making and Dee's death, it is not to be supposed that he did not make additions to his collection. There are, in fact, volumes in existence which contain his name, with dates of acquisition long subsequent to 1583.

[1] The marginal notes written by Dee in the MS. of this catalogue at Trinity College relate in some cases to this spoliation. One such, which occurs only once in the list of MSS., but very often indeed in that of the printed books, is 'J. Davis spoyle'. There are variants of this: e.g. on f. 3 of the MS. apropos of a work of Cusanus, 'Jo. Davis toke (w^{th} others) by violence out of my howse after my going', followed by the sentence, through which Dee has drawn a line, 'He hath got the Mathematicall part of Cusan.' Again, 'Jo. Davis sent me one volume home, the other lacketh.' 'Jo. Davis spoyle he hath not yet restored, as may appere by his letters.' Other like notes are 'Mr. Jak restored', 'Widdow Gardiner (or Gardiner's Widdow) restored'. Davis, Gardiner, and Jak are all mentioned in the Diary. In Oct. 1579 Davis figures as one of the persons who are continually being 'reconciled' to Dee: in Feb. 1583 he is one of a group who confer with Walsingham about the North-West Passage, and in March he goes off to Devonshire. Robert Gardiner in May 1582 has revelations vouchsafed to him about the philosopher's stone, and seems to have been in Dee's employment. In May 1590 Thomas Jack restores to Dee part of his 'magnes stone', and in July sends him back a hammer.

He may have parted with some of his treasures under stress of poverty during the years immediately preceding his death: his biographers say that he did: but the fact is not of great importance as regards our investigation. It is of more interest to learn what happened to the library when he was gone. Upon this some light is thrown by Archbishop Ussher's correspondence. Sir Henry Bourgchier, writing to Ussher in 1624 (sixteen years after Dee's death), speaks of 'Dee's library, which hath been long litigious, and by that means unsold' (Works, x| 227). In another letter (March 23, 1624–5) he says 'Vettius Valens in Greek is Mr. Selden's now, but was sometimes Dr. Dee's, but the rest of his books will be had very shortly, as many as are worth the having'. In October 1626 Dr. Bainbridge, Professor of Astronomy at Oxford, writes to the Archbishop: 'I am bold to enter your grace's bibliotheca with the humble request that I may have the names of such mathematical books as were Dee's.' He adds that he had seen in London a list of bare titles of Dee's books, and had been to Sir Robert Cotton, but his books were not yet ordered in a catalogue. From these passages I gather that litigation (consequent most likely on Dee's debts) had prevented the dispersion of the library until 1625 (probably February 162$\frac{5}{6}$), and that, when it was finally sold, Ussher and Cotton had made considerable purchases. Selden, we see, also bought at least one book. We find Dee books, too, in the collections of Digby, Ashmole, Savile (Sir Henry, who died before Dee): but there is a yet more important purchaser. The number of volumes from this source which have made their way to Corpus Christi College, Oxford, cannot fail to arrest attention: it constitutes by far the largest portion of Dee's library that is to be found in any one place.

Now a document exists (C.C.C., Oxford, MS. 280, p. 235) which shows that a number of Dee's MSS. were offered for sale to the College by Brian Twyne, the famous Oxford antiquary, who was a Fellow of the society. The purchase was declined, but the books were ultimately bequeathed by Twyne to the College.[1]

Twyne's special reason for buying the books I can only conjecture; but my conjecture takes this form. John Twyne, his grandfather, schoolmaster, mayor, and antiquarian, of Canterbury, had procured a good many MSS. from the dissolved library of St. Augustine's Abbey there, and these had afterwards come into Dee's hands: Brian Twyne knew this, and desired to recover and keep together his grandfather's collections. Certain it is that many of the Dee-Twyne-Corpus Christi books are from St. Augustine's,[2] less certain that they were owned by John Twyne. Brian Twyne, by the way, did not succeed in securing all the St. Augustine's MSS. that Dee owned: the most important one, the catalogue of the Abbey library, went to Ussher, and is now at Dublin. This is all that I can learn or guess as to the destinies of Dee's MSS. immediately after their dispersion. We find stray volumes making their way into the libraries of Pepys, Gale, Harley, and Sloane (one at Lambeth must have been bought by Bancroft before Dee's death). I have found but one for certain in a foreign library, and that belonged to Kenelm Digby. Two others, doubtful, are among Queen Christina's MSS. in the Vatican.

[1] The documents are as follows:

(a) An acknowledgment of £15 due to John White, bookseller in Little Britain, for MSS. bought by B. Twyne for the use of the President and Scholars of C. C. College in Oxon. to be paid before 14 March. Dated 22 Feb. 1625: signed Th. Amyan, President.

(b) A similar acknowledgment by the same of £3 6*s*. due to J. White. Dated 23 Feb. 1625.

(c) Notes by Twyne, viz.: 'I made a generall catalogue of these bookes at London, & when they were brought downe to y^e^ Coll: y^e^ company would not consent that any money shuld be layd out for them. Br. Twyne.

They were returned vppon y^e^ President.

They were parcell of Dr. Dees bookes & some of them very rare: & all worthy of y^e^ buyinge for y^e^ Coll: Library, if they had byn more.'

[2] Several entries, to which I can as yet find no corresponding extant MS., answer to entries in the St. Augustine's Catalogue, viz. Nos. 20, (59), 68, 107, 120, (138), 159, 171, (173). Of the extant MSS. sixteen can be traced to St. Augustine's.

Similarly one or two books may have come from the Austin Friars at York (see the catalogue in Fasciculus J. W. Clark dicatus), viz. Nos. 72, 75.

There is more, however, to be said about the growth of the collection. We have two lists of Dee's MSS. earlier than 1583. One (List A) is in a small notebook of his at Corpus Christi College, Oxford (MS. 191). This book contains:

1. List of MSS. owned by Dee in 1556.
2. List of MSS. borrowed by him from Peterhouse, Cambridge, to be returned in 1558.[1]
3. Contents of a MS. borrowed from Dr. Hathar.
4. Contents of a MS. borrowed from Queen's College, Oxford.
5. List of MSS. bought by him from John Leland's library in 1556, and from other sources.
6. Alchemical books read by him in 1556. This last item does not concern our present investigation.

The other (List B) is contained in the British Museum MS. Add. 35213 (formerly Phillipps 10701), to which Mr. J. P. Gilson and Mr. J. A. Herbert kindly directed my attention. It is the volume from which Mr. Gilson printed the very interesting catalogue of the MSS. of Long Harry Savile of

[1] Of the books (six in number) borrowed in 1556, five are still to be found in the catalogue of 1583. But we must not be hasty in accusing Dee of dishonesty. One of the borrowed MSS. (now Ashmole 424) has a note in Dee's hand to the effect that it was presented to him by Peterhouse in 1564 in exchange for a gift of printed books. Dee parted with it before his death: in 1606 a 'Dominus Hypsley' gave or sold it to P(atrick) Saunders. These same names occur in another of the books, Ashmole 1471, also with the date 1606.

Banke (d. 1617).[1] On ff. 1–4 it contains a roughly-written list of Dee's books, written and printed, in his autograph, the MSS. being entered on ff. 3 b and 4. This list cannot be far removed from A in date, but it is not clear to me whether it is a little the earlier or a little the later of the two. List A is, in any case, of greater importance, since it shows the sources whence some of Dee's MSS. came.

My chief object in this investigation is to identify the extant remains of Dee's manuscript library. With this in view I have examined a great many collections at London, Oxford, Cambridge, and elsewhere, as occasion offered: and not without success. Halliwell gave identifications (not always correct) of 22 MSS.: mine, certain and doubtful, number over 120. The means of identification vary. Sometimes we have Dee's signature in full; but often we have to depend on subsidiary marks: autograph notes are not uncommon; other books bear a △ or the astrological sign of Jupiter thrice repeated ♃♃♃, or a mark like a small ladder. Sometimes names of owners, like P. Saunders, whom we know to have been Dee's associates, combine with the contents of a MS. to ensure an identification. Often the contents of the MS. are the only guide. The list itself will afford the reader the means of judging of the weight of the evidence in each case.

I have collated Halliwell's text of O. 4. 20 with the MS. without finding any important differences. One feature, it is true, Halliwell has omitted to notice, and I cannot wholly explain. With few exceptions the entries of MSS. up to no. 67 have a T prefixed to them. The others have in most cases the letters Fr. These same letters, T and Fr., are prefixed to the entries of printed books, which of course fill the greatest part of the MS. For Fr. I can suggest an interpretation. At the very beginning of the volume is this note in Dee's hand, minutely written and somewhat injured:

[1] Trans. Bibliogr. Soc. vol. ix. 1907.

Andreas Fremonshemius | Birkmannorum Colo|niensium in Anglicos (?) | Distractor Librorum | siue Bibliopola . . . | exscripsit Mortlacii | ipsos omnes . . . | singulos libros | considerans.

The Fr. then may indicate Fremonshemius, the agent of the Birkmanns, who perhaps contemplated buying the library, but cannot ultimately have done so. Who T was I cannot now guess—not Twyne, at any rate. Happily the letters seem to have no value as indicating the present whereabouts of the books.

There is a second MS. of the catalogue of 1583, viz. Harley 1879: it is in the same hand as the Gale MS., but does not contain the letters T and Fr., nor any marginal notes by Dee. It has, however, prefixed to the catalogue on f. 19^{b} of the whole volume (which contains several catalogues) a note in Dee's hand (I think) which is not without interest, though it does not bear directly on our subject:

'In the Book of St. Aug^{ten} of Canterbury . being a large Foll. Book in an old red cover containing 385 leaves.

The beginning of the book is in a latter hand then most of the book and is an Exemplification and Confirmation of all the charters of the Kings proinde (?) to Ed. the sonn of Edward mad in the time Radulphi Abbatis.

In the first leaf of the old hand, after the former Exemplification, and vnder the charter of King Aethelbert and priueledg of St. Aug^{ten} anglorum apostoli, there is wrytten thes words following in a rud secretary hand

Liber Johannis Twyne de grayes Ine ex dono patris sui Johannis Twyne Teste Humfrido Jurdano Rectore ecclesie de Sturmowthe. per me John Twyne

The sam is wrytten in pag. of the sam book 212 over a deed of 3 roods and a half of land in Newland

This book is now in the hands of on Mr. Wilford of Kent an[d] old gentellman being in fette(r) layn a recusant.'

The book here described is doubtless the Cotton MS. Claud. D. x.

We find more of it in Clark (Wood's Life and Times, iv. 91, Oxf. Hist. Soc.). Brian Twyne (xvi. 407) cites: Thomas de Thanet (vixit 1272) Matricula scil. de variis chartis libertatibus ac privilegiis et possessionibus monasterii S. Aug. Cant. Init. In nomine domini J. C. notum sit omnibus tam praesentibus quam posteris quod ego Adhelbertus. It was given by John Twyne of Canterbury (but query of Gray's Inn : see above) to Thomas Smyth high-customer of London, and was afterwards in the hands of Richard James of C.C.C. Oxford : a thick 4to with a red cover.

The notes have some interest as recording the fact that John Twyne owned yet another St. Augustine's book.

Of the general character of the collection a few words must be said. It is in the main a special one, got together to assist Dee in his peculiar studies. Had it survived intact it would have been a first-class repository of mediaeval science books excluding medicine. Alchemy, astrology, astronomy, physics, geometry, optics, mathematics are all very copiously represented ; and Dee appears to have given special attention to collecting the works of two great writers, Roger Bacon and Raymund Lull. There is very little theology, and no ancient poetry. Among the classical MSS., one containing the versions of Plato's Phaedo and Meno, which was made in Sicily for Frederick IV—see Val. Rose's articles on it in Hermes, vol. i—is of special interest. History, British and English, is perhaps the subject best represented next to Natural Science. One Welsh MS. occurs.

Few of the MSS. which can be identified are very old. Perhaps the oldest is the Lauderdale Orosius, now at Helmingham, which is not in the catalogue. The Priscianus Lydus (A. 15), Isidore (94), Boethius (114), Aethicus (9,80) are of respectable antiquity.

I have not attempted to collect here notices of MSS. of Dee's own writing.

Of other MSS. which certainly or probably belonged to Dee, and do not occur in the Catalogue, I have noted the following in various collections: but I have little doubt that the list is incomplete.

Helmingham Hall, Suffolk. Lord Tollemache's Library.

The Lauderdale MS. of Alfred's Orosius is recorded to have belonged to Dee, but his name is not to be found in it.

Lambeth Library.

598, pt. III. Creton's poem on the deposition of Richard II has the note 'John Dee 1575 gave for this boke a boke of the foundation of (blank) in Oxfordshire'.

London, British Museum.

Sloane 2325, paper, cent. xv, ff. 33. Ioannes Dee 1557 beginning: Many a regyon & contre y haue y sowte.

Stowe 1070, paper, cent. xv–xvi, ff. 74.
Ioannes Dee.
Patricius Saunders 1606 (?)
G. Theophanes (= Tiffin) 1730.
R. Farmer.

It contains some fourteen alchemical tracts, of which the first are—

1. Tract. Nicholai Comitis.
2. Summa Platonis.
3. Speculum Alkimie Rog. Baconis.

And the last is: Dialogus inter Naturam et filium philosophie.

Oxford, Bodleian Library.

Ashmole 1451, pt. II, a paper MS. of 66 ff. in English and Latin, of alchemical tracts mostly by Brixham with marginalia by Dee.

1492, pt. I, a paper MS. of 6 ff. Io. Dee 1569. Opus expertum Parisiis . . . 1540.

Digby 192 (Raymund Lull) Ars demonstrativa; has a note of Dee's of 1576.

218, art. 3. Bacon's Opus Minus according to Twyne belonged to Dee.

Oxford, Corpus Christi College.

65. Tacuinus, from Twyne, has some notes of accounts, perhaps in Dee's hand.

101. Ptolemy, etc., has a note on f. 1 by Dee (?) and at the end a letter of Casimir of Poland to Cracow University.

127, 128. From Twyne; bound together: Bacon de erroribus medicorum and some alchemical tracts: may be Dee's, but have not his hand in them.

134. Life of St. Oswin; from Twyne: marked ♃; but belonged to Savile of Banke.

136. Collectanea Alchemica, Latin and English; belonged to Dee in 1559.

144. Astronomica, Alanus de Insula, G. Vinsauf: from Twyne. Came from Tynemouth Priory (as also 134).

148. Bacon's Greek Grammar: from Twyne.

152 has the ladder-mark and belonged to Dee: see Wood's Life and Times, iv. 266–7. It contains works of Nic. Kratzer.

153. Io. Dastin, etc.: from Twyne.

185 has the ladder-mark and apparently Dee's hand on the verso of a fragment of a will at the end. Contents alchemical.

191 is Dee's note-book: see above.

223 has the ladder-mark. Bacon, Urso, etc.

226. Marbod, etc., partly by the scribe of 227 (see above, no. 169): has a note 'Receyved at Manchester by Col. Arnold from Mistres Marie Nevel 1597 Dec. 17'.

237. Life of S. Katherine, etc., in English verse: has the ladder-mark.

238. Alchemical (Rosarium, Ortolanus, Morienus, etc.).

242. Lydgate's Fall of Princes: ladder-mark.

250. In Ciceronis Rhetorica, etc.: ladder-mark and ♃.

252. Romance of Marques: ladder-mark.

276 has ♃ ♃ ♃. Bernard de Gordonio.

278. Mesue, etc.: ladder-mark.

290. Aristotle's Metaphysics: ladder-mark.

ADDITIONAL NOTE

Dee's own account of the pillage of his library, and of its value, is to be found in the 'briefe note and abstract' of his career (drawn up in 1592) which is printed by Hearne in Joh. Glastoniensis (II. 500). Here, on p. 529, we read :—

> 'The divers bookes of my late library, printed & anciently written, bound & unbound, were in all near 4000: the fourth part of which were the written bookes.' He values them at £2,000. 'And, to make this valuation probable unto your Honour, behold yet here these four written bookes, one in Greek, this great volumn ; two in French ; and this in High Dutch. They cost me and my friends for me $533^{\text{lib.}}$ . . . What is then to be thought of the value of some one hundred of the best of all the other written bookes, of which some were the autographa of excellent & seldome heard-of Authors? The furniture of the said library was of my getting together in above 40 yeares time from divers places beyond the seas, & some by my great search and labour gotten here in England'. He then gives some account of his mathematical instruments, and of two collections of Irish and Welsh deeds (the latter, apparently, rescued from a half-ruined church). On p. 534 he values his lost books (above 500)—'I mean such as may be gotten for money'—at above £150.

I cannot tell what the four MSS. were which he produced as a sample ; but the price paid for them is enormous ; and the catalogue of the MSS. shows that in 1583 he did not possess much over 200 MSS., whereas here he reckons them at 1,000. I doubt if we can trust his figures ; but the extract deserves to be quoted, and the 'abstract' to be read.

THE SPANISH BOOKS IN THE LIBRARY OF SAMUEL PEPYS

THE SPANISH BOOKS IN THE LIBRARY OF SAMUEL PEPYS[1]

INTRODUCTION

THIS paper has grown out of the discussion which followed that read by Dr. Thomas before the Bibliographical Society on 'The Output of Spanish Books in the Sixteenth Century' (The Library, Fourth Series, vol. i, p. 93).

I do not know where Pepys learned his Spanish, but he was a competent scholar quite early in life, able both to read and to talk. By his generation the fear and hatred of Spain, dating from the days of the Armada, seem to have died away; perhaps the negotiations for a Spanish match when Charles I was Prince of Wales had taught Englishmen that Spaniards were not the sullen bigots they had formerly believed them to be; perhaps our nation has only room for one real enemy at a time, and this place was occupied successively by France and Holland. At any rate, two years after the Restoration, on the occasion of a famous affray between the retainers of the Spanish and French Ambassadors in London, Pepys is found to remark, 'Indeed we do naturally all love the Spanish, and hate the French'.[2]

Very shortly after the opening of the Diary, he tells us how 'This morning I lay long abed, and then to my office, where I read all the morning my Spanish book of Rome '.[1] It is not necessary to take up time in contrasting the lives of a civil servant then and now. This book is no. 157 of the list printed at the end of this paper—Las cosas maravillosas della Sancta Ciudad de Roma, a Spanish edition of the well-known Mirabilia urbis Romae, the stock guide-book for visitors to Rome, printed there for the use of Spanish pilgrims in 1651. It must have been one of the earliest Spanish acquisitions made by Pepys.

[2] Diary, 30 September 1661.

The following description of a translation does not necessarily prove that Pepys knew its original. One Sunday,[2] after a day of mixed experiences (he had talked with some of his great friends and official superiors, heard a sermon in the Royal Chapel at Whitehall, visited another church in Southwark but found it too hot to stay there, dined with his wife and father, looked in at a church again, and flirted with his old flame Betty Martin), he seems to have felt the need of quiet and solitude : so he took a boat all alone and went up-stream to Barn Elms (near Mortlake). There he landed and took a turn ; then ' to my boat again, and home, ' reading and making an end of the book I lately bought— ' a merry satyr, called " The Visions ", translated from ' Spanish by L'Estrange, wherein there are many very pretty ' things ; but the translation is, as to the rendering it into ' English expression, the best that ever I saw, it being ' impossible almost to conceive that it should be a translation'. This book was Roger L'Estrange's translation of The Visions of Quevedo ; I am the more doubtful if the judgement which I have just quoted was necessarily founded on a knowledge of the original, because there is not a copy of The Visions in Spanish in the library : no. 70 in my list is a different work.

I do, however, consider that the following passage [3] shows that Pepys not only possessed but read one serious Spanish work: 'This morning Mr. Sheres sent me, in two volumes, 'Mariana his History of Spaine, in Spanish, an excellent 'book, and I am much obliged for it to him'. I do not know whether this was a loan or a gift; if the latter, it affords an example of a practice of Pepys which has long been well known—that he was accustomed to expel from his library an early edition of a book when he afterwards acquired a later; for the edition of Mariana now in the library (no. 100 in my list) is dated 1678. It was an extraordinarily popular book in Spain, being reprinted over and over again in the seventeenth century; and at the end of that century (1699) was even translated into English.

We may find small corroborative pieces of evidence of Pepys's knowledge of the Spanish language in his occasional use of Spanish words or expressions, without a rendering, in the Diary. Sometimes, when recording somewhat delicate subjects, he tries to make his shorthand a little more difficult —or at any rate less intelligible to the casual reader—by intercalating a few words in a foreign language; for this purpose Spanish and French are most often employed, the former perhaps a little more frequently than the latter; Italian much less often. He mentions on one occasion[1] how in conversation his friend Mr. Creed told him 'that the Juego de Toros is a simple sport' (a delusion which obtains in the mind of every Englishman, I suppose, until he has learned to appreciate the wonderful skill required in all that take part in it), 'but the greatest in Spain'; on another,[2] Carteret is walking with Pepys in a garden and, suddenly angry with Sir William Penn, shakes his fist towards Penn's house and cries 'Guarda mi spada; for, by God, I may chance to keep him in Ireland, when he is there'. Such phrases were clearly in a language with which he was quite familiar.

He sometimes mentions his purchases of Spanish books. After a visit to Westminster,[1] ‘So home through Duck Lane ‘[the street we now know as “Little Britain”] to inquire ‘for some Spanish books, but found none that pleased me’. Again[2] ‘Staying a little while in Paul’s Churchyard, at the ‘foreign bookseller’s, looking over some Spanish books, and ‘with much ado keeping myself from laying out money there’. Again[3] ‘Through Bedlam, calling by the way at an old book- ‘seller’s, and there fell into looking over Spanish books and ‘pitched upon some, till I thought of my oath when I was ‘going to agree for them, and so with much ado got myself ‘out of the shop glad at my heart and so away’. He records in more than one passage the vows he made to abstain from wine and theatre-going, and I suppose he made himself similar promises not to spend money on books. Again[4] ‘Walked down as low as Duck Lane and enquired for some ‘Spanish books, and so back again’.

Of greater interest is the following entry[5]: ‘Thence to ‘Duck Lane and did overlook a great many of M. Fouquet’s ‘Library that a bookseller hath bought, and I did buy one ‘Spanish work: Los Illustres Varones.’ Lord Braybrooke, in his note on this passage, conjectured that the book might either be Los Claros Varones, by Fernando del Pulgar, historiographer to Ferdinand and Isabella, or the Varones ilustres del Nuevo Mundo of Fernando Pizarro y Orellana. It is, however, neither of these, but the Summa de Varones illustres of Juan de Sedeño (no. 166 of my list), which is still in the library in Nicolas Fouquet’s binding.

We can identify with equal certainty the subject of the next entry.[6] ‘By coach to see Roger Pepys at his lodgings, ‘ next door to Arundell House, a barber’s ; and there I did ‘ see a book, which my Lord Sandwich hath promised one ‘ to me of, “ A description of the Escuriall in Spaine,” which ‘ I have a great desire to have, though I took it for a finer ‘ book when he promised it me.’ I do not know whether Pepys wheedled this copy out of his cousin, or whether Lord Sandwich fulfilled his promise : but he obtained the book (no. 65 in my list), which is the Descripcion breve del Monasterio de S. Lorenzo el Real del Escorial, by Francisco de los Santos. The work was published in 1657, but the copy in the Pepysian Library is of the 1667 edition, which accords precisely with the time when he saw it in Roger’s possession.

Before I come to speak of the printed Spanish books which form the subject of this paper, I should mention the comparatively small quantity of Spanish manuscript material in the library. The most important item is what is familiarly called ‘ The Armada Book ’ ; or, as Pepys himself describes it in his catalogue, ‘ The original Libro de Cargos (as to ‘ provisions and munition) of the Proveedor-General of the ‘ Spanish Armada, 1588 ’. It consists of a large number of single or double sheets bound together ; each is headed with the name of one of the ships of the Armada, and the captain’s name ; below follows the exact quantity of provisions aboard each boat—the amount of biscuit, wine, bacon, rice, pease, vinegar, oil, water, cheese, tunny, &c., with a list of various utensils also aboard, such as pots, dishes, and measures. These sheets are contained in a vellum binding ; through the whole, including the covers, is a large circular hole, about three-quarters of an inch in diameter—the remains, I suppose, of a primitive system of filing, and then used so that the book could hang conveniently on a peg aboard ship, easy to take down for reference. On the front cover is the title of the volume in a tall uncial : ‘ Libro ‘ de Cargos : de Bastimentos y municiones que se hazen a los ‘ Cappitanes y m͠res y Patrones de las Naves y otros navios ‘ que sirven en el Armada de su M͠G^{D} Este Anno De ‘ MDLXXXVII Siendo Proveedor della Bernabe de Pedroso.’ We do not know anything of the history of the volume; but I think we can guess it. Pepys was a passionate collector of ‘ curiosities ’, particularly of any connected with naval history; and just as he would sometimes order a book for his private library and have it put down to the Admiralty account (‘ I think I will let the King pay for this ’ is the way he puts it), so I doubt not that the Libro de Cargos had come ashore from one of the captured ships of the Armada, and been preserved at the Admiralty; found there by Pepys, he thought that it was of no immediate and practical value to the business of the office at the moment, and would figure better on his own select shelves than lost among the dry papers of a Government Department.

I come now to a volume of which the interest is not in the first instance Spanish, but musical. No. 2591 in the library is ‘ Songs and other Compositions, Light, Grave, and Sacred, ‘ for a Single Voice. Adjusted to the particular Compass of ‘ mine; with a Thorough-Base on ye Ghitarr by Cesare ‘ Morelli ’. This is a most handsome book, written in a fine large hand (not Pepys’s own) both words and music, and bound in black morocco, partly blind-tooled and partly in gilt tooling and red morocco inlaid; it contains songs of very various kinds (e.g. ‘ Beauty retire ’, ‘ Amanti, fuggite ’, ‘ Les cocus sont bons ’, ‘ To be or not to be ’, and most of the choral parts of the Book of Common Prayer). On leaf 13 comes a Spanish song called ‘ Dodina ’. After an introductory refrain ‘ Dodina, Dodinette ’, it runs:

‘ Adam! Samson! Salomon!
Dios nos libre de Mugeres!
bellas, o no vellas;
mal podemos star sin ellas.

Mas despues de Las aver visto ; perdonad nos Jesu Christo ! '

I have not been able to identify this song ; but the thought is not uncommon. My friend Mr. Salvador de Madariaga points out to me in a collection[1] of Spanish popular songs the following verse of the same or rather later date :

' La mujer engañò a Adan, a David y à Salomón, a Holofernes capitán
y al valeroso Sansón.'[2]

The same volume has two additional songs written, apparently as an afterthought, on the final fly-leaves, and not included in the ' Table ' of Contents. The first is in Latin, the second a piece of Spanish verse :

' Lo del Cielo es lo que dura ; que lo que en la tierra està,
muy presto se acabara.

[2] The collocation of these names as victims of feminine wiles is almost a commonplace in mediaeval literature. In a poem 'De proprietate feminarum,' attributed by Professor Carlo Pascal (Letteratura Latina Medievale, Catania, 1909, p. 108) without too much certainty to Adam of Barking, a thirteenth-century monk of Sherborne, we find the couplet :

' Adam Sansonem Petrum David et Salomonem Femina devicit. Quis modo tutus erit ? ' and as proverbs or parts of proverbs (Jakob Werner, Lateinische Sprichwörter und Sinnsprüche des Mittelalters, Heidelberg, 1912, p. 2) :

' et Salomonem,
Vergilium summum, Aristotelem arte profundum
Femina decepit : quis nunc evadere posset ? ' and better still :

' Adam, Sampsonem, Lot, David, si Salomonem
Femina decepit, quis modo tutus erit ? '

All, I think, must come ultimately from a sentence of St. Jerome's : ' Nec ' sub eodem tecto cum muliere manseris, nec in praeterita castitate confidas, ' quia nec tu Sansone fortior nec Solomone sapientior,' and still more from another of St. Augustine's : ' Davidem, Samsonem et Salamonem Satan ' decepit, Christum tentavit : quis modo tutus erit ? '

Los tesoros y Riqueza, y los mas altos estados,
en tierra, humo, y pobreza, seran muy presto tornados ;
que quien pone sus cuydados en lo mudabile de acà,
muy presto se acabara.

Triste deleyte y pequeño, es el placer deste mundo ;
pues va a dar en el profundo,
en un punto con su Dueño.
Al principio es halagueño ;
mas al fin amargara,
muy presto se acabara.

Tan presto passa y fenece, toda la honra mundana, como una sombra liviana ;
que luego desaparece.
al que mayor honra ofrece, mas vano lo dexara,
muy presto se acabara.'

This poem, which is not without merit, if somewhat gloomy in temperament, comes from the collection made by Christobal Salvador (Letras contra el abuso de los juramentos) which is no. 161 in my list, except that Pepys has copied lo for le in the last line but one.

Turning now to the printed books, fortune has preserved to us one interesting record of the way in which some of them were acquired. I have mentioned above the occasions recorded in the Diary when Pepys bought Spanish books ; later in his life he used to commission friends who were travelling abroad to buy books for him and send or bring them home. We know for instance that in 1699 and 1700, John Jackson, Pepys's favourite nephew and heir, was travelling in Europe and was obeying his uncle's request to buy books; but though we know he was in Spain in December 1700,[1] I have no definite evidence that he bought anything there for the library—no new books, certainly, for none have so late a date as this.

Nearly twenty years before, however, Pepys had sent other commissions; and we are fortunate enough to possess in the Bodleian Library[2] a bill for some books bought at Seville on his account. It is endorsed 'Mr. Fowler's Bill', and is dated from Seville on the first of January 1683/4: I have no clue to Mr. Fowler's identity—he is not any of the Fowlers mentioned in the Diary—but he was clearly a friend travelling in Spain who had been requested to make some purchases for the library.[3] The bill is as follows:

[1] On 3 December 1700 Pepys was writing to Jackson at Cadiz, bidding him go to Madrid in time to see the entry of the new king, Philip V.

[2] Rawlinson MS. A. 190, f. 146.

[3] On 26 January 166$\frac{8}{9}$ we similarly find Mr. W. Batelier commissioned to buy some books for Pepys in France.

Mr. Fowler may have bought, as I have suggested, the Novelas Ejemplares of Cervantes and the Novelas Amorosas of Doña Maria de Zayas. On the other hand the price (about 5*s.*) is perhaps a little low for two such books, and as the Novelas of Doña Maria de Zayas are divided into a first and second part, these alone may be intended. On the other hand the price is too high to have been paid for a mere couple of chap-books. The last entry clearly means that a few pages, perhaps a gathering, were missing from the copy of Ribadeneira's Flos Sanctorum, and had to be supplied in order to complete it. I am sorry to say that the Pepysian Library does not possess the pack of cards which Mr. Fowler bought for his friend.

The prices are reckoned in 'pieces of eight' (piezas de á ocho) and silver reals (reales de plata). Reckoning the latter at 5*d.* or double the copper real, and therefore the former at 3*s.* 4*d.*, the ten books cost about £4 10*s.*, which seems a very fair price.

The list printed at the end of this paper contains all the books in the library in the Spanish language,[1] and thus includes several printed outside Spain: some in the Low Countries, two in Lisbon[2] (one in Spanish and one in Latin), and one or two in France and England respectively.

The Spanish version of the Book of Common Prayer (no. 91) has a puzzling title-page: Augusta Trinobantum must be a pedantic Latin form of 'London', but I confess that the decipherment of the date, CIC.ICI.IXIIV, is beyond me: perhaps it is a mistake for CIƆ. IƆC. XXIIV (=1623). This was the year when Charles I, then Prince of Wales, was in Spain attempting to negotiate a match with the Infanta. Pepys copied out[3] on the fly-leaves at the beginning of his volume a letter, dated 26 July 1623, from Bishop Williams of Lincoln, the Lord Keeper, to the Duke of Buckingham, who was with the Prince in Spain, in which he says he is sending two copies of it, more to follow if required, and that the translation was made by an ex-Dominican, 'a zealous Protestant and a good Scholler, and I have Secured 'him to our Church with a benefice and a good Prebend'.

[3] From the collection of State Papers and Letters called Cabala, sive Scrinia Sacra, published in 1651 and republished in 1663 and 1691.

I would then draw especial attention to the two volumes in the library marked 1545 and 1553 respectively. Although my list contains 185 different works, they are contained in a very much less number of volumes; for the former of these two is composed of no fewer than 70 ballads bound together, of which the great majority were printed at Seville about 1680[1]; the latter 26 comedies, most of them on moral and religious subjects, by the best seventeenth-century Spanish dramatists. None of these comedies unfortunately bears a date or the name of the printer or the place of printing. Just as Pepys performed so great a service to popular English literature by his collection of broadside English ballads in five folio volumes, and his bound volumes of chap-books, so he did what he could, at a distance, to preserve specimens of popular Spanish literature; and of quite a number of these Spanish ballads I have been able to find no trace in the books of reference available to me. I should also imagine that the two printed Papal Bulls of 1684 (nos. 42 and 43 of my list) might be hard to find elsewhere.[2]

[1] I may perhaps call especial attention to no. 59—Lope Falcon's three ballads, Curioso Tratado de las Ordenanzas del Tabaco.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE BIBLIOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY'S TRANSACTIONS. NO. 3.

A LIST OF THE INCUNABULA COLLECTED BY GEORGE DUNN ARRANGED TO ILLUSTRATE THE HISTORY OF PRINTING

INTRODUCTION

AT a meeting of the Council of the Bibliographical Society on 9 July 1923 Mr. Stephen Gaselee reported that Mr. Jenkinson had prepared a list of the fifteenth-century books collected by Mr. George Dunn, as sold at Sotheby's (1913–17[1]), arranged in what has come to be known as 'Proctor order', i.e. according to country, town, and printer in the order in which printing was begun, the entries of the books from each press being kept as closely as possible in their chronological sequence. The Council resolved that Mr. Jenkinson should be asked to allow the list to be printed as one of the Supplements to the Bibliographical Society's Transactions, both as a tribute to Mr. Dunn and for its own interest. One of the secretaries happened to be going to Cambridge towards the end of the month, and thus had the privilege of seeing Mr. Jenkinson on the last day but one that he was on duty at the University Library (29 July). The mission was unexpectedly successful, for not only was the manuscript of the Dunn list handed over without demur, but a promise was given that a similarly arranged list of all the incunabula in the University Library should also be printed, a promise which, it is good to know, is likely to bear fruit. While these negotiations were in progress the Librarian was called away for a moment, and his visitor then heard for the first time of the impending need for an operation. A word of sympathy was answered with great cheerfulness, and so with the manuscript of the list of Mr. Dunn's books in his hand he took his leave of the most lovable of librarians. Naturally the list has assumed a new importance since Mr. Jenkinson's death. Some readers of this note will remember that it was with a similar list, A Classified Index of the Fifteenth-Century Books in the De Meyer Collection sold at Ghent, November 1869, that Henry Bradshaw, in April 1870, had inaugurated the 'natural history' method in the description of books interesting chiefly for the place they hold in the history of printing. Mr. Jenkinson was Bradshaw's disciple, perhaps the only one who lived on to our own day who caught from personal intercourse with him his special interest in the books of the Netherlands and the early Cologne presses, and went on working on his lines for the rest of his life and passing on his enthusiasm to others.

[1] Part I, February 1913 (£11,030 18*s.*); Part II, February 1914 (£8,268 0*s.* 6*d.*); Part IV, December 1915 (£1,355 2*s.* 6*d.*); Part III, November 1917 (£11,737 4*s.* 6*d.*). Part IV was sold before Part III. The four sales comprised altogether 4,627 lots. References to these are given in the List in round brackets. The references preceding these are to 'Hain'.

The compilation of the present list was, no doubt, inspired by Bradshaw's example, but it is no mere repetition by Mr. Jenkinson of what Bradshaw had done for a small foreign collection of incunabula, from which the Cambridge University Library had made numerous purchases. Mr. Dunn's collection was built up with Bradshaw's methods and ideals kept steadily in view; the five hundred Woolley Photographs which he had made with his own hands from his own books testify to its importance. Thus, when the collection was unhappily dispersed, to assemble a worthy record of it was the most graceful tribute which an elder disciple of Bradshaw's could pay to the memory of a younger one, who was in a sense also his own pupil. The work which Mr. Dunn achieved is not on a level with Proctor's, but it complements it, and has its own importance, and it is an honour to the Bibliographical Society to have been allowed to print for its members the memorial which Francis Jenkinson spent his leisure in raising to George Dunn.

As the list was handed over by Mr. Jenkinson it contained notes of the books from the Dunn collection bought by the Cambridge University Library (U.L.C.), by Mr. Charles Thomas Stanford (C.T.-C.), and Sir William Osler. Mr. Dunn was a frequent visitor to the British Museum, and it was thought that it would be his wish that the list should show the considerable purchases the Department of Printed Books [1] made at the four sales, more particularly of French books. The initials B.M. denote these, while S.G. mark the purchases of Mr. Gaselee, and T.C.C. a few books acquired by Trinity College. With time it would have been possible largely to add to these notes; perhaps (with the help of the numbers attached to the entries) it may be possible to do something more later on, but it was desired to issue the list without delay and also without changing its character by too many additions. For the latter reason a couple of entries in which Mr. Jenkinson followed Proctor, without taking note of later theories, have not been altered.

Mr. Dunn has left pleasant memories behind him. At the British Museum there are specially recalled various consultations on knotty problems, his jocose offers to sell members of the staff a hundred or so of sheep from his Northumberland estates, his appearing one Christmas Eve laden with four largish incunables as a present to the Museum—but his friendliness with his fellow bookmen was not sufficiently intimate to make possible any memoir that could compete with the excellent obituary notice (here and there, perhaps, a little high-pitched) which appeared in The Times. Permission has therefore been obtained to prefix a reprint of this to [1] By the generosity of Mr. F. W. Bourdillon in standing aside the Department of Manuscripts also secured the extraordinarily interesting 'Chancun de Willame', one of Mr. Dunn's greatest finds.

Mr. Jenkinson's list. Of Mr. Jenkinson himself members have been offered in The Library a note of the brief commemoration by Mr. Gaselee at our October meeting, together with a reduced copy of the photogravure distributed to subscribers to his portrait by Mr. Sargent. But a notice which appeared, over the initials H. F. S. in the Cambridge Review for 26 October is such a vivid and truthful memory-sketch, that leave has been obtained from the editor and the writer (the Rev. H. F. Stewart, D.D.) to print this also, in the certainty that members of the society will be glad to have it permanently preserved in one of our books.

FRANCIS JENKINSON. 1853–1923[1]

A PAGE of print about Francis Jenkinson will not be of much help to those who did not know him, and it is not needed by those who did. Still, a close intimacy of over forty years entitles me to pay public tribute to the beloved master, the incomparable friend, a man who came, many of us thought, as near to moral and intellectual perfection as is possible on earth.

He was not a creative genius ; but his manifold and always first-class achievement, his immediate response to every kind of beauty, indicate an intelligence of extraordinary power and a very high artistic gift.

Though there were of course wide gaps in his learning—when men called him learned, he said ‘ Rubbish ’—his interests were amazing both in range and depth ; and, when he settled down to a particular subject, he mastered it with such rapidity, ease, and completeness that his knowledge seemed instinctive rather than acquired. I do not think he ‘ read ’ much at college, but he was admittedly one of the finest classical scholars of his time. The late J. M. Image told me that Jenkinson's work as a lad in the Trinity scholarship examination was the wonder of the examiners. What it was in maturity may be seen in his Lecture Room Fair Copies. Long after he had given up teaching classics his fine Latinity enabled him to produce a trustworthy text of that curious farrago, the Hisperica famina (for an account of which the reader must go to Prothero's Memoir of Henry Bradshaw). With native and Cambridge scrupulousness he refrained then (1908) from hazarding a translation or an exposition; but I have reason to think that, had he lived, he would have thrown new light on this bit of mediaeval darkness.

He might have gone far in mathematics, and he always kindled to a pretty problem. Pascal's Mystical Hexagram gave him special delight.

He was a first-rate naturalist. Indeed, it was his scientific bent, plus his sense of beauty, aided by unusually acute eyesight, that led him later to his supremacy in palaeography and bibliography. It is significant that his first University post (1878) was in the Museum of Zoology, which has certainly no reason to regret his connexion with it.

The story of Jenkinson and the flies illustrates as well as anything the versatility, swiftness, and intuitive character of his genius. Moths had attracted him from early childhood; he had worked hard at Microlepidoptera with E. Meyrick at Marlborough, but his serious attention was first turned towards Diptera by Dr. D. Sharp in 1900. He at once began to catch, on the window-panes of his house, in his little Brookside garden, in Wiltshire, in Morayshire, in Sussex, species new to Cambridge, new to Britain, new to science, and he became within a few years a dipterologist second to none. His vast collection is now in the Museum. Laymen were often amused by his pocket-loads of pill-boxes and the mantis-like agility with which he captured flies to fill them; but the smile turned to amazement at the skill with which the tiniest creatures were pinned and set, and to reverence at the delight and wonder with which unsuspected beauties were discovered under the microscope.

He knew all birds and their notes and the times of their coming and going. The second (possibly the first) recorded occurrence of the Killdeer Plover in Britain was due to his observation; he guessed its identity by its note.[1] He loved to listen to the voices of migrants in the darkness, and to hear the snipe drum over the Fen.

He was a good botanist and an expert gardener, watching over his own plants with paternal and individual attention, and waging war on weeds, not only at home, but wherever he walked.

He was a sound antiquary, as his papers for the Cambridge Antiquarian Society testify; and the Museum of Archaeology in Downing Street is rich with the spoils of his diggings round Cambridge, conducted in company with Professor Hughes and Baron A. von Hügel, which he recalled with the same glee as the moth hunts of his undergraduate days on the Broads, on Wicken Fen, and in the New Forest with A. B. Farn.

I have said that he was sensitive to every kind of beauty. It was a treat to visit the Turner Water-Colours under his wing; good drawing delighted him, from the Anglo-Saxon manuscripts in Corpus to the current number of Punch. 'How these fellows can draw,' he said each week. A fine sunset—there was one after his own heart on the day he died—moved him, in his own words, 'like an orchestra', and that is saying a great deal. For, without being a performer or a trained musician, he had a profound knowledge and an ecstatic appreciation of all good music. There was something in Wagner, though he admitted his power, which made him shudder—the sensuous appeal, the unwillingness to come to a close. And he frankly did not understand the licence of these latter days and the stuff which, to him, was 'more like chemistry than art'. But from the Virginals' Book to the Wasps of Vaughan-Williams he took his pleasure royally, in a large field, and he made you share in it. To go to a concert with him was to be transported into another sphere. Renowned musicians admitted him to their counsels and prized his judgement.

But his workshop was the Library and his life's business was the care of books. Never did they have a more jealous guardian. His interest in them as objects of scientific study was kindled by Henry Bradshaw in the early 'eighties, when he was assistant tutor at Trinity. It was then, in 1883, that he began the valuable collection of books printed in Cambridge, which he afterwards gave to the University. He made such rapid progress in bibliography that when Bradshaw died, in February 1886, Jenkinson was already recognized by many as his proper successor. But he would not hear of standing, not that he was particularly attached to the task of lecturing and of correcting compositions, but because he was practically pledged to support Robertson-Smith. When his own turn came in 1889, he was further qualified for the office by his work upon Bradshaw's remains—notes for Mr. Wordsworth's edition of the Sarum Breviary and the collecting of Bradshaw's fugitive papers into one volume.

His thirty-four years at the Library made him master of the written and the printed book—few men in England had a better ' feel ' for script and date, and none a surer knowledge of types—but it left him no leisure to write, even if he wanted to. Like Bradshaw, his hand is most clearly to be traced in other men's works, in Copinger, in Proctor, in Sayle; and he was happy that it should be so, provided that the work was done and well done, for he was entirely devoid of even the most harmless vanity and of any touch of self-assertion.

If readers of the Review want to know what he was like as Librarian, let them recall any occasion when they had a service or a favour to ask of him; let them sound the Staff, for each of whom he had a real personal concern; let them listen to what foreign visitors say of their host. Two French impressions must be quoted, one from M. Henri Omont, Keeper of the MSS. in Paris, the other from M. Paul Desjardins, of Pontigny. 'Les trop rares occasions qu'il m'a été données 'de rencontrer M. Jenkinson m'avaient fait apprécier la 'noblesse de son caractère et la sûreté de son érudition. Quelle 'perte pour votre bibliothèque qu'il dirigeait en digne suc'cesseur et continuateur du regretté Henry Bradshaw! Les 'deux noms de ces deux grands bibliothécaires resteront à 'jamais étroitement unis', and, 'De M. Jenkinson je garde 'une image rapide mais une idée distincte et durable. J'admire 'cet air d'innocence vénérable des hommes qui se sont usés 'à purger la science d'erreurs et d'à peu près. Je sais aussi 'que ce scrupuleux était un cœur profond.' Jenkinson, for all his modesty, would not have refused to be saluted by strangers as the heir of Bradshaw, as an exact scholar and a man of feeling.

It would be idle to say that the great improvement in the organization of the Library effected during his reign was due to his unaided effort. That was, he always maintained, the work of H. G. Aldis and his loyal staff—of Aldis, his dear friend and secretary, whose death in 1919 gave him a shock from which I do not think he ever recovered. But the work could not have been done without the co-operation and control of the librarian, and, as I have said, when administration was needed, he rose to the occasion. Such seemed to offer itself with the War. Jenkinson at once foresaw the immense literature that was going to spring up, and he determined to collect it as it grew. He got into touch with Government departments and with soldiers upon every front. Whenever he read in the newspaper a letter from a resident abroad or a neutral favourable to our cause—in Latin America, Spain, Scandinavia—Jenkinson wrote to him and enlisted his services to procure pamphlets, manifestos, journals, and the like. The result is a mass of material which, though looked askant at by some who thought nothing less than manuscripts and incunabula worthy of the Librarian's attention, has notably enhanced the historical value of the great collection over which he presided and to which he was entirely devoted. If he ever came near a quarrel with any one, it was in 1901 when, rightly or wrongly, he thought the interests of his beloved library were being attacked ; and he wrote a pungent fly-sheet (20 November). But however acute his feelings then, they softened with time, and it may safely be affirmed that he died in love and charity with all men.

This brings me on to the hallowed ground of his personal character. He was the most lovable of men. Seldom angry himself and never without cause, no one could be angry with him. He was stern enough with wrongdoing or wilful stupidity, but once a fault confessed or repented, it was as though it had never been. Minor lapses, such as the mishandling of a book (which threatened to attain majority if the book was a rare one) or the wrong phrasing of a musical passage, were corrected with a smile and a gesture that forbade grudging and smoothed ruffled feathers. It must be said that he was extremely fastidious and rarely suffered an error of taste to pass unchallenged ; but I do not believe he was ever consciously guilty of an unkind thought or action. Indeed unconscious simplicity, the innocence noted by the observant Frenchman, was what most distinguished him—the childlike character blessed in the Gospel. So his religion was simple, but profound and real. Never given to anxious speculation, he was content to trust where he could not be sure. His tender reverence for deep things is best known to those who have knelt beside him, or heard him read prayers, or watched his face during the singing of a hymn he liked—and there were some he did not like at all.

His acts of charity were countless, and it might perhaps be thought indiscriminate. No beggar was ever turned away by him unheard. He had a number of friends out of doors whose needs he was glad to relieve, but whose presence he sometimes fetched a circuit to avoid, lest he should have to hurt their feelings. He would never pass a child in trouble (children adored him) without trying to comfort it. One of the last things I saw him do was to bestow a cake of very especial coal-tar soap on a young tatterdemalion with an irritable skin.

To descend to a lower level. He was a natural Conservative. At one time he came under the spell of Mr. Gladstone, but not for long. He did not favour Liberal politics, though he had many staunch friends among advanced Liberals. In academic matters he scrutinized very narrowly any project of reform, but he was by no means an habitual non-placet.

He had his prejudices and his antipathies in the animal and vegetable kingdoms and elsewhere—the sparrow (or avian rat), Agrostis stolonifera (a peculiarly wicked squitch), blue-bottles and other bad flies, Irish rebels, the Siegfried Idyll, the Natural Law in the Spiritual World, Mill's Logic, The Epic of Hades, 'last evening', 'very pleased', 'quite all right', 'Foreword', 'Offprint', and all offences against pure English.

No one could be wittier upon occasion, no one had a more refreshing sense of humour. His reading aloud of R. Bridges's Epitaph on a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal or Walter Headlam's Private Oration is something to remember. He was not a raconteur, but he treasured a good story, and he wrote from his bed in hospital last month to the Sunday Times, correcting a wrong rendering of a 'Hicks of Bodmin'.

He was, I suppose, what you call insular; he spoke no foreign language, though, of course, he had a working knowledge of many and could generally understand his continental guests. Tricks of French idiom amused him and he took peculiar pleasure in the noble appearance of a page of Spanish print. But circumstances rather than desire confined his movements to this country (including the islands, for Scilly was at one time his second home), and his visits abroad, to Switzerland or the Riviera, recalled with vividness and gratitude, could be counted on one hand.

Despite a poor physique he loved sport and an out-of-door life. In earlier days he had been a fisherman and a good shot with gun and rifle ; he used to play tennis, with more zeal perhaps than success, in the Clare and Trinity Court, and since leaving College he practically lived in his garden when not in the Library.

There is no doubt that for all the losses and sorrows which a man who reaches seventy years must endure, his life was a happy one, as it always is to those whose whole conversation is with things lovely and of good report. ‘ It was a comfort and delight to his friends ’, one of them writes, and Cambridge will greatly miss the youthful figure in the grey hat, slipping along Trumpington Street and King’s Parade, or threading his way home to Chaucer Road from the Library across the Fen, with many pauses, to catch a fly, to watch a bird, to pull up a weed, to talk with one of his numerous protégés, to collect bits of silver paper (a war habit), to stuff his pockets with oak leaves for his garden.

True, we have Sargent’s masterpiece to remind us of him ; but not even Sargent’s pencil can convey all his charm and goodness. The thought that a generation will soon arise which can know him only by his picture teaches us how much more rich we are than they. For we at least know, and they can never know, what the world has lost with him and what a light has gone out in our sky.

GEORGE DUNN[1]

A CORRESPONDENT writes:

On Tuesday of last week there died suddenly from pneumonia, at the age of forty-seven, a man whose remarkable gifts and attainments deserve more than the few paragraphs of record that have appeared in the public press. Mr. George Dunn, of Woolley Hall, near Maidenhead, was a member of a well-known Northumbrian Catholic family. He was educated at Beaumont College, Windsor, and at Stonyhurst, and was afterwards called to the Bar, though he never practised as a barrister. Inheriting from his father, the late George Dunn, of Bath House, Newcastle, large estates both in Northumberland and Berkshire, together with sufficient revenues, he was able to indulge the tastes of a scholar and collector of early printed books, mediaeval bindings, manuscripts, old silver, and old clocks, as well as those of a sportsman and keen angler, an astronomer and a student of forestry. Of none of these things was he content to have a superficial knowledge. Indeed, it may be said that he handled nothing without mastering it completely.

The incunabula of which he formed so splendid a collection were for the most part scarce volumes, little known or without the printer's names. He cared far less for the books already prized and described and understood by collectors, as these present few of the problems which it was his delight to solve, often at the expense of whole nights as well as days passed in his study. There was a time when he used to take the books that baffled his researches to Robert Proctor, of the British Museum, whose erudition usually enabled him to clear up any difficulty. After Proctor's untimely death in 1903, Mr. Dunn was compelled to pursue his investigations unaided, with the result that he became the best authority on the subject in England, and was appealed to for information by the officials of the British Museum and other great libraries. He succeeded Proctor as anonymous editor of the Type Facsimile Society's portfolios, and in 1899 and the following years he issued privately a series of full-sized photographs, taken by himself from the pages of upwards of four hundred fifteenth-century books in his collection, none of which had been previously reproduced. These 'Woolley photographs' were distributed, through a bookseller, with a printed summary (1905), and beyond their name, which conveyed little to the uninitiated, there was nothing to indicate their source or their editor.

[1] Reprinted by permission from The Times for Monday, 11 March 1912.

It is probable that Mr. Dunn's collection of mediaeval bindings is the best now existing in private hands. Here again the attraction was the solving of problems as to the various ancient centres of binding by the comparison and classification of the stamps and the methods of sewing and of shaping the boards. In this way the discoveries of Mr. W. H. J. Weale, Mr. Gordon Duff, and Mr. Strickland Gibson were usefully supplemented.

Mr. Dunn made an extensive collection of English legal manuscripts and documents, but the manuscripts for which he cared most were those of monastic provenance not later in date than the thirteenth century. He used to show favoured friends exquisitely written books of this period and earlier, bearing the library marks of St. Augustine's, Canterbury, of the Greyfriars of York, of Reading Abbey, Byland, Rievaulx, Cîteaux, Vézelay, and other famous monasteries. At a sale at Christie's the acumen which had previously led to his purchase for about £20 at Sotheby's of a complete production of the almost mythical press of Coster of Haarlem, Gutenberg's rival as the inventor of the art of printing, secured him for the same trifling sum the unique manuscript of the hitherto unknown 'Chancun de Willame'. This prize he immediately transcribed himself and had two hundred copies handsomely printed. Many of these were then distributed anonymously through the bookseller already referred to. The poem, 3,553 lines in length, was hailed by the astonished scholars of Europe and America as rivalling in importance the 'Chanson de Roland', though they had no means of divining to what good fairy they and the world of letters were indebted for the gift, which this time did not even bear the cryptic name of Woolley.

It will be seen that Mr. Dunn was at as much pains to avoid fame as others are to seek it. The telescope at Woolley Hall was one of the finest in the world, and he himself took what were at the time the largest photographs ever taken of celestial bodies. Some of these photographs were shown at a meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, and a vote of thanks was passed to 'the anonymous exhibitor', whose identity was left a mystery. An expert with all manner of tools, he understood perfectly the varying mechanism of his eighty or more valuable old clocks, and invented a new kind of escapement.

With these and other interests and pursuits, George Dunn lived a tranquil and sequestered life, unmarried and alone in a large house, where he occasionally entertained one or other of the small band of intimates to whom he was devoted and by whom he was beloved. Neatly dressed, shy, spare, and rather below the middle height, he might sometimes be seen entering the British Museum or the Bodleian Library, or quietly turning over the book treasures in the London sale-rooms. But he never attended meetings or went into society, or gave the smallest encouragement to mere acquaintances. He was a Conservative in politics, a model landlord, and a loyal son of the Catholic Church. In an age of advertisement his charities and benefactions shared with the Woolley photographs, the 'Chancun de Willame', and the photographs of the stars the quality of anonymity.

He was buried on Saturday at St. Thomas's, Fulham, the Requiem Mass being said by his brother, Mgr. Canon Dunn.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ENGLISH CHARACTER-BOOKS

PREFACE

AN effort has been made to make this list of characters published in the seventeenth century, their main period, fairly complete. Samuel Butler's characters are excluded by their date of publication, 1759. As the Controversial Characters are mainly of historical and not of literary interest they have been classed separately. The appendix includes books, other than character-books, which contain characters.

I should be grateful for any addition to this list, or for any correction.

I desire to offer my most sincere thanks to all who have helped me in my work; to Dr. R. B. McKerrow for his continual kindness in discussing difficulties with me as they arose; to Dr. W. W. Greg for his extremely kind help with the form of the work; to the Staff of the British Museum Reading Room for their unfailing kindness, especially to Mr. A. Esdaile who helped me with many puzzles, and to Mr. A. I. Ellis, to whose interest and help I owe very much; to the Staff of the Bodleian Library where, particularly through Mr. Strickland Gibson, my work was facilitated in every possible way.

NOTES: 1. The get-up of this book is particularly neat. Each page is set within double rules and the ornaments are attractive.

2. Section title 2 is of the same setting as section title 1, substituting 'Second' for 'First', 'Vices' for 'Vertues', and using a different ornament.

3. The running title names the character on each page and gives also in the inner corner the word 'Char.' on the rectos, and 'Lib. 1' [2] on the versos. The 'Char.' and 'Lib.' are printed on the blank pages, which are also numbered and ruled. A 1 blank is signed A.

4. Each character begins on a recto, with the result that a number of pages, 19 in all, are left blank.

5. The first Bodl. copy is in the original vellum binding. It is merely trimmed, and the page measures 16 × 11 cm. There are numerous marginal references in MS.

6. The B.M. copy lacks A1, M8.

Bodl. (8°. Rawl. 597; Douce H. 78). B.M. (12352. c. 22).

NOTES: 1. The Bodleian copy transfers gathering ¶ 8 to the end of the book. G 7–8, I 1 and ¶ 7, 8 are missing, G 7–8 and ¶ 7 being supplied in MS. Small stubs remain of ¶ 7, 8. It agrees in all other details with the B.M. copy.

2. no. 32 is signed ‘D. B.’ and no. 33 is claimed by ‘I. Cocke’ in the preface to the second ed. of Stephens's Characters, 1615.

3. No. 70, ‘An excellent Actor’, probably contains a clue to the authorship of this group of 32 characters. It is a sympathetic picture of an actor, most likely of Richard Burbage, whose love of painting is noted; but it contains a disconnected passage directly and abusively attacking a ‘Characterist’, who had called the players ‘Rogues’. This writer was John Stephens, who had published, probably early in 1615, an unfriendly sketch of ‘A common Player’ in his ‘Characters’. A reply to this seems immediately to have been forthcoming in no. 70. Stephens seems to have retorted by rushing out at once a second edition (also in 1615) of his Characters in which he used the prefatory matter for an elaborate attack upon ‘the actors’ friend’ for his ‘scurrilous retort’. He called his victim an ‘unknown botcher’, but clearly hinted that he was connected with the stage. Stephens answered the players' charge against him by declaring he had not meant to insult the London companies. The actors' friend omitted the passage in the next edition of the Overburian Characters [1616], and it was never reprinted. The passage is, 'Therefore the imitating Characterist was extreame idle in calling them Rogues. His Muse it seemes, with all his loud invocation, could not be wak't to light him a snuffe to read the Statute: for I would let his malicious ignorance understand, that Rogues are not to be imploide as maine ornaments to his Maiesties Reuels; but the itch of bestriding the Presse, or getting vp on this wodden Pacolet, hath defiled more innocent paper thē ever did Laxative Physicke: yet is their invention such tyred stuffe, that like Kentish Post-horse they can not go beyond their ordinary stage, should you flea them.'

The point of interest in this active controversy is that the 'actors' friend', the leader of one side, was probably the author of the last 32 characters. It was first suggested that this was John Webster by Mr. H. Dugdale Sykes in Notes and Queries, 11 Ser., vol. viii, Sept. 20th, 27th, Oct. 4th, 11th, 1913, and vol. xi, Ap. 24th, May 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 1915. Baron A. F. Bourgeois independently made the same suggestion N. and Q., 11 Ser., vol. x, July 4th, 1914. Both writers give parallel passages between Webster's works and the 32 characters. B.M. (12270. a. 21.) [83] The true character of a Dunce.

NOTES: 1. (j) is generally a line by line and page by page reprint of (i), the process being interrupted by the addition of 'A Dunce' on G 3–5 in (j), which caused G 6^v–I 8^v to be line by line only.

2. The 'Dunce' and the 'Essay' are by John Donne, though no acknowledgement is made, here, or in any subsequent edition. They were reprinted as Donne's by his son in 1652. [See Appendix under Donne, 'Paradoxes . . .' 1652.]

3. The B.M. copy has a portrait of Overbury inserted facing the title. This is a copy from the picture in the Bodleian gallery, to right: oval in rect. frame. 'Aetatis suae 32' in upper part of oval. S. P. monogram, sc. [S. de Passe]. Line $3\frac{1}{16} \times 2\frac{17}{32}$ in. 5 lines of verse below. 'Laur: Lisle excud.'

4. The title-page in the B.M. copy has been ruled in red ink, enclosing it within double rules, and following lines 1–6 and 9 by double rules and l. 10 by a triple rule. The title has been mended, in the (?) 18th century, and the ruling on the mend suggests that the extra ruling was thus not contemporary.

5. A few odd sentences and parts of sentences in MS. from four or five characters are bound in on a fly-leaf in 'Loiola' 1648 (Bodl. 8°. L. 4. Art. Bs). The characters thus used which are distinguishable are A very Woman, A Dunce, A Button-maker, A meere-Petyfogger.

Notes: 1. a. The characters are misnumbered in the text and in the Table by misprinting nos. 34–54 as 33–53, and no. 50 in the text as 43.

b. No. 19 is entitled (in the text) 'An idle Gallant', in the Bodl. copy.

2. The watermark is in an unusual position in A and K which each consist of 4 leaves + 2 leaves, for it occurs on A 2 and on K 3, at the top outer margins.

3. In C there is a watermark near the top outer margin on C 7, C 8 and on C 12. In the Bodl. copy it is not on C 12.

Collation: 12°, A^6 B–I^{12} K^6, 108 leaves, unnumbered. A 1 title, v. blank. A 2–3^v 'To the Reader' (as in (a)). A 4–6 'Contents'. A 6^v blank. B–K 5 text. K 5^v–6 blank.

54 characters.

Notes: 1. There is some rearrangement in the order of the characters, the chief change being that 'An Attorney' (no. 8) is moved to the back of the book (no. 47).

2. The nos. 8 and 29 are omitted from the Table and the text, and both present the characters as 55.

3. Other errors in numeration are, in the text, misprinting 8–27 as 9–28, 28–53 as 30–55 [misprinting 39 as 37, 49 as 47, 51 as 50, 52 as 32].

4. 'A Herald' ('32' in the text) is omitted from the Table.

5. Note 2 under (a) applies to A and K in (b).

Collation: 12°, A^6 B–I^{12} K^6 [not signing F 4], 108 leaves unnumbered. A 1 title, v. blank. A 2–3^v 'To the Reader' [as in (a)]. A 4–6 'Contents'. A 6^v blank. B–K 5 text. K 5^v–6 blank.

Catchwords: B–C, as I–K, men FINIS.

54 characters, as in (b).

Notes: 1. a. A 5^v and A 6 are transposed in the 3 copies seen.

b. A 6 is missing in the second B.M. copy.

2. The relations of (a), (b), and (c) in regard to setting are curious. They are separate editions, but in (b) and (c) 9 formes and 13 pages are of the same setting, and the setting of 12 pages of (a) persists in (b). A summary of the conclusions come to on these points follows.

[(a), (b), (c) = the three editions: a bracket between two editions represents an identity of setting of the two it connects.]

The 'irregular' settings in (a), (b), (c).

In A. There are two settings of A, A 2, A 3^v, A 4, A 4^v, A 5, A 5^v, A 6, one of (a) and one of (b) and (c). But of A 2^v, A 3 there is one setting of (c) and one of (b) and (a).

NOTE: In the Bodl. copy there is one setting of A 3^v in (a) and (c).

In E. There is one setting of the following pages in (b) and (c), E 12^v, E 3, E 10^v, E 5, E 8^v. The remaining pages of the outer forme are of three settings in the three editions.

In H. There are three settings of 19 pages in (a), (b), (c), but of 6 pages there are two settings, one of (c), and one of (a) and (b), namely of H 2^v, H 3, H 6^v, H 7 and of H 4, H 6.

In I. There is one setting of half of the inner forme of (a), (b), and (c), namely of I 4, 9^v, 5^v, 8, 6, 7^v in (b) and (c) corresponding to I 6, 11^v, 7^v, 10, 8, 9^v in (a). But in I 9^v of (b) and (c) compared with I 11^v of (a), the rule and the title of 'no. 52' and the two lines following are of two settings, one for (a) and one for (b) and (c). In the other half of this forme there are two settings, one of (a) and one of (b) and (c).

In K. K 3–5 in (b) and K 3^v–5^v in (a) corresponded, allowing for a regular divergence of 3 lines on each page [21 lines in a page]. There is one setting of (a) and (b) of these pages with the exception of K 4 in (b). The details are:

(b) K 3 { Lines 1–3 are set up independently of (a).
 ,, 4–21 are of the same setting as lines 1–18 of K 3^v in (a).
K 3^v { ,, 1–3 ,, ,, ,, ,, 19–21 ,, K 3^v ,,
 ,, 4–21 ,, ,, ,, ,, 1–18 ,, K 4 ,,
K 4^v { ,, 1–3 ,, ,, ,, ,, 19–21 ,, K 4^v ,,
 ,, 4–21 ,, ,, ,, ,, 1–18 ,, K 5 ,,
K 5 { ,, 1–3 ,, ,, ,, ,, 19–21 ,, K 5 ,, ,, 4–19 ,, ,, ,, ,, 1–16 ,, K 5^v ,,

3. The order of the editions (a), (b), (c).

It is readily apparent that (a) stands by itself, and that (b) and (c) form a separate group. About a dozen striking additions and three omissions could be quoted to show the improvements made in (b) and (c) over (a).

Further examination shows that (b) is the second edition, and (c) the third. Three examples of the evidence follow:

(1) There are a few places in (c) in which there are a group of careless spellings, e.g. on C 5^{v}–6, otherwise the tendency is for B's errors in spelling and punctuation to be corrected in (c), e.g. H 10, 'Aturney', 'Lawer' in (b) become 'Atturney', 'Lawyer' in (c).

(2) On H 6 in (b) and H 8 in (a) occurs the phrase 'of | Preachers Lecturers,': in (c) a comma is inserted after 'Preachers', improving the sense.

(3) A Pot-Poet. On F 2 in (a) 'His verses, . . . or the firing of a house furnish him with argument, . . . and Melpomine cryes, Fire, Fire. He is a man now much imploy'd in commendations of our Navy, and a bit-|ter inveigher against the Spaniard'.

In (b), on E 10. 'His verses . . . or the burning of a house . . . and Melpomine cryes Fire, Fire, His other Poems are but Briefs in Rime, and like the poore Greekes collections to redeeme from captivity. He is a man now much imploy'd in commendations-| of our Navy, and a bit|ter inveigher.'

The words in italic were added to (b): they neatly make the transition—which before was abrupt—between the private and public subjects of the poems of the Pot-Poet. In l. 8 (b) misprinted a comma for a period after 'Fire'. In l. 14 (b) wrongly transferred the hyphen from bit-|ter to the end of 'commendations' which occurred over 'bit'| in the line above.

(c) reprinted (b), and corrected the hyphen in l. 14, though not the comma in l. 8.

A Criticke. 74. A Serjeant or Catch-pole. 75. An ordinarie honest fellow. 76. An University Dunne. 77. A staied Man.

NOTES: 1. The Table names 76 characters, the title 'Herald' being omitted, it is no. 68 in the text.

2. The numbering of the characters in the text is erratic, omitting nos. 5, 6, 14, 19, 25, misprinting nos. 7–12 as 6–11, 13 as 11, 15–18 as 13–16, 59 as 49, 74 as 73.

3. Seven catchwords are misprinted, 5 A as 4 A, 10. as 9., 19. A as 6. A, 35 A as 34. A, 56. A as 42. A, 49. A as 59. A, 61. as 61. A.

Collation: 12°, A^6 B–N^{12}, 150 leaves unnumbered. A 1 title, v. blank. A 2–3 'To the Reader' [as in (a)]. A 3^v blank. A 4–6 Contents. A 6^v blank. B–N 12 text. N 12^v blank.

Catchwords, as in (e).

77 characters, as in (e).

NOTES: 1. (f) is, generally, a line by line and page by page reprint of (e). Some particular differences may be noted:

a. The same errors as in (e) in the numbering of the characters, additionally misprinting 5 as 4, omitting 7, and having 13, 18 here correct.

b. The same errors in catchwords, additionally misprinting 6. A as 4. A, 8. A as 6. A, 34. A as A, 39. A as 19. A, and having 19. A correct.

c. On B 7, (f) inserts a line omitted by (e) ('the Churches Hierarchy'), and omits two lines at the bottom of the page, which are duly found at the top of B 7^v.

d. Additions are made to improve the text on 5 pages, e.g. on B 7^{v}, (f) adds 'by whom' in 'The Lawier is the onely man he hinders, by whom he is spited for taking up quarrels'.

e. A new character begins on F 5, 3 lines lower than usual. From F 6, 3 lines are omitted, namely 'And very scandalous hee is in his authoritie for no sin almost which he will not commit'. These lines are printed in italic in (e), but in roman in (a), (b), (c). This omission was probably the author's correction. Was there harm in the reflection upon the office of the Upstart Knight? Did Earle intend to make the omission in 1628, and was his direction to do so misunderstood by the printer who in 1629 in (e) made the sentence only more noticeable by italics? The sentence was not reprinted until Arber printed his edition of Earle from (b). In 1811 Bliss affected to quote the omitted sentence in a note, but he gives 'This authority of his is that club which keeps them under as his dogs hereafter. First edit.' This note is repeated by Morley 1891, and in the Temple Classics edition 1899. The sentence Bliss quotes occurs in none of the editions I have seen. Could it have been in the missing fourth edition?

f. The text of I 11^{v} and I 12 are transposed.

Catchwords: B–C, invective M–N, be FINIS.

78 characters, 1–77 as in (e), no. 78 is 'A Suspitious or Jealous Man'.

NOTES: 1. This is the first edition to contain the full set of characters.

2. 'A Herald' is inserted in the Table (no. 68) for the first time since (a).

3. The mistakes in numeration and catchwords in (f) are corrected: one fresh error, no. 5 misprinted as 3.

4. (g) is reprinted from (f), generally line by line and page by page except in three places [I 4^{v}–12, K^{v}–11, L 9–M 3 in (f)], where space had been 'wasted' in (f) [on I 4^{v}, K 2, L 10]. It seems as if the printer of (g) wanted to get his text into the same number of leaves—i.e. to N 12—and filling these spaces two leaves were left at the end, into which the additional character was put.

5. K 2—no. 52—has as a catchword, '52 A at'. Only 'at' is required.

Catchwords: B–C, come D–E, XXXIX. A [XLI. A] FINIS.

NOTES: 1. This edition is reprinted from (c), following such misprints as 'Sporza' (p. 76, H^v in (c)), 'and it' (p. 102, K 2 in (c)), 'legends Popery' (p. 100, I 12 in (c), cf. K 2 in (a)).

2. a. The list of Contents corrects (c)'s numeration, but omits 'An Herald' from the list as (c) does.

b. The characters are misnumbered in the text, misprinting 23 as 24, 36 as 35 [in the B.M. copy], 39 as 41, 40–6 as 41–7, 47 as 49, 48–50 as 49–51.

3. The spelling and punctuation are generally corrected and 'modernized'.

4. The Bodl. copy has one error in numeration, 9 being omitted. The page in the Wood copy is 82 × 136 mm.

54 characters, as in (c).

5. The catchword of D–E in the Bodl. copy is 'XL. A'.

Catchwords: B–C, may F–G, tune FINIS.

74 characters, 1–54 as in (1650 (a)), 55–74 from (e) [note 1].

NOTES: 1. Nos. 55–74 are added from (e), in the order in which they are added there, omitting 'a meere Gull' [36], 'an affected man' [44], and 'a poore man' [67].

2. D 8^{v}, F 11^{v} are paged (64, 118) in the inner margin.

3. The characters are misnumbered as 77 both in the table and in the text, misprinting 44–51 as 45–52, 56–7 as 57–8, 58–72 as 60–74, 73–4 as 76–7 in the table, and in the text as in (a), except that 39 is correct and 51 is misprinted as 52, then as in the table.

4. William Shears's connexion with the Character-Writings is interesting. He published these two editions [(a), (b)] of Earle in 1650, going back to what he may have taken as the first edition or perhaps as early a one as he could find. Compare, too, his edition of Overbury in 1655, which is a reissue of the 12th edition of 1626.

5. This edition was reprinted in 1786.

8°. This is a reissue of (k), with a new title and reprinted preliminaries, omitting Blount's address.

NOTE: The taste of the eighteenth century is reflected in the title and in certain changes made in the names of the characters, e.g. no. 52 becomes 'The precise Female Hypocrite', no. 30, 'A Gallant, or Petit-Maitre'.

Manuscripts.

[No attempt has been made to list transcripts of single characters.]

Hunter MS. no. 130 in Durham Cathedral Library.

An account of this is given by the Rev. J. T. Fowler in Notes and Queries, 4th ser., vols. 8 and 9, 1871–2. He says the MS. contains 46 characters, of which 3 differ considerably from their printed versions, namely 'A Gallant', 'A Herald', and 'A Baker'. These 3 are printed from the MS. in (q), (r), (s).

The Bright MS.

Dr. Bliss copied 3 characters from this into his own copy of his edition of Earle in 1811 (now in the Bodleian), namely 'A Gallant', a 'Weak man', and a 'Sceptick in religion'. I have not yet been able to trace this MS.

B.M. Stowe 962.

'A collection of poetry of the time of James I and Charles I. Paper: ff. 254, XVIIth century. Quarto.'

On ff. 21–9 occur 13 of Earle's characters, regarded in the MS. as Donne's and followed in this by the catalogue of the Stowe MSS., for fol. 19 is headed 'Characters of John Done', his 'Dunce' follows, and then the pieces by Earle which on fol. 31, in the list of contents headed 'Characters', are given as Donne's. The B.M. catalogue now describes the 13 characters as Earle's. They are, 1, 2, 3, 5, 7, 8, 69, 9, 54, 11, 12, 13, 15.

NOTE: There are many slight discrepancies and errors between the text given in this MS. and that of (a) or (b). So that, as regards Earle, Prof. Grierson's verdict on the Donne portion, 'inaccurate', also holds true. He dates the MS. 'not before 1630'.

1 character. A Projector in generall.

NOTES: 1. The 'Projector in generall' (B 2–C 4) is a lively character of the type. It is followed by 9 short sketches of 'particular' projectors, too slight to be reckoned as characters. They are divided into Wine-, Tobacco-, Salt-, Ragge-, Card-, Butter-, Soap-, Coale- and the Corporation Projectors.

2. A 1 is missing in the B.M. copy.

3. In the first Bodl. copy the title begins 'MACHIAVELS | GHOST. | As he lately appeared to' | . . . then as above, from the same setting, substituting J for I in 'PROJECTORS'.

26 characters of (1658) 3 (40 and 56), 4 (57), 6 (18), 8 (38), 9 (15), 10 (16), 11 (9), 13 (8), 16 (53), 22 (10), 23 (11), 25 (13), 27 (21), 28 (12), 30 (34), 31 (19), 35 (22), 37 (45), 38 (35), 43 (30), 50 (41), 57 (33), 58 (29), 65 (52), 68 (31), 69 (32).

NOTES: 1. No. [1] discusses the relation of characters to 'Pourtracts' and Essays.

2. The characters are each a page in length, and the number of the page, printed in the middle, serves as the number of the character. In nos. 48, 62 in the B.M. copy the end of the character is printed in smaller type to get it into the page.

3. The 'Postscript' states, 'I pass then my Thoughts through finer and finer Sieves of first Writing, then Printing, and lastly Reprinting them before I have done with them'. This is quite true. Flecknoe is very fond of rewriting his characters. Those reprinted here are mostly shortened.

4. 'Of an Epicure' (K 4) had been first printed in 1669 ('Epigrams of all Sorts', B 5^v), and reprinted in 1670 ('Epigrams of all Sorts . . .', D 7).

Catchwords: [of central section] A–B, utque E–F, coelum

The central section (A–C^8 D^2) contains Ludovici Molinaei Morum Exemplar, with the head-title, 'Ludovici Molinaei | Morum Exemplar | Seu | Characteres'.

Notes: 1. The following leaves are partly uncut at the top, C 2–3, D 2–3 in the Du Moulin section, B 1–4, B 2–3, D 2–3, I 2–3 in the final section.

2. The printing is poor.

3. The top corner of F 1^v in the final section came apart from the top corner of F 1^r (about 33 × 25 mm.), thus showing that the paper was double. It is now replaced. This seems unusual in paper of such apparently poor quality.

Catchwords: A 4^v–5, 2. The FINIS. [B 3.]

NOTES: 1. The text is in black letter.

2. The author is probably Lawrence Price. This book is classified as his in the D. N. B.

3. This 'character' is regular in form, though long-winded and didactic in outlook. It concludes with 'Solomon, his commendation of a vertuous woman: in the last chap. of the Prov. from verse 10 to the end'.

4. The accents frequent in black letter on the first letter of the double e, ée, occur here. They seem to be without significance.

5. 'Fears' is substituted for 'feareth' in the quotation from Proverbs in l. 23 of the title. Line 22 ends at 'vain,' and l. 23 at 'be'.

NOTES: The story of this book seems to be a story of cancels. It is in the main a translation from Earle, and in part from Overbury and from Flecknoe. Some of the cancels may have been connected with the late addition of an original character-sketch, for example, compare nos. 7–9.

1. Leaves which appear to be cancels.

*7 leaves. The first three are loose, and pasted 1 on to 2, 2 on to 3, 3 on to 4.
* 4 and 9 are conjugate. * 7 and 8 seem to have been conjugate, for the large clear watermarks in their top outer corners fit into one another and the chain lines correspond, but the leaves are here separated, 8 being attached to the stub conjugate with 7.
* 5–6. On 6^v the catchword is 'Pre-', which was intended to be followed by * 7, 'Preface', but these leaves containing a character-sketch (probably original) were removed from the preliminaries and transferred to the end of the book.

A. It is most likely that the 15 leaves in A are represented by the formula $12-3+6$. The last 6 leaves form a group by structure, and also by subject, for they contain 3 characters, nos. 7, 8, 9, for which I have not yet found a source.
A 1 is 'loose' and pasted on to A 2.
Stubs conjugate with A 2–3 are pasted on to A 9^v. A 3 is not signed.
A 6 is pasted to a stub conjugate with A 7, and in the B.M. copy is also pasted inside a strip of paper which encloses A 7 as well. A 7 is a cancel. Its paper is thicker than that of A 6, and it is unsigned.

B. B 1–4 are separate leaves. B 1 is a cancel. It is pasted to a stub conjugate with B 12, and it is also slightly attached to A 15. In the Bodl. copy B 1 seems to be barely pasted only to A 15.
B 2 is pasted to a stub conjugate with B 9. On to this stub is pasted a stub conjugate with B 10, and on to this, in the Bodl. copy, is pasted a stub conjugate with B 12.
B 3 is pasted to B 4.
B 4 is pasted to B 5. It is misnumbered 30 for 31.
B 11 is missing in the B.M copy, but an MS. transcript from the Bodl. copy is supplied. B 11, in the Bodl. copy, is pasted on to B 10.

C. C 8 seems a cancel. It is of 'thick' paper, and is pasted to the stub conjugate with C 5.
C 10 similarly is of 'thick' paper, and is pasted to the stub conjugate with C 3. In the Bodl. copy traces of the end-letters of the page that was removed remain on the stub, and these correspond with the end-letters of the cancel-page now in position. Similar traces are to be found on the stubs pasted on to G 4^v and K 3.

D. D 3 is a cancel. Its paper is 'thick' and it is pasted to D 4.
A stub conjugate with D 10 is pasted on to D 11^v. In the Bodl. copy this stub is pasted on to D 3.
D 11 is a cancel. Its paper is 'thick', and it is pasted on to a stub conjugate with D 2.

E. E 3 is a cancel. It has 23 instead of the usual 24 lines, and it is pasted to a stub conjugate with D 10.

G. G 1 is pasted to G 2, so neatly, in both copies, that they appear on the recto to be conjugate.
On G 1 are pasted the two stubs conjugate with G 11 and 12. Both these leaves are of 'thick' paper.
G 4 is a cancel. It is pasted to the stub of G 9. In the Bodl. copy a few traces of the end-letters of the original page remain on the stub, and these seem to agree with the corresponding letters of the cancel page, see lines 1–3.

H. H 1 is pasted to a stub conjugate with H 11. In the Bodl. copy the stub conjugate with H 10 is also attached to H 1.

H 2 is pasted to a stub conjugate with H 10 in the B.M. copy. In the Bod. copy H 2 is pasted in, barely, between H 1^{v} and H 3.

H 3 and 4 are conjugate with H 8 and 7.

H 5 and 6 are conjugate. The stitching is between them.

H 9 is pasted on to H 8^{v}.

H 12 is 'loose', and in the B.M. copy it is partly stuck on to I 1. It has 23 lines. In the Bodl. copy it is stuck on to H 11^{v}.

I. I 2, in the B.M. copy is pasted to a strip of paper which also encloses I 11. In the Bodl. copy, I 2 is stuck on to I 3. The stub conjugate with I 3 is pasted to I 11^{v}, which has thus two stubs visible on its verso in the B.M. copy, but one stub in the Bodl. copy.

I 5 is a cancel. It has a watermark at its top inner margin, and in the B.M. copy it is pasted to a stub conjugate with I 7, and to this stub is pasted a second stub conjugate with I 8. In the Bodl. copy it is pasted to a stub conjugate with I 8. In the B.M. copy, I 6 is pasted to I 7. It is not signed, and seems a cancel. The stitching is between I 5–6. In the Bodl. copy I 6 is pasted to a stub conjugate with I 7.

I 10 is 'loose', and pasted on to I 11.

I 11 is a cancel. I 11^{v} is set lower than usual. It is attached to I 3 and 2, as stated above, in the B.M. copy. It is attached to I 3 in the Bodl. copy.

K. On K 3 are 4 stubs; the outer (4th) belongs to K 10, the third to K 9, the second to K 8, the first to K 7. In the B.M. copy these 4 stubs are visible on K 3^{v}. In the Bodl. copy 2 are visible, though 4 are found on examination.

Traces of end-letters in lines 1–8 clearly show that the cancel-page and the original K 3^{v} corresponded, at least for these 8 lines. K 4, 5, 6 are three separate leaves, and pasted, K 4 on K 5, K 5 on K 6, and K 6 on K 7.

K 3–6 appear to be cancels.

L. L 1 is a cancel. It is pasted to the stub conjugate with L 12. It is not signed; its page number (241) is on the inner margin; its printing is perhaps especially careless.

L 4 is a cancel. It is pasted to the stub conjugate with L 9. In the B.M. copy some of the end-letters of the cancelled page are left on the stub, 6 being readable.

M. M 6–7. In the B.M. copy these two separate leaves are pasted to a strip of paper. The join between M 6^{v}–7 is almost imperceptible, but the paper of M 6 is the thicker, and shows it to be the cancel.

In the Bodl. copy, M 6 is pasted on to the stub conjugate with M 7; M 7 has a 'shrivelled' look, and is the thicker.

2. Title-cancels and slip-cancels.

Four titles were changed, probably by the printer, who pasted slips over the original titles, and three blank slips were used to cancel portions of the text. The British Museum and the Bodleian authorities kindly had these lifted from their copies, with the following results:

(1) The slip 'Un Cicaneur' was pasted over 'Un Procureur' (A 9, p. 17).

(2 and 3) The slip 'Vn Certain Escolier' was pasted over 'Le Jeune Gentilhomme de l'Université'. This had a second slip of blank paper under the printed slip, to conceal the longer title it was wished to cancel.

(4) The slip 'Un Valet de Chambre debauché' was pasted over 'V^{n} ^{v}alet de Chambı"ċ', in the B.M. copy; the printing of the original title was normal in the Bodl. copy (C. 9, p. 65).

(5) A blank slip occurred at the top of D 4 (p. 79). The character beginning on this page was set too low, and, in the B.M. copy, the slip covered a rule which did not seem to be needed in this copy. But in the Bodl. copy the slip covered the words 'tourne nous nous enpouvons rire, sans choger la nature'. These words are unconnected with the previous character.

(6 and 7) The slip 'Paphlagonie' was pasted over 'Normandie' in 'Le Cadet de Normandie'. A second blank slip was used here also (D 10^v, p. 92).

(8) A blank slip was pasted over the last three lines on I 9^v (p. 210).

(9) A blank slip was pasted over the last paragraph (of 5 lines) of 'Vn Operateur' (K 1^v, p. 218).

[NOTE: In the Bodl. copy, the covering slips have been pasted now underneath the original title with due notification. In the B.M. copy these slips have been left floating, attached at one end, in their original position.

3. In the Bodl. copy I 5–7 and L 5–7 are curiously related.

L 5, beginning at l. 4, reprints I 5 (l. 2).
L 5^v reprints I 5^v.
L 6 reprints the first 17 lines of I 6.
L 6^v. The last 10 lines on this page are reprinted from the last 10 of I 6^v.
L 7 is of the same setting as I 7.

4. Both copies are in the original vellum binding.

5. Authorship.

'Mons. [James] Dymocke Anglois' [d. ? 1718, Catholic divine] states 'j'ay escrit cette petite piece', to defend the English nation from recent aspersions on their character and wit. 'Je presente', he continues, 'une Geographie . . . du petit monde nouvellement decouvert par les Voyageurs de nostre nation. Dans ces cartes Micro-cosmographiques, ils pourront voir la facilité du genie Anglois dans une Raillerie Spirituelle. . . .' This sentence might be taken to refer to Earle's 'Microcosmographie', though Dymocke nowhere suggests that 'Le Vice Ridicule' is a translation, nor does he give any indication of his other sources, Overbury and Flecknoe. He rather implies the work is his own, 'je n'ay visé a aucun en particulier', and 'mon style est extrement court & precis, l'ayant ainssy choisy comme le plus propre pour mon dessein'.

ANALYSIS OF THE SOURCES.

52 from Earle. The number of the character corresponding in Earle is enclosed in a bracket.

Catchword: A–B, Bodkin FINIS. [B 7^v.] FINIS. [B 8.]

NOTE: When I first saw this book only the cancel title was visible. But this felt 'thick', and examination showed it was pasted to another page. The Bodleian authorities kindly had these separated and the original title was disclosed. The title accurately describes what was effectively accomplished in the text.

Catchwords: A–B, To D–E, Never- THE END.

1 character. A Jacobite.

NOTES: 1. A hostile account of a Jacobite, 'whatever they approve is bad, and whatever they disapprove is Good'.

2. It is probable that some matter was suppressed, for:
a. D and E are in a type larger than the preceding leaves.
b. The paper of E is different from the rest of the book.

3. The catchword on B 3^v is wrong, 'there' [might].

4. On C 3 and v. the matter does not fill the pages, being 4 lines short at the bottom of C 3, and 1 line at the top of C 3^v.

5. An inverted comma is used for an apostrophe fairly frequently from B 2 onwards, e. g. Devil‘s, cry‘d (p. 12), allow‘d 'em (p. 21).

6. W is used in sheets D and E in roman.

7. Through the kindness of Mr. Guppy who sent me a full collation of the John Rylands copy, I am able to state that this appears to agree with the Museum and Bodleian and Trinity College, Dublin, copies except in two points:
a. The tenth line of the title ends 'omnia dicta. Cato.' [dicta being misprinted for dici.]
b. The sixth line of the title ends with a full stop: 'Distinguiſh'd.'

8. E 2 is missing in B.M., Bodl., and T.C.D. copies.

[within double rules] THE | CHARACTER | OF A | Williamite: Being the Reverſe of a late unlicens'd Treatiſe, | ENTITULED, | The Character of a JACOBITE, | By what Name or Title ſoever Dignify'd or | Diſtinguiſh'd; | Written by a Perſon of Quality. || Non abolet prorſus mors facta illuſtria, virtus | Vivit apud ſuperos, & habet ſua praemia . . . | Mart. || LONDON, | Printed for Richard Baldwin in Warwick-Lane near | the Oxford Arms, 1690. 1690

Collation: 4°, A–C^4 D^2 E^2, 16 leaves, the text paged 1–28 [omitting 23–4, and thus misprinting 23–8 as 25–30]. A 1 title, v. blank. A 2–E 1^v text. E 2 blank.

Catchwords: A–B, dif- D–E, well THE END

8 characters.

1. A Williamite in general.
2. " " the House of Commons.
3. " " the Country.
4. " " among the Clergy.
5. The Dignify'd Williamite among the Clergy.
6. The Williamite Citizen.
7. A " Souldier.
8. A " Sailor.

NOTES: 1. It is obvious that this character and the 'Jacobite' are connected. The aim of both pieces was to present the Williamites favourably. The hostile account of a 'Jacobite' serves, then, as the starting-point for this sympathetic sketch of a Williamite, 'having nothing in Nature that hates him besides the Devil and a Jacobite'. The printer was probably the same for both characters, for the type is similar, the paper identical, and the unusual make-up of the two books alike.

2. Matter was probably suppressed here too, but the irregularity is even less discreetly concealed, for:
a. C 2–4, D 2^v–E 1 and v. are in larger type than the rest.
b. There is a gap in the sense between C 4^v and D 1.
It may also be noted that C 4^v is paged 22, D 1, 25: C 4^v alone has no catchword in this book: the first word of the sentence at the top of D 1 is not indented, and the sentence seems to be the end of a paragraph.

3. There are some turned commas again, in this book.

4. W occurs throughout the larger type.

NOTES: 1. A 1 was pasted on the cover as an end-paper. The book is now re-bound and A 1 freed.

2. About six of these characters are mainly political in interest, but the others are of general types, mostly base ; the term 'Whig' in the titles of these has no more political significance than 'contemptible'.

[1] A Puritane. [2] A Round-head [verse]. [3] An Holy Sister [verse].

NOTES: 1. I owe to Miss A. E. Parsons the information that according to the catalogue of the Wrenn Library in the University of Texas this pamphlet was attributed to William Chamberlayne of Shaftesbury by the late Mr. George Aitken, but that his notes on its history have been mislaid.

It does not seem likely that the three pieces in the pamphlet were written by one author. But, as happened often in these seventeenth-century pamphlets, the contents were a compilation from various unacknowledged sources. Here the joins seem obvious. For the prose piece concludes 'And thus having shewn you K. James his opinion of these kind of creatures, . . . in Prose; please you to see the character of them, though under another notion, in Verse; it is, as followeth'. Then comes 'The Round-Heads Character' [printed in italic], which is more vigorously written than the feeble 'Holy-Sister' which the (?) compiler 'adjoines' 'because you seldome or neuer can meet a Puritan or a Round-Head without a holy sister'.

2. The brief character of a 'Puritane' is constructed by the writer of the prose piece 'out of K. James' as he tells us himself. He quotes the basis of his sketch ['. . . these Puritanes, the very pests', etc.] from Book II of the Basilicon Doron [from the 1603 Edinburgh edition or subsequently]. King James's words, of course, do not form a character as they stand.

3. The 'Holy-Sister' is reprinted in 1682, vide under 'Wit and Loyalty Reviv'd . . .' pp. 149–50.

4. The piece is dated by Thomason 'Aug: 23'.

The volume contains 3 characters, which form the greater part of the three satires it consists of.

[1] A Puritan: (so nicknamed: but indeed a sound Protestant.)
[2] A Protestant: (so will the Formalist be called.)
[3] A Papist.

NOTES: 1. It is probable that the author is Thomas Scott, the political writer; the substance of the satires can be paralleled from his acknowledged work. The book is ascribed to him in the Bodl. catalogue.

2. A MS. note in the Bodl. copy suggests 'This little Tract is certainly the production of a foreign press. Probably written by Thomas Scott of Utrecht'. The B.M. catalogue suggests Scotland as the place of printing.

Printed at London for Thomas Lambert, and are to be sold at his Shop at the signe of the Horse-shooe, neare the Hospitall-gate in Smithfield. 1636.

Collation: 4°, A^2 B–C^4 D^2, 12 leaves, the text paged 1 (B 1)–19 (D 2).

Catchwords: B–C, THE [The] C–D, AFTER [After] FINIS.

The volume contains 1 character, on B 1^{v}–B 3. An Hypocrite.

NOTES: 1. A 1 is the title, and on it is a woodcut of the two prophets. A 1 is missing in the B.M. copy in which is inserted a reprint of the title on thick paper, l. 13 being rubbed out. This reprint appears to be the same as that inserted additionally in the Bodl. copy in which l. 13 reads 'Reprinted by J. Caulfield 1795'.

2. This character is regular and well-written.

3. Heywood had written a character of 'a Puritan' (on I 3 and v.) in his 'Troia Britannica; or Great Britaines Troy . . . London; . . . 1609.' fol. [B.M. (79. g. 17); Bodl. (Mal. 15)].

4. In the B.M. copy the paper of gathering C is different from that in the rest of the book.

1647 The Character of a Cavaliere, with his Brother Seperatist. Both striving which shall bee most active in dividing the two Nations, now so happily, by the blessing of God, united. Ps. 126. 3 [quoted] London, Printed for W. H. 1647.

Collation: 4°, 4 leaves, the text paged 1 (A 2)–6.

Catchword: A 2^v–3, But FINIS.

The volume contains 2 characters, on A 2^v–4.

[1] a Separatist. [2] a Cavaliere.

NOTES: Two of the writer's comments are interesting. He first neatly discusses 'a character', . . . 'according to the Nature of it, writes much matter in a little roome, and time. 'Tis a curious Pencill, that can delineate the loveliest beauty in a little Table. And truely I am sorry that this Tablet should be painted with . . . this Ethiopian Liquor:'
Then comes one of the rare references these character-writers make to one another, 'I have observed many that write Characters, as Overbury, Curere, Shelton, &c.' (A 2^v). That '&c.' is as tantalizing as the two (?) unknown names preceding it.

The volume contains 2 characters, 'The Puritan' on G 3–4, 'Midsummer-Moon' on M 8–N 4^v.

NOTES: 1. A 1 (? portrait) is missing in the B.M. copy.

2. a. 'A Midsummer Moone ...' is not by Cleveland. It was first published in 1648, and is by Thomas Winyard, for 'the author's name is written by Wood on the title of his copy (Bodl. Wood 514. 44), and as 'winwood' it is attached to a copy in Rawl. MS. D. 945. ['Johan. Oxon. autori winwood.'] In any case, the piece is hardly a character, but an extravagant portrait of Cheynell and account of the visitation.

b. l. 13 of the section-title misprints 'mori' as 'wori'.

c. One of the rare references to Theophrastus occurs on N 1^v, 'Thus of Theophrastus Characters, the vices onely survive, the vertues are expelled the world'.

B.M. (1076. e. 14 (2)).

The third edition. Title as in (b), substituting 'third' for 'second', (c) dividing the lines slightly differently, and spelling 'Brook' thus in 1662 l. 20 and 'Cornhill' so in l. 21.

The text is a close page for page reprint of the text of (b), correcting 'wori' on the section-title. There is a portrait on A 1. The text paged 1 (B 2)–182 (N 4^v).

[1] a tailor.
[2] a Canting Rogue.
[3] a Libertine Zealot.

NOTES: 1. 2 A 8 is cropped in the B.M. copy so that its paging cannot be seen.

2. A 'Tailor' is introduced as Overbury's, but the latter's responsibility for the main part of the 'Canting Rogue' is not acknowledged, nor is Harman referred to on pp. 133–9.

3. Kirkman tells us (in vol. I, part 1, A 4–B 4) that Head refused to write a second part because of 'the ignominy' he had reaped 'by writing the first', and that finally he (Kirkman) continued the work himself. The Prefaces to Parts 3 and 4 are signed 'Richard Head./Fra Kirkman', and affirm 'we have equally club'd to its Composition'. However, in his 'Proteus', Head expressly denies that he was concerned in any part but the first, of the 'English Rogue'.

4. There were many subsequent reprints and adaptations of the English Rogue. The B.M. has, in addition to the above, 3 of the editions containing characters, 1680 (parts 1 and 2), 1786, and 1874. The Bodl. has the editions of 1666 (part 1), 1680, 1671, and 1874.

[16] The Catch-Pole, or Tenter-Hook. (p. 296)
[17] An handsome Hostess. (p. 324)

NOTES: 1. The structure of this book as a whole has been influenced by the character-form. And in its discussion of the various types of wheedlers, there are a number of character-sketches, which form part of the ordinary text and are not printed separately as the few characters in the 'English Rogue' had been.

2. There is much unacknowledged borrowing from Earle, for instance about one-third of no. 15 is from Earle's Attorney; the quotations are used as a kind of framework whose different sections are expanded at will.

NOTES : 1. Cowley's satire was the object of the publication, Berkenhead's and Butler's works being introduced merely as 'good company'. The satire, 'The Puritan and the Papist', which has been accepted as Cowley's by the late Mr. A. R. Waller (in the Cambridge English Classics edition of Cowley's English Writings) was followed in this 1682 edition by 'The Character of an Holy Sister'. This was not included in the 1643 edition of the satire. There is no evidence, external or internal, that this weak piece is by Cowley, and in reprinting the satire, Mr. Waller omitted it. [See 1642, 'A Puritane Set forth . . .']

2. The first Bodl. copy is collated as the B.M. copy, except that 18 is correctly printed. The second Bodl. copy is a fragment, B 2–C 2^v.

PREFACE

THE sources known to me, out of which an account of the Library of Peterborough Abbey can be constructed, are these:

a. Lists of books bequeathed to the Abbey. These are to be found (i) in the list of gifts of bishop Æthelwold (†984) of Winchester, formerly Abbot of Peterborough: printed from the MS. chartulary belonging to the Society of Antiquaries (No. 60) in the Monasticon, i. 382. (ii) In the lives of the successive abbots from Benedict (†1194) to Nicholas Elmstow (†1396)[1] in Whittlesey's History of the Abbey, extracted by Gunton and printed in full by Sparke.

From these we recover the titles of a little over 220 volumes, but many of these are service-books.

b. Ancient catalogues. Of these there are two: (i) in MS. Bodley 163 (Bede's Historia ecclesiastica). It has been printed several times, by Pauli in Neues Archiv ii (1876), 433, and hence in the Serapeum xxxviii (1877), 120, and by Becker in his Catalogi, No. 96: see also Gottlieb, Ueber Mittelalt. Bibliotheken, 515. It is of cent. XII, early, and contains about 70 titles. It is anonymous in the MS., but coincidences with the other documents in the case have made me sure that it must be attributed to Peterborough.

(ii) In a MS. among the Peterborough muniments (now in the Chapter Library). Printed by Gunton in his History, and copied and collated with the original by myself in 1908. A reprint of Gunton's text is in the Serapeum (xii, xiii: 1851–2). It is a tall narrow book of 28 leaves of paper and vellum ($11\frac{1}{5} \times 4\frac{3}{5}$ in.) in two gatherings of 14 leaves each, and I take it to date from late in the xivth century. The contents are :

[1] Whittlesey stops in 1338: for the later Abbots Gunton does not mention his source.

Matricularium librarie monasterii Burgi Sancti Petri paucis libris non examinatis.

The catalogue ends on f. 19^b. Then follows without break matter occupying the rest of the page, probably in the same hand : Qualiter agitur cum iustus in extremis agit. Angelus sui custos cum multitudine angelorum venit et animam eius de carcere corporis tollit et cum maxime et dulcissime melodie cantu et cum immenso lumine ac iucundissimo odore ad celeste perducit palatium in spiritualem paradisum. . . .

ending : talis est mutacio dextere excelsi ending : dolor horrende visiones, etc. (?) in ix° fo. script.

Qualiter agitur cum impius in extremis agit. Cum autem impius in extremis agit veniunt demones cum maximo strepitu. . . .

At top of f. 20 is : Sepe recorderis bone frater quod morieris.

Then : Liber de arte moriendi.[1]

This, it seems, is in a different hand. Beginning :

Cum de presentis exilii miseria transitus mortis propter moriendi impericiam multum non solum laicis verum etiam religiosis atque deuotis difficilis . . . orationes dicendos super agonizantes ab aliquo assistencium.

These are in six particulae. The first begins :

Cum omnium terribilium mors corporis terribilissima sit.

They end f. 28^a : ut in pace sit locus tuus et habitacio tua in ierusalem celesti, per eundem. Explicit liber de arte moriendi.

On f. 28^b at top are some verses :

Demon. Hanc animam posco quia plenam crimine nosco.
Angelus. Hic si peccauit nece pressus opem rogitauit.
Anima. O spes in morte me solue maria precor te.

[1] By Matthew of Krakau ? See Royal MS. 8. B. xvi.

Maria. De qua suxisti fili veniam precor isti.
Filius Dei. Wlnere queso pater [da ?] quod rogitat mea mater.
Pater. Nate petita dabo quod vis volo [nulla ?] negabo.
Angelus. Aspice peccator vbi filius est mediator
Pro precibus matris qualis est responsio patris.

Non prius in dulcem declines lumina sompnum
Omnia quam longi reputaueris acta diei.

Then, in the hand of f. 19^b, follows the continuation of the text there begun. It is followed by a paragraph De generali iudicio, ending: erubescet luna. Require in 4° fo. ante matricular(ium). But nothing now precedes the Matricularium.

c. A short list of books (15) seen by Leland at Peterborough shortly before the Dissolution: printed in his Collectanea, iv. 31.

d. The extant books which can be identified as having belonged to the library in medieval times.

From what has been said it will be apparent that the most copious source of information is the Matricularium preserved at Peterborough, occupying as it does some 38 pages in the MS., and containing entries of 346 separate volumes. A discussion of its character and of the principle on which it is arranged will therefore be a proper preliminary to making any use of it. And at the outset I remark that the format and material of the book suggest that it can hardly be the official catalogue drawn up for use in the library. Examples of such official catalogues we have, e. g. in those of Dover Priory; St. Augustine's, Canterbury; the Austin Friars of York; Leicester Abbey; Sion Monastery, all of them much more carefully and better written books than ours, the aspect of which at once suggests that it was made for private use.

We proceed to examine the arrangement of the catalogue, and find it to be quite systematic. The volumes are arranged under a series of alphabets of 23 letters (A–Z, omitting J, V, W). Each letter of the first alphabet has a single dot after it; each letter of the second has two dots; each of the third, three; the fourth has the numeral IV attached to each letter, and so on with V, VI, etc., up to XVI; but this last alphabet is incomplete, only going down to letter C. Thus we ought to find 23 × 15 + 3 entries = 348; but irregularities or errors reduce the number to 346.

Then we look at the contents: and here we are surprised to find that a great many of the works which form the staple of ordinary monastic libraries are wholly absent from the list. Not only so, but when we turn to the bequests of the abbots, we find among them many of these ordinary books, which yet make no appearance in our catalogue. By ordinary books I mean Bibles, glossed books of the Bible, Augustine on the Psalms, and on the Trinity, Gregory's Moralia, the Sentences, the Summa of Aquinas, the Decretum of Gratian, the Digest: you will be hard put to it to prove from this catalogue that Peterborough Abbey owned any of these or scores of others which one could readily name.

I have made two Indexes, one to the Matricularium, the other to the remaining documents; and a glance at them will prove my point to demonstration.

The question then arises: Is this in some sort a supplementary catalogue which designedly omits the large treatises and only records those of smaller compass? and there are two phenomena which point to an affirmative answer. One is in the catalogue itself. There are several entries which are plainly incomplete as they stand. No. 24 (C. 2), Retractationes Bede de quibusdam questionibus precedentis tractatus; No. 83 (Q. IV), Aliud Psalterium de beata Virgine; No. 175 (Q. VIII), Tractatus eiusdem de confessione; and again, No. 124 (L. VI), Liber de arte poetica, Sermones eiusdem, Epistole eiusdem; No. 35 (O. 2), Liber Penitentialis in fine; No. 218 (N. X), Numerale in tribus quaternionibus sequentibus. Such phrases show that part of the document which was being copied has been omitted: they do not prove that this was done designedly.

The other phenomenon, however, does seem to show that. It is the evidence of extant books.

No. 23 (B. 2) in the catalogue runs thus :

Beda super Tobiam.
„ super triginta questiones de libris Regum.
„ super canticum Abacuc.
„ de templo Salomonis.
Augustinus contra quinque hereses.
Sermo Augustini de muliere forti.
Ieronymus super Ecclesiasten.
Tractatus Ernulfi Episcopi Roffensis de incestuosis coniugiis.

Now these are the exact contents of MS. Lambeth, 191: only, the first, and longest, article in that MS. is Beda super parabolas Salomonis. Again, No. 3 (C. 1) gives :

Pastorale Ambrosii.
Questio Ieronimi de induracione cordis Pharaonis et de aliis quatuor questionibus.
Item de xv signis ante diem iudicii.

And the Eton MS. 21 has exactly these articles, but preceded by Jerome on Daniel and the twelve Prophets, which occupies 323 leaves out of a total of 338. Be it noted also that the tract of Ernulf and 'Jerome' on the hardness of Pharaoh's heart are both uncommon texts, especially the latter.

A third instance is afforded by the Helmingham MS. No. 6 which begins with Rabanus on Genesis (a long book), and proceeds with the smaller tracts which are catalogued under No. 36 (P. 2).

Again, one of the gifts of Abbot Robert de Sutton (d. 1274) was Vita S. Thomae et S. Oswaldi versifice ; and No. 84 (K. IV) begins with Vita S. Oswaldi versifice. It has other items, but this makes no real difficulty, for the notes of the abbots' bequests are obviously made as brief as is consistent with clearness.

Returning from this evidence to the catalogue, we find many entries which can hardly represent the contents of complete volumes : e.g. No. 47 (C. 3), Litera que sic incipit ; Hugoni S. Victoris Priori ; No. 54 (K. 3), Edilnulphus [sic] de monachis, i.e. the rather short poem of Ethelwulf. (This may, perhaps, represent MS. Bodley 163, in which Ethelwulf's poem follows Bede's History.) No. 120 (G. VI), Paruus tractatus inter defensorem et accusatorem ; No. 251 (Z. XI), Tractatus Ratriani (Ratramni) de eo quod Christus natus est de Virgine (a quite short text) ; and so on. Moreover, to any one who is accustomed to dealing with MSS., many examples will occur of tracts commencing entries which it is not usual to find in that position : No. 10 (M. 1), Chrysostom on the Epistle to the Hebrews would almost certainly be preceded by the Opus imperfectum on Matthew ; No. 25 (D. 2), Bede on Nehemiah, would be preceded by Bede on Ezra ; No. 42 (X. 2), the letter of Alexander to Aristotle would have either the Gesta Alexandri, or Orosius, before it.

These considerations taken together have convinced me that the principal object which the compiler of this catalogue had before him was to record the smaller and subsidiary contents of the volumes in the library, omitting the long treatises which in many cases filled whole volumes or formed the main part of them. The title of his work allows, indeed, for some omissions, in the words 'paucis libris non examinatis'. But like most amateurs, he is not consistent in his practice. He does not always leave out the first item in the book ; his entries, No. 2 (B. 1) and No. 14 (Q. 1), seem to give the whole contents of two volumes, the first of which is named in Bodl. 163, and the other seems clearly to be identical with Lambeth 202. And in a good many other cases, especially perhaps in the later part of his work, his entries appear to be full. No. 342 (Y. XV), which I identify with Gonville and Caius MS. 437, is an instance.

It is a real objection to this view that the numbering of the books in their sixteen alphabets is consecutive, and allows no room for the many volumes which contained single treatises. Against this must be set the fact—I believe it to be a fact—that no volume can be produced in which a press-mark corresponding to our catalogue is entered ; nor, indeed, is a Peterborough press-mark of any kind known to me. One legitimate inference from this is that the alphabet system of our catalogue was invented by the compiler of it for his own convenience ; another, less likely, that it was a system which did not include any volume which contained only a single treatise.

It is not easy to gather from the Matricularium a clear idea of the arrangement of the library. This is not surprising if my theory of its character is correct ; for we well know how little the medieval people cared about preserving uniformity of complexion in the contents of their books. Tracts of the most diverse kinds might be collected in one volume, consideration being only had to their bulk and not to their subject. However, as we look through the pages of the book, some grouping does seem to emerge.

We begin with Theology, and though we cannot be sure that the common custom of putting the four great doctors at the head of the list was followed, there are places (11 sqq.) where Augustine is conspicuous, others where Bede (22 sqq.) and Ambrose (29 sqq.) come out. As we proceed, books of devotion and meditations and the apparatus of the later centuries are common. At 93 we enter the sphere of Grammar, but it is infected by Medicine and Theology ; it is between 118 and 156 that we find most of the classical authors. We then relapse into miscellanies, among which some of the names of the authors, e.g Bonaventura, and the general complexion, show that the books are of rather recent date. About 199 are three or four French books ; Canon Law is prominent about 212. French texts and romances are fairly common after 307. I gain the impression that with about 156 the older part of the library ends, and that most of the books which follow were the gifts of single monks ; this, from a comparison of this catalogue with that of Christ Church, Canterbury, in the first part of which a classification (alphabetical) is perceptible, while in the second the gifts are chronicled apparently in the order of their accession.

This notion is neither confirmed nor refuted by the older catalogue in Bodl. 163 which begins with Augustine, Histories, Jerome, Ambrose, and then becomes very miscellaneous, but contains, as it happens, no 'grammatical' books at all. It has to some extent, but not completely, the character of a 'cloister' library, such as is separately entered in the Christ Church catalogue, and consists of standard books of reference.

The moral of what I have said so far is that the Matricularium is a thoroughly abnormal catalogue, and that the process of identifying extant books by its means is not easy, and is beset by uncertainties. It will not help us at all, we have seen, in the case of Bibles or Glosses or Augustine's de civitate Dei or many more ; and even when a series of small tracts in an extant MS. reminds us of something in it, we have to reckon, on the one hand, with possible omissions by the cataloguer or mutilations in the MS., and, on the other hand, with accidental coincidences due to the confirmed propensity of some groups of tracts to circulate together. Still, now that its real character has been pointed out, it ought not to be unfruitful in bringing Peterborough books to light.

As a matter of fact the number of Peterborough books known to exist is remarkably small. Of Psalters and service-books, Consuetudinaries and Chartularies, there may be a score ; but these are not library-books. Of library-books proper, I doubt if more than a couple of dozen can be pointed out. We know from Gunton and Patrick how cruelly the Church suffered in the Civil Wars ; we do not know from them or from any other source what proportion of the library had remained in situ down to that date. Nor do the experiences of the neighbouring abbeys afford much help. Crowland books are not common, but we have no catalogue by which to judge of its wealth. Thorney books are perhaps commoner, e.g. at Edinburgh. For Ramsey we have a fragmentary catalogue showing it to have been rich, especially in Hebrew, but extant MSS. are rare. In Ely we have a case like Peterborough, where the buildings were preserved : we know its press-mark, though we have no catalogue, and Ely MSS. may be quickly numbered. I am afraid it is clear that at the Dissolution there was great havoc wrought among all these libraries. Bury and Norwich were by far the luckiest of all those in East Anglia. In the former case a large block of MSS. came into the hands of a man who passed them on to Pembroke College, Cambridge ; in the latter, the Chapter seem to have been persuaded by one of their members to present a good many books to the University of Cambridge.

At Lambeth there is a small set of MSS. described in the old catalogues as 'Bundles', fasciculi ; the medieval ones among these are imperfect fragments of larger volumes, and in some cases I thought I saw reason to believe that they came from Peterborough. This conjecture, if substantiated, would point to a devastation of the library earlier than the Civil Wars, and would confirm my guess that the Peterborough books were badly treated at the Dissolution.

Of extant Peterborough books perhaps the most famous is the copy of the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, Bodl. Laud. Misc. 636, which, though it has no Peterborough inscription or mark, was undoubtedly written in the abbey.

The list which I have been able to get together is, as I have said, a sadly short one. Of service-books I reckon more than of library-books.

Psalters :

Oxford. Bodl. Douce 296, of cent. xi.
Barlow 22, of cent. xiv.
Cambridge. C.C.C. 53, of cent. xiv.
„ St. John's 81, Robert de Lindsey's glossed Psalter.

Society of Antiquaries 59, Robert de Lindsey's unglossed Psalter, both of cent. xiii.
Fitzwilliam Museum, MS. 12, of cent. xiii.
Brussels Bibl. Royale 9961–3, given about 1320 to a French cardinal ; of cent. xiii, late.

Other service-books :
Oxford Bodl. 18330, Gough Liturg. 17, Breviary, cent. xiv.
Cambridge Magd. 10, Antiphoner of Gilbert de Stanford, cent. xiii.
Lambeth 198, 198^b, Directory of Services, cent. xiv.

Library-books :
Oxford Bodl. 96 (1919), Augustine, Cassiodorus, etc., cent. xiv. Liber Rob. Spyrman Capellani de Burgo S. Petri.
Bodl. 163, Bede Hist. Eccl. = 54 (K. 3).
Laud Misc. 636, A-S. Chronicle.
Cambridge C.C.C. 92, Florence of Worcester.
160, Bede in Epp. Canon.
Gonville and Caius 437, Ordinarium vitae religiosae = 342 (Y. XV).
454, Will de Woodford's Summa de vitiis et virtutibus (129).
St. John's 256 (probably), Somme le Roi.
British Museum Cotton, Julius D. 11 Gesta Henrici II, given by Abbot Benedict (40).
Otho A. 17 (destroyed) contained Peterborough Chronicles and the Passio SS. Wolfadi et Ruffini, perhaps that seen by Leland (2).
(Nero C. 7, Vesp. A. 21, 22, Cleop. C. 1, 2, Faust. B. 3, are Registers, Rentals, or the like, as also Add. 39758. recently acquired, which contains Whittlesey's Chronicle printed by Sparke.)
Harley 3667 has two leaves of a Peterborough Chronicle, cent. xii, and the letter of Dionysius Exiguus. Cf. No. 22 (A. 2).

Harley 3097 = I. 1 (8), Jerome on Daniel, etc.[1]

Lambeth 5 Concordance, not in the Catalogue.
- ? 96 (2 parts), Gregory on Ezekiel 'liber W. de Folkyngham'.
- ? 182 (part), French exposition of the Lord's Prayer (? 345, B. XVI).
- 191 Beda in parabolas, etc. (23, B. 2).
- 202 Augustini summa, etc. (14, C. 1).
- (360 (part), Injunctions of Bp. Russell, 1483).
- 367 (part), Sententiae: has the name of Henry de Morcott (Abbot 1353–61).

The Society of Antiquaries owns the Liber Niger (No. 60 of their MSS., and another Register (No. 38)).

Eton College 21, Jerome on the prophets (3, C. 1).

Helmingham Hall 6, Rabanus etc. (36, P. 2).

Besides the well-known Swaffham book at Peterborough, and the Matricularium, Peterborough has one or two MSS. of medieval date, and one—S. 6 in the Chapter Library—which I identify with F. IX (188).

In the Royal Library at Copenhagen the MS. Ny kongelige Samling, 1854, acquired in England in 1921, appeared to me probably identical with C. 2 (24).

It is, however, hardly conceivable that such collections as the Old Royal and Harley and the older Bodleian fonds should not contain a fair sprinkling of Peterborough MSS. May the present publication have the effect of bringing them to light.

[1] This very good example was furnished me by Mr. Gilson, as also that from Helmingham. In the Harley MS. the table of contents, which begins with 'Ieronimi super Danielem liber unus', is almost verbally identical with that of the Matricularium.

Æthelwold's Gifts, circ. 984

This is the text of the paragraph relating to books, as it appears in the Chartulary, MS. 60 of the Society of Antiquaries. It is on f. xxxiv (39)^{b}, written in one paragraph, in a fine twelfth-century hand.

And antƿentig is þara boca þe Adeluuold biscop ge sealde in to Burch. ꝥ is þonne.

18. Cilicius Ciprianus.
19. De litteris grecorum.
20. liber bestiarum.

In the lists of plate, vestments, etc., which precedes this is mention of a Gospel book.

No. 2, Liber miraculorum, may be the Seven Wonders of the World, or conceivably the Dialogues of Gregory.

No. 4 is probably the Pronosticon futuri saeculi of Julianus of Toledo.

No. 6, Paulinus of Nola, was seen by Leland, as also No. 8.

No. 9 is Abbo of St. Germain's poem on the siege of Paris.

No. 16, Alchimi. Auiti., so written, can hardly be two titles, but one.

No. 18. Cilicius, must be for Caecilius.

Most of the volumes probably contained a number of tracts besides the single ones named.

THE AUTHOR DEDICATES THIS WORK TO THE MEMORY OF DAVID P. WILSON, THE MOST TALENTED SCRYER I HAVE EVER MET.

Thy Name be mighty, O God, which canst open the veil whereby Thy All-Powerful Will may be opened unto men. Power, Glory, and Honour be unto Thee, For Thou art the same
God of all things, and art life eternal.

Acknowledgments

This book could not have been written without the inspiration and generous assistance of the following friends, scholars, and master Enochian magicians: David P. Wilson (S. Jason Black), Clay Holden, Christeos Pir, David R. Jones, Robin Cousins, Josh Norton (Benjamin Rowe), James Wasserman, Judith Hawkins-Tillirson, Rick Potter, I.Z. Gilford, Poke Runyon, Christopher S. Hyatt, and Robert Powell—and to the regular members of the Monday Night Magick Class of Heru-ra-ha Lodge O.T.O., I give my most heartfelt thanks; Constance DuQuette, who co-hosts this 30-year on-going class (and is my most ruthless heckler); Jonathan Taylor; Mike Strader; Jill Belanger; Olver Althoen; Carlos Casadas; and Sandy, Arto, Cobra, Vanessa, Bret, Michael, Patricia, Coleen, Mary, Evgeniy, Jane, Alan, Danny, and scores of others who throughout the years have brought Life, Love, and Liberty into our home each week.

I would also like to thank Glacier Nitz-Mercaeant, of The Enochian's Keep in Indiana, for his beautiful gifts of my gold Enochian Ring and Lamen; and the late Cecil Eugene Burns (a.k.a. Frater White Haired Bull) who built and donated the true and faithful replica of the Holy Table that now adorns our Enochian Temple space.

My thanks also go to Brothers Michael Strader, for his rendering of the Ensigns of Creation in the angelic script, and Robert Powell for his beautiful images of the Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets. They are perhaps the clearest black and white renderings of these complex figures ever published.

Finally I offer my heartfelt gratitude to Clay Holden for his encouragement and support of this project. I am also deeply indebted to him for allowing me to use his magnificent recreations of the original angelic alphabet and his images of the Forty-nine Good Angels, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and Golden Talisman.

I also draw the reader's attention to Brother Holden's original image of John Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica that adorns the cover page of each of the five books that make up Enochian Vision Magick. This image is in itself a most profound and historic element in the entire book for it represents a solution of a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts—that is, the production of a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler. Please pay special attention to Clay's foreword to discover more.

Finally I offer very special thanks to Jan Johnson, Brenda Knight, and Amber Guetebier of Weiser Books who patiently (and graciously) forgave several deadline breaches.

Foreword

This is the book I would have given my eyeteeth for twenty-five years ago. It is the first work to systematically lay out the whole corpus of Dee and Kelley's magickal system, and the only one to provide a useful path through the dense and multilayered labyrinth of what has come down to us as "Enochian Magick," based almost entirely on their original manuscripts.

When Lon asked me to consider writing a foreword to his book, I think he knew that I had not been deeply involved in Enochian research for a number of years, but asked me to at least consider looking at what he was writing. It took only about fifteen minutes of reading to reignite my enthusiasm for the material which at one time was an all-consuming passion, and to realize that what he was in the process of writing would become a landmark text on the subject. Now that the book is finished, I am even more deeply honored to be able to write a few words of introduction to his remarkable work.

What particularly impresses me with Lon's book is not only the sheer volume of material covered or the clarity with which it is presented, but its immense readability and the fact that he has struck an elegant balance between classical scholarship, practical magickal instruction, and anecdotal events.

One never loses the sense that there is a real person at work here, questioning, organizing, and reporting his conclusions together with his experiences along the path. The self-important tone of many so-called "Enochian Magick" texts is entirely absent, replaced by clear and well-organized content.

When I first encountered Enochian magick, the only available published materials were Regardie's Golden Dawn and Crowley's Gems from the Equinox, fascinating but largely incomprehensible to me. Next was the first of several largely incoherent books on Enochian Magick by Gerald Shueler, which elaborated on the Golden Dawn material and added much of his own invention, most of it of dubious value. In hindsight, they seem more suitable for Dungeons and Dragons than serious magickal work (though to be fair, as David Jones once pointed out to me, D&D is probably an excellent introductory discipline for magickal ritual work).

Then came Geoffrey James's The Enochian Evocation of John Dee, a completely different matter altogether. Still more of a synopsis of a system than a workable guidebook (based largely on Sloane MS. 3191, Dee's precis of the materials received between 1582 and 1587), it gathered together the bulk of Dee and Kelley's work, and gave a sense of where it all came from. Still incredibly useful many years later, when coupled with an examination of the original scrying sessions that produced the material, it still does not serve as a proper guidebook through the system. The heart is there, but the how and why are largely absent.

When looking at what the Golden Dawn and Crowley and their successors put together as "Enochian Magick," it seems clear that they were missing huge chunks of this "how and why," along with many critical pieces to understanding what they were dealing with, and their attempts to graft basically everything else in their magickal system onto it produce a cumbersome thing that Dee and Kelley would not recognize as what they pulled through.

I have likened their resulting patchwork as similar to what happens when one attempts to open a Word document or a highly formatted database file in a text editor: one can read and even extract a good bit of raw data, but the formatting and links to other programs are entirely unreadable and bear little resemblance to the original document.

Without an understanding of Dee and Kelley's early material, mostly presented in Sloane MS. 3188, what comes later on, while workable on its own, will be largely incomprehensible. And while in many ways it can be convincingly argued that the later system, centered on the four Elemental Tablets, and the Tablet of Union are independent of the earlier material, Dee's diaries demonstrate that he went back and added marginal notes to even the earliest diaries to refer to events and communications that transpire several years later, as well as referencing the earlier communications in the later entries.

Fortunately for the reader, Lon's book gives full treatment, background, and application of both the early and the later materials, and provides in spades both the how and why that are missing from so many other books that purport to be guides to the system.

For me, not until David Jones's Center for Enochian Studies, based out of Thelema Lodge OTO in Oakland, began their annotated transcriptions of the first of Dee's spirit diaries, did I get a real sense for the background story of Enochian magick. All of a sudden, it was like reading a Philip K. Dick novel, with the tables and diagrams coming to life, populated by spirits, angels, and demons of all sorts, each with his or her own personality. And notably, John Dee and Edward Kelley for the first time became real people, questioning and struggling to understand and document what was being communicated to them.

I was finally able to borrow microfilms of the spirit diaries from the always truly generous and helpful Bill Heidrick, and I spent countless days printing them out on microfilm reader printers. When I finally had a set of Sloane MS. 3188 (Quinti Libri Mysteriorum) printed out and bound in front of me, the real magick began to take place for me. It was as if one discovered that Jules Verne's Captain Nemo was a real person, and could read his own words and step back 400-plus years into the past, to share his thoughts and experiences. To this day, it is the closest thing to real time travel I have ever felt.

Dee's handwriting presented some difficulty at first, as did his use of many antiquated terms, abbreviations, and frequent recourse to Latin. To my aid came Elias Ashmole's "fair-copy" of the diaries (Sloane MS. 3677), transcribed many decades later, in a beautiful hand which was much easier to read than Dee's. It also has the benefit of being more complete in some cases than Dee's original, as the manuscript was in considerably better shape in the 1600s than it is today, and Ashmole made notes indicating where materials were missing.

Given the difficulty in reading the original texts, it occurred to me to begin transcribing the diaries into electronic texts, laid out exactly as Dee had in the original manuscripts, and this was the birth of the John Dee Publication Project. The idea, which I tested in reading circles at Thelema Lodge, was that once one could get past the difficulties of Dee's sixteenth-century italic and secretarial handwriting, the actual English was not so different from that of Shakespeare, and that the modern reader would more easily be able to approach the work. Producing small batches of texts, with my transcription facing pages of the actual manuscript, it proved a fairly simple matter for people to actually read and understand the material.

While the world has changed immensely over the past two decades, and it is now possible to download electronic copies of all of Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries off the Net, it is still valuable to have the reconstructed electronic texts. And while I have never completed the transcriptions of the Quinti Libri Mysteriorum, it both taught me many valuable computer skills that ultimately changed my life and demonstrated that the text could be reproduced as written in an easily readable form. I am pleased that it still provides many readers with a place to begin in reading the spirit diaries.

It was suggested to me early on by David Jones that rather than attempting to comprehend the whole system, I should concentrate on a particular section and work to understand the mechanism of that piece of the system. In my case, that piece of the puzzle was the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

While Lon in this book suggests that, rather than trying to reproduce Dee and Kelley's work, one ought to use the system they transmitted, I found it of inestimable value to read through the text of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus, where the layout and working of the Sigillum is systematically laid out, and fill in each of the squares in a blank Sigillum as I went through it. By so doing, this impressive talisman became a truly living being for me, and it was possible also to rectify certain errors which exist in Dee's diagram of the Sigillum.

Case in point: at the bottom of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, both in Dee's original illustration at the end of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus and in virtually every version published since, one finds the character "y" with a "14" under it. The text however clearly gives this number as "15." Replacing this number, and applying the method of backwards and forwards rotation around the outer circle, one utilizes the remaining unused squares, and two additional names are produced, neither of which is mentioned in the text. This exercise is left to the reader.

It further demonstrated that Dr. Dee, in fact, lies in certain places in the record, indicating that there is material hidden even there that he did not want to be visible to an unthinking reader.

One of my favorite quotes from the beginning of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus is Dee's interchange with the archangel Michael:

> Mi. [...] Thow shalt sweare by the Living God, the strength of his Mercy, and his Medicinall vertue, powred into man's soule never to disclose these Mysteries
> D. Yf no man, by no means, shall perceyve any thing hereof, by me, I wold think that I shold not do well.

> Mi. Nothing is cut from the churche of God. We in his Saincts are blessed for ever.
> We separate the, from fyled and wycked persons: We move the to God.
>
> D. I vow, as you require: God be my help, and Gwyde, now and ever, amen.
>
> MIC. This is a Mystery, skarse worthy for us, ourselves, to know, muche lesse to Reveale. Art thow, then, so Contented?
> D. I am: God be my strength.

Keeping this in mind, one may begin to understand why Dee occasionally misdirects the reader in his diaries. As with Aleister Crowley's works several hundred years later, if one is paying attention to what one is reading, the erroneous data should just about jump out from the page, and provide a pointer to the actual information.

Investigating such parts of the magickal furniture can provide further unknown or undocumented information, such as the following:

If one adds and subtracts the numbers at the top and bottom of the letters around the outer ring of the Sigillum (having corrected the "y/15"), one arrives at a total number of 440. Adding the "1" in the concentric circles that is given at the end of the instructions on the outer ring (accompanied by the statement "Omnia unum est"), the total comes to 441, the gematric value of the Hebrew "Aemeth," or Truth. Without the correction of the "y/15" square, the total remains 440, the gematric value for "Meth," or Dead. Thus, the Sigillum may be considered as a Golem, and the published version an inactive and unworkable "dead" talisman.

There is also an additional Table to be generated from the instructions given for the characters around the outer ring, as they are described in the text:

> D. Note: All the Cumpanies of these 40, stode, five togither, and five togither, and so in eight Cumpanyes; each, of five

Thus one can lay out the characters in eight rows of five, and in so doing, can produce symmetrical character sigils similar to the ones found on the Elemental Tablets for the angels of the outer ring.

In attempting to find a simple way to generate a regular heptagram in a circle for the purposes of reproducing the Sigillum on paper, I further discovered an interesting connection between the spirit diaries and Dee's earlier Monas Hieroglyphica.

While one cannot in fact produce a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler (a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts), one can approximate it. There are several classical solutions, each of them rather close, but also involving complex methodology. Laying out the Monas Hieroglyphica in its 4 x 9 grid, as given in Dee's book, using a compass from the mid-point to trace a circle, and rotating the Monas so its "horns" touch on the circle from the top of the grid, one finishes with a very close approximation of a heptagon, in fact, as close or closer than any known classical solution.

Finally, it is perhaps fitting to suggest that one can read and consider Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries in a number of different ways, some of them mutually exclusive, but all of them perhaps of interest and value.

First, they can be considered as authentic records of spirit communication. Over the years I have worked closely with practicing Enochian magicians, including at least one incredibly talented scryer, who can both see and hear through the crystal ball, a very rare combination. Most scryers can do one or the other, but not both. In Edward Kelley, Dee found a rare man, however difficult he may have been to work with, and clearly knew it. Dee could only rarely see or hear anything himself, but with his amazing mathematical and classically trained mind, was perhaps the only man in the world capable of understanding and organizing the instructions that were presented to him. He was also skeptic enough to question and reject transmitted material that appeared to come from lying spirits, as Kelley periodically pulled through "illuding divils" that specialized in disinformation. The internal consistency of the bulk of the spirit diaries, as well as the coherent interrelationship of its many parts, speaks convincingly to its being a genuine record of actual events over a period of years.

Second, one can consider the material as an exercise in cryptographic method, intended as a means of communicating secret information back from the continent to Dee's colleagues and superiors in Elizabeth's court. Clearly, as one reads through Liber Mysteriorum Quartus, and to a certain extent Secundus, one can see similarities to the methodology of Trithemius's Steganographia, a work with which Dee was quite familiar, and which has now been demonstrated to be entirely a cryptographic treatise.

The arrays of "dignified" and "undignified" spirits can be seen as referring to encryption methods involving "nulls," and Dee and Kelley's discussion of "transposition of letters" in Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix is at the very least suggestive again of the same. Then there are the tables in Liber Loagaeth, at the end of which (Sloane MS. 3189) Dee has appended eight tables from "Aldaraia Sive Soyga," the mathematical methods of which have been demonstrated by Jim Reeds. They appear even on the surface to be cryptographic tables, though no one to date has made a systematic study of their content, nor provided any translation or decryption or methodology. They remain the most hermetically sealed of all Dee and Kelley's documents.

In a similar way, one may usefully compare this "cryptography" theme with the Kabbalistic method of transposition of letters along with numeric values as a strictly spiritual exercise (e.g., the "Sepher Yetzirah"), and arrive at the conclusion that the Enochian system might be considered "sacred cryptography" in the same sense as the classical Kabbalistic method, unrelated to the mundane world of secret transmission of political secrets.

Lastly, and perhaps most amusingly, I have entertained the idea that Dee was the author of the first science fiction novel over a period of years, and indeed the first to give thought to the idea of "cyberspace," an interdimensional world where communication takes place through a portal, giving thought to the twentieth-century works of H. P. Lovecraft, Philip K. Dick, and William O. Gibson.

In this view, while Edward Kelley is still a historic personage (he appears in Dee's private diaries as well as being clearly documented both in England and in Prague, usually in conjunction purely as an alchemist), the "Edward Talbot" and "Edward Kelley" presented in the Spirit Diaries, his frequent turns from devout scryer to blaspheming conjurer and back again, along with all the mischievous and light-hearted spirits who are trotted on and off the stage, can be seen as an immense work of fiction. Whether written purely for Dee's amusement or as a secret means of documenting a different sort of spiritual transmission remains hidden today.

Of course, as anyone who has spent any time actually working with the system(s) presented in the Spirit Diaries can attest, when you put them to work as if true, stuff happens. Once invoked (or evoked), the spirits do in fact seem to appear and go to work, whether one believes in them or not.

Which leads to the one piece of advice I would give to anyone starting out in working Enochian Magick: Be very clear of what you ask for, as you are certain to get as much of it as you can handle, and once started, it is much more difficult to get it to stop.

In closing, I would like to quote a passage from W. Wynn Westcott's translation of the "Chaldean Oracles" (quoting Proclus), which I have always found incredibly useful to keep in mind when working Enochian Magick, or indeed, any ritual work:

> As the Oracle therefore saith: God is never so turned away from man, and never so much sendeth him new paths, as when he maketh ascent to divine speculations or works in a confused or disordered manner, and as it adds, with unhallowed lips, or unwashed feet. For of those who are thus negligent, the progress is imperfect, the impulses are vain, and the paths are dark.

Lon's wonderful book provides the reader—for the first time—with a clearly lit and well-ordered guide through the maze of Dee and Kelley's Enochian system. The hallowed lips and well-washed feet are up to the reader.

Keep an open mind, a pure heart, and a clean temple, and you will surely hear their angels and spirits speaking to you.

A Note Regarding Original Source Material and Footnote References

The original Enochian magick material is a labyrinth of manuscripts. In preparing this book, I was fortunate to have at my disposal electronic files containing the photographic images of original material currently housed at the British Library, London. The manuscripts are numbered and designated by the name of past owners. The ones I used for the present work are designated: Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II.

Within these numbered manuscripts are various "books," or "Libers" bearing separate titles. Some of these Libers were copied by Kelley or others and reproduced in subsequent manuscripts (sometimes renamed) and have found their way to London's British Library and the Bodleian and Ashmolean libraries at Oxford University. For my purposes the material from the British Library's Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II proved to be quite sufficient. Digital scans of the Enochian manuscripts can be accessed electronically at: http://www.themagickalreview.org/enochian/mss/.

Enochian scholar Geoffrey James prepared a concise summary breakdown of Dee and Kelley manuscripts for the bibliography of his excellent book, Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee.[1] He has graciously allowed me to reproduce his entries for the material that relates directly or indirectly to Enochian Vision Magick. The reader who wishes to explore the source material in greater detail (or who simply wishes to track the book's footnotes and references) should find this list very helpful.

SLOANE MS. 3188.

This manuscript contains Dee's earliest scrying sessions. It contains six individual 'books', which are:—

Mysteriorum Liber Primus covering December 22, 1581 to March 15, 1582, and containing a ceremony with Saul (Dee's first scryer) and the first ceremonies with Edward Talbot, in which the table and Solomon's ring are described.

Mysteriorum Liber Secondus covering March 6, 1582 to March 21, 1582, and containing the first elements of the Heptarchic system, the spirits of the Sigil of Æmeth, and the first suggestion that an antediluvian language would be delivered to Dee. This title page is missing, but can be inferred from textual references in SLOANE MS. 3677.

Mysteriorum Liber Tertius covering April 28, 1582 to May 4, 1582, and containing numerous sigils related but apparently not essential to the Heptarchic system, as well as the names of the 49 good angels.

Quartus Liber Liber Mysteriorum covering November 15, 1583 to November 21, 1583, and containing the remainder of the Heptarchic system; this book is the first to record the name of Edward Kelly[2] as the scryer.

Liber Mysteriorum Quintus covering March 23, 1583 to April 18, 1583, and containing the tables later transcribed by Kelly into SLOANE MS. 3189.

Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix covering April 20, 1583 to May 23, 1583, and containing the famous Enochian letters, as well as information concerning the construction of the Great Table.

SLOANE MS. 3189.

Liber Mysteriorum Sextus and Sanctus or The Book of Enoch revealed to John Dee by the Angels which contains 49 double-sided tables of (apparently) random letters. It is in Edward Kelly's handwriting.

SLOANE MS. 3191.

This manuscript is the only book of ceremonial magic extant in Dee's handwriting. It consists of three separate 'books,' each dealing with a different aspect of Dee's angelic magickal system. The books are:—

49 Claves Angelicæ Anno 1584 Cracoviæ (Liber 18) which contains Dee's transcription of the Angelical Keys (often called the Enochian Keys or Enochian Calls.)

Liber Scientiæ Auxillii et Victoriæ Terrestris which contains a complex system of magic based upon the Great Table (often called The Table of Watchtowers). It is entirely in Latin, and related to the Call of the Thirty Aires.

De Heptarchia Mystica which describes a complete system of planetary magic, along with excerpts from the various scrying sessions.

COTTON APPENDIX XLVI, PARTS 1 & 2.

This manuscript is occasionally referred to as Royal Appendix XLVI, or SLOANE MS. 5007. It contains thirteen 'books,' which are:—

Liber Mysteriorum (et Sancti) parallelus Novalisque covering May 28, 1583 to July 4, 1583, and containing the tail end of the Heptarchic system and the only recorded incident of Kelly speaking Greek.

Liber Pergrinatonis Prime Videlicet A Mortlaco Angeliæ Ad Craconiam Poloniæ covering September 21, 1583 to March 13, 1584, and containing the journey from Mortlake to Cracow, Poland and various political speculations.

Mensis Mysticus Saobaticus Pars primus ejusdem covering April 10, 1584 to April 30, 1584, and containing the dictations of the first calls (backwards).

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cravoviensis Sabbatici covering May 7, 1584 to May 22, 1584, and containing the remainder of the calls (except for the call of the Thirty aires, in the Angelical tongue, and the spirits of the Thirty aires.

Libri Septimi Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici covering May 23, 1584 to July 12, 1584, and containing the geographic locations of the spirits of the Thirty aires, the Great Table or Watchtowers, and the first third of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Libri Cracoviensis Mysticus Apertorius Præterea Præmium Madimianum covering July 12, 1584 to August 15, 1584, and containing the remainder of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Liber Primus Cæsarusque covering August 15, 1584 to October 8, 1584, and containing an attempt to convince the Holy Roman Emperor of the canonical nature of the visions.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Confirmatio covering December 20, 1584 to March 20, 1585, and containing mostly political speculation.

Mysteriorum Cracoveinsium Stephanicorum Mysteria Stephanica covering April 12, 1585 to June 6, 1585, and containing an alchemical formula and a letter from Dee's wife to the spirits.

Unica Action, quæ Pucciana vocetor covering August 6, 1585 to September 6, 1585, and containing religious visions obviously meant to impress the Papal Nuncio who was then attending the ceremonies.

Liber Resurrectionis Pragæ, Pactum sev Fædus Sabbatismi covering fragments from April 30, 1586 to January 21, 1587, and containing further ceremonies with the Papal Nuncio.

Actio Tertia Trebonæ Generalis covering April 4, 1587 to May 23, 1587, and containing a complex series of corrections to the Watchtowers and the infamous wife-swapping episode.

Jesus, Omnipoten sempiterne & une Deus covering March 20, 1607 to September 7, 1607 and containing the last records of Dee's magickal experiment.

Some of this material has been published in more modern times in books that are still readily available. Foremost of these are A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits,[3] and John Dee's Five Books of Mystery.[4]

To make things a bit easier for the reader to access more readily available source material, I will, wherever possible, try to make references with the text and in notes to passages in these modern works.

Prologue to the Prologue

Something Secret

Vyasa: There's something secret about a beginning. I don't know how to start.

Ganesha: As you claim to be the author of the poem, how about beginning with yourself?

—THE MAHABHARATA[5]

There is indeed something secret about a beginning, secret and invisible like the soul of infinite potential that broods in the heart of every living seed. My tongue is tied. I stare at the blank screen of my monitor. I don't know how to start. For the writer it is the most difficult moment—a million things to say, but where to begin? My eyes search the walls and ceiling of my little office and fall upon the mask of the Hindu god Ganesha. His bright, pleasant face reminds me of the opening scene of Jean-Claude Carrière's play, The Mahabharata,[6] where Vyasa, the author of the epic poem is faced with his own writer's block as he strives to begin his monumental story. Unable to read or write himself, Vyasa is blessed by the arrival of Ganesha, the beloved elephant-headed god, who offers to serve as Vyasa's scribe and take down his story from dictation. He also gives Vyasa some advice about how to start.

"How about beginning with yourself?"

And so, in pale imitation of the poet Vyasa, I will heed the wise counsel of my elephant-headed lord, the remover of obstacles. I shall begin this work of magick by telling you something about myself. Don't worry, I won't tell you much. Just enough to get us started.

I am a man. I am what they call in the East a householder—that is, I am married and have for my entire adult life endeavored with varying degrees of success to provide a loving and stable environment for my family. I am also an exceedingly lucky man, for in truth, throughout the years it has been my sainted wife and beloved son who have provided me with a loving and stable environment.

Fate (coupled with a conspicuous lack of ambition) has conspired to make our lifestyle one of genteel poverty (well, not always so genteel). We've never owned a house, a new car, or a credit card. On the other hand, we've always lived in moderately affluent communities and safe neighborhoods. We've always owned old cars that usually get us where we're going. Our bills consist primarily of the rent, the utilities, health insurance, and our groceries. We have no debts.

Some people say that's a miracle. I agree. Miracles are part of my job, for I am a magician. I'm not the type of magician who creates illusions to entertain audiences, but the type of who seeks to dispel the myriad illusions that hinder my own spiritual growth and enlightenment.

Aleister Crowley (1875–1947), the great twentieth-century magician, defined magick as the "science and art of causing change to occur in conformity with Will."[7] This is obviously a very broad definition of the term. In my opinion, however, it is the only one that is entirely accurate. You are, of course, free to interpret this definition any way you wish. Personally, I've come to the realization that the only real changes I can effect with magick are changes in myself. By changing myself, I change the world around me, hopefully for the better.

Naturally, I haven't always considered myself a magician, but for as long as I can remember I've been a seeker. Please don't project any undue piety upon this statement. I'm as wicked as anyone who seldom breaks any criminal or civil statutes can be. But even as I wallow in my dark and lazy wickedness, I find myself again and again stumbling inadvertently toward the Light.

As a magician I have also been extraordinarily lucky. Early in my career I was befriended (and many times guided) by some very wonderful, and in their own ways masterful, magicians to whom I owe an immeasurable debt: Israel Regardie, Phyllis Seckler, Helen Parsons Smith, and Grady L. McMurtry. I have also collaborated with others who have enlarged and enriched my magickal life. Foremost among these is my wife, Constance, who is the greatest natural magician I have ever known. There are many others as well: Karen James, whose profound sense of beauty and passion for the art of dramatic ritual keeps alive the mysteries of Eleusis; Douglas James, William Breeze, James Wasserman, Steven Abbott, LeRoy Lauer, David P. Wilson, Rick Potter, Dewey Warth, Nathan Sanders, Christopher S. Hyatt, Poke Runyon, Michael Strader, Sandra Brautigam, and Jonathan Taylor; and, for the last twenty-eight years, the assembled magi of my weekly magick class.

On my fortieth birthday I began to write professionally. In this vocation I have also been exceedingly fortunate. Readers who are familiar with the body of my work know that I am occasionally taken to task by knowledgeable critics who accuse me of writing for beginners and who chide me for diluting or oversimplifying complex and esoteric concepts. Against these charges I can say very little in my defense except to confess that I am indeed a simple man who, by conventional academic standards, is a lazy and undisciplined student. I have to learn anecdotally. I need to put things in a personal context. I need to appreciate and understand the general before I can be thrilled and inspired by the specifics.

Yes, I'm proud to write for beginning students of magick. But first and foremost I write to explain things to myself. I write to find out what I know. I write the books that I wish I could have studied during the first five years of my magickal studies—books that might have saved me years of frustration, blind alleys, and wheel-spinning. I also like to think that I write for more advanced students who may find themselves entangled in the elegance of magickal minutiae or else have become so entranced and self-impressed with their encyclopedic memories that they've lost sight of why they are doing magick in the first place.

I write about things with which I'm familiar and have had hands-on experience. One of those things is Enochian magick. I began my study of this most curious of quaint and curious subjects in late 1979 and began practicing it in earnest in autumn of 1980. Back then there was very little published information available. The only person I actually knew who had any significant hands-on experience with the system was Dr. Francis (Israel) Regardie,[8] who cautioned me in no uncertain terms that I probably shouldn't be dabbling in such things.

Nevertheless, armed with my copy of Aleister Crowley's Gems from the Equinox[9] and the two-volume set of Regardie's The Golden Dawn,[10] I naïvely plunged into what I thought was the deep end of the Enochian magick swimming pool. A year or so later a friend would present me with a huge stack of photocopied[11] documents from the British Museum. This material represented several significant portions of surviving diaries and magickal notebooks of Elizabethan magus Dr. John Dee (1527–1608 or 1609) and his clairvoyant partner Edward Kelley[12] (1555–1595).

Only then did I begin to realize how dreadfully deep the waters of Enochiana really are. By then, however, it was too late for me to get out of the pool. What little of the system I had mastered had already yielded breathtaking results. My life was becoming very magickal.

Those primitive photocopies eventually yellowed, then browned, then charcoal-blackened into illegibility, but my interest didn't fade. Neither did the interest of others in the magickal community. Today clear copies of the museum manuscripts are readily available to the serious student, and there are no less than thirty books currently in print with the word "Enochian" in the title. I confess a few of those are my doing. In 1991 Dr. Christopher S. Hyatt and I wrote a commentary on Aleister Crowley's little Enochian masterpiece, Liber Chanokh.[13] A year latter Herman Slater of Magickal Childe Publishing asked me to pen the introduction to the new facsimile edition of the 1659 A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between John Dee . . . and Some Spirits. In 1995, my wife, Constance, and I created a deck of tarot cards[14] that incorporates a large number of images relating to the Enochian Elemental Tablets. In the book that accompanies the cards,[15] I elucidate on how they can be used for practical Enochian magick operations.

But writing (and reading) about Enochian magick is one thing; actually using it in a practical way to advance one's own spiritual evolution is another. With few exceptions, the thirty odd books mentioned above are very long on theory and history and very short on straightforward suggestions on how to actually sit down and perform Enochian magick, or reasons why one would want to do such a thing in the first place. I hope to remedy this, at least in small measure, by writing this book. I feel qualified to do this not because I have any illusions that I am the world's most knowledgeable scholar on the subject (I assure you I am not). I offer simply the credentials of nearly thirty years of applied experience with several aspects of Enochian magick. I have come to some very fundamental conclusions that I believe might be of significant and practical value to both the speculative student and the operative practitioner of this elegant and complex magickal system.

Before I plunge us directly into those waters, however, I need to briefly address the question of why a relatively sane and rational twenty-first-century adult would wish to seriously embark upon the path of magick. I will do this with a device that will most assuredly irritate my publisher—a second prologue. And once again, to please my Lord Ganesha,[16] I will begin by talking about myself.

Prologue

Why Magick?

> Magick is as mysterious as mathematics, as empirical as poetry, as uncertain as golf, and as dependent on the personal equations as Love.
> —Aleister Crowley[17]

I'm a magician. I practice the art of ceremonial magick. I adore and invoke the essence of highest Deity and hold congress with divine angels. I also evoke and command spirits and demons.[18] Ceremonial magick is the path I have chosen to give expression to the spiritual yearnings I believe are inherent in every human being. It is my Tao, my Way, my religion, my philosophy, my psychology. But ceremonial magick isn't my life. I already have a life, thank you. But I use magick to help make my life magick.

I have closets and chests full of bizarre and colorful robes and crowns and wands and daggers and chalices and swords and lances and thuribles and banners and veils and rings and incense and candles and oils and tablets and talismans and mirrors and crystals. I have books—strange books (some very old and rare), books that would scare the daylights out of most of my neighbors. I use these magickal tools; I study these books in order to perform the rites of ceremonial magick. These things are not my life. But I use them to make my life magick.

On the surface one might think it reasonable and fair to ask, "Why are you a magician, Lon? Why do you believe in this stuff? Why do you do these crazy things?"

It might surprise you to know I don't have a proper answer to these questions. It is impossible for me to adequately explain or justify why I celebrate my spiritual life through the vehicle of magick, for the same reasons it is impossible for any artist to properly explain why he or she has taken up the brush or the chisel or the violin or ballet slippers. If reasonableness were the sole criterion for the existence of art, there would be no music, no dance, no magick.

Make no mistake about it, magick is an art form, and every true magician is an artist. Just like the musician and dancer, the magician must practice, create, and perform. Just like the painter or sculptor, he or she must be armed with proper tools, skills, knowledge, and, most of all, inspiration. But what about people who've never learned to play a musical instrument, never learned to dance or paint or sculpt, yet who find themselves spiritually touched by listening to music, watching ballet, and visiting galleries? Are they not artists too?

In a very important way, I believe they are. As quantum physicists tell us, both the observer and that which is observed are changed by the act of observation itself. By appreciating the artist's handiwork, we are fundamentally affecting the reality and life of that creation. More importantly, when we expose ourselves to the artist's creation, we enjoy the passive luxury of allowing our consciousness to be altered, elevated, and enriched in unique and personal ways the artist might have never imagined.

The art of ceremonial magick, however, is a little different. There is no painted canvas to display, no audience to applaud. Regardless of how altruistic the magician's motives may be, magick is spiritual performance art that must ultimately be executed and appreciated by the magician alone. He or she is at once the teacher, the student, the medium, the conductor, the performer, the venue, the audience, and the critic. The magician touches the broader audience of humanity only by affecting changes in the magician, and success can be weighed only in the silent Holy of Holies of his or her own soul.

So, here and now and for the duration of this book, I shall lay aside the question of "why magick?" If my magickal efforts seem to propel me closer to self-realization, if my work brings me a measure of health or happiness or wisdom or a sense of fulfillment, good. But none of these things, nor indeed any thing, can be the goal of my art. Instead of asking, "why magick?" I suggest all who would fancy themselves magicians seek answers to the following questions, questions I struggle to answer every day of my life:

Am I really an artist? Am I drawn to this strange and irrational art form because of my mad passion to enrich my art and fulfill my creative life purpose? Or am I doing all this to avoid fulfilling my destiny? Am I running away from myself? When I don my magickal robes and enter the temple, do I do so as a radiant artist-magician, armed and ready to storm the gates of heaven and hell to do battle for the triumph of my soul, poised to take the next step in my spiritual evolution? Or am I merely a foolish man in an exotic costume, a mystic poseur in serious need of a life?

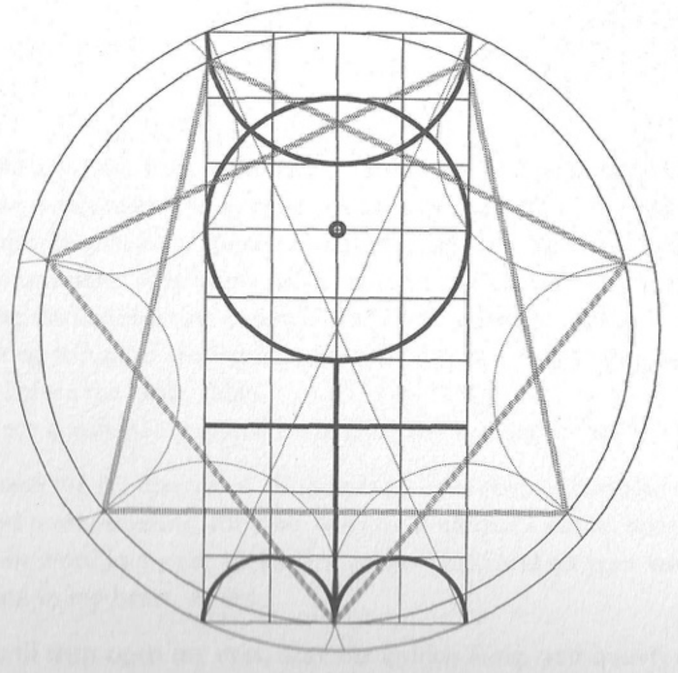
Don't Try to Duplicate the Magick Dee and Kelley Did to Receive the System—Just Use the System They Received!



CHAPTER ONE

In the Middle of the Night

Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.

—JOHN DEE[19]

It's 3:43 a.m. I've been up for about a half an hour bathing, dressing, and preparing myself to operate. Constance is asleep in the bedroom, and I'm trying to be as quiet as I can. In just a few minutes I will turn off the computer here in my office, take up my almond wand, and go into the darkened living room. There I will quietly perform a Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram, light two tapered candles, and sit down before the Holy Table.

Once comfortably seated I will close my eyes and pray:

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. Amen.

I will then open my eyes, take the golden Ring, and quietly recite the Prayer of the Ring:

> Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

I will put on the Ring and then take up the golden Lamen that is attached to a black ribbon. Before putting it around my neck I will again pray:

> Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

I will then take up my almond wand, reach across the Holy Table, tap the upper right-hand corner, and begin to chant. As I do so, I will move the tip of the wand from right to left along the far edge of the table and chant:

Then, moving the tip of the wand down the left edge of the table, I will continue to chant:

Then, moving from left to right along the bottom edge:

> Pa Drux Ur Ur Don Ur Drux Un Med Graph Graph Med Med Graph Ceph Ged Ged Ur Mals Mals Fam Un.

Then up the right-hand edge to finish where I started:

> Pa Gon Med Un Graph Fam Mals Tal Ur Pa Pa Drux Un Un Van Un Med Un Gon Drux Drux Ur.

I will repeat this entire procedure six more times, each time increasing the intensity of my focus on the words and movements. When I've completed the seventh round of chanting, I will hold the wand over the center of the table and chant seven rounds of the following:

> Med Gon Gisg, Don Ur Van, Ur Don Ur, Med Med Graph.
> Med Don Ur Med, Gon Ur Don Med, Gisg Van Ur Graph.

Then I will trace a circle over the center of the table and say:

> Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is.

> Galas Gethog Thaoth Horl*w*n Innon Aaoth Galethog,
>
> Zaphkiel Zedekiel Cumael Raphael Haniel Michael Gabriel,
>
> E(l) Me Ese Iana Akele Azdobon Stimcul,
>
> I Ih Ilr Dmal Heeoa Beigia Stimcul,
>
> S Ab Ath Izad Ekiei Madimi Esemeli,
>
> E An Ave Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemes,
> Sabathiel Zadkiel Madimiel Semeliel Nogahel Corabiel Lavanael.

Finally, I will place the tip of my wand upon the center of my forehead and whisper:

> luah lang sach urch
> Iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf.

The chanting will take about eighteen minutes. By then I will have chanted myself into an altered state of consciousness. In fact, I'll be high as a kite and struggling to avoid drifting into a directionless rapture. I will no longer be the overweight knot of worries and vices that haunts the daylight world of bills and phone calls and deadlines—vampires of time. I will be a magician, a key player in the business of creation, a spiritual being occupying my own indispensable rung on a hierarchical ladder of spiritual beings: gods, archangels and angels, spirits, and demons—spiritual entities who personify in metaphoric Technicolor every natural force, every monad of energy, every atom of matter, every concept and principle, potentiality, and tendency in the visible and invisible cosmos.

My living room will disappear, and in its place will tower the Temple of the Universe, holy ground demarcated by a consecrated carpet of red silk, upon which rests the Holy Table, the center of the universe, the Holy of Holies where heaven touches earth.

The table is completely veiled by a red silk cloth, with its gold tassels that hang from each corner. The cloth conceals an elaborately painted and engraved tabletop, the perimeter of which is carved with eighty-four squares containing letters from a sacred angelic alphabet—letters whose names I chanted in the angelic tongue during my seven rounds of chanting. A large carved hexagram spans the entire inner surface of the tabletop. And in the center of the hexagram broods a large rectangle made up of twelve squares, each containing an oversized angelic letter—the same letters whose names I chanted during the second round of chanting—artfully carved into the surface of the table. Seven talismans, Ensigns of Creation, are arrayed around the central rectangle. They are made of purified tin and are peculiarly lettered in the angelic script.

The centerpiece of the Holy Table is the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, a wax disk approximately nine inches in diameter and one and one-half inches thick, bearing the carved image of a complex diagram consisting of an interlocked heptagram, two heptagons, a pentagram, and an array of numbers and letters, which, when decoded, spell the names of seven sets of seven divine beings: Seven who rest in seven, seven who live by seven, the seven who govern the seven, and seven by whom all government is. Four smaller waxed versions of this Sigillum (wrapped in red silk bags) rest under the legs of the Holy Table, insulating it from distracting geocurrents.

The chanting completed, I will unveil a circular black mirror made of highly polished obsidian. I have it placed in a stand directly upon the covered Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and I will carefully angle it so I see my dimly lit face reflected in its pool of deep blackness. After only a few moments the reflection of my face will disappear, and I will see with magick eyes and hear with magick ears.

Now, the vision magick begins.

In the middle of the night I will call upon the angels.

I will call upon the angels, and they will answer.

CHAPTER TWO

The Magick of Dr. John Dee

> If Merlin is an inner resonator who generated the literature which gathered about his name, then Dr. John Dee must be considered almost his outer manifestation in the real world.
> He is probably the single most influential aspect of the magician ever to have lived and a worthy successor to the Arthurian mage.
> —John and Caitlin Matthews[20]

The little ceremony I described in chapter one cannot be found in any other book of magick. I composed it in the spring of 2006 for the benefit of the members of my weekly magick class. It is designed as a ritual of preparation—a ceremonial "drug," as it were, to safely induce an altered state of consciousness, a trance in which specific techniques of magick may be practiced and visions can occur.

The components of the ritual are not, however, a modern invention. The magical implements and furniture were fabricated as faithfully as possible from descriptions found in sixteenth-century manuscripts and items currently housed at the Bodleian Library of Oxford University, the British Library, and the King's Library wing of the British Museum.

The prayers and the chants were drawn from those same ancient texts. In a group magical working, the prayers are recited in unison and the chants intoned Tibetan style, in a deep monotone chorus of two or four groups of voices. The hypnotic effect on the participants is tangible and powerful. (I have yet to discover what it does to our eavesdropping neighbors.)

The ancient manuscripts I refer to are the diaries and magical records of Dr. John Dee[21] and his partner Edward Kelley, and these texts represent the source material for the system of magick known and practiced today as Enochian magick.

It is not my intention, nor is it within the scope of the present work, to present a proper biography of Dee. That has been handled nicely in Peter French's brilliant biography[22] and other texts that I've itemized in the bibliography. I cannot, however, escape the necessity of providing a brief outline of his life and work, because it will have a direct bearing on our understanding of Enochian vision magick and why I think my little ritual of preparation is so important for those who wish to pursue this path.

Son of a gentleman server to Henry VIII, John Dee was a true Renaissance magus and one of the most extraordinary individuals of his time. Historian John Aubrey called him "one of the ornaments of his Age."[23] That is saying a lot, for his age was peopled with some of the brightest lights in the history of western civilization: Queen Elizabeth I, Charles V, Francis Bacon, Ben Johnson, Edmund Spenser, Giordano Bruno, Christopher Marlowe, and William Shakespeare.

Dee's unique genius blossomed at Cambridge University, and his fame as a published mathematician propelled him as a young man to academic rock-star status throughout Europe. It also brought him to the attention of the rulers of his world, including the future Queen Elizabeth.

He was the master of scores of disciplines. He was a physician, an engineer, a theologian, an astronomer, and cartographer. He invented the nautical instruments and developed the advanced navigational charts that helped make Britannia ruler of the waves. He even coined the term Britannia. A master astrologer, he was allowed to choose the date of Elizabeth's coronation, and throughout her reign he remained her friend and counselor.

Because he was fluent in many languages and lectured often on the continent, Elizabeth enlisted his services as a spy. Dee enjoyed this role very much. As a matter of fact, I believe he remained in this position until the day she died. He was fascinated with cryptography and loved word and letter puzzles. Dee was secretly known as "the queen's eyes," and he signed his dispatches to her with the stylized image of a hand shading two eyes.

Yes, John Dee, on "her majesty's secret service," was the first agent 007.[24] Dee possessed the largest private library in England and was constantly enlarging it. He was perhaps the most educated man of his day. Part of his education included esoteric philosophy, Qabalah, alchemy, and magick—not illogical pursuits for a Renaissance magus. Magick, in particular, was a science to be explored and exploited. Dee wanted to talk to angels (as did the biblical patriarch Enoch) not only to discover the wisdom of the past and the secrets of the universe, but also, more immediately, to discover the secrets of Elizabeth's enemies and brandish the power to magically manipulate the spiritual forces that control them. Dee wanted to be a magical spy.

His approach to magick (at least at first) was pretty standard procedure for the day. After bathing and dressing in clean clothes (extraordinary measures for the times—unless, of course, it was May, when many people of the day took their annual bath), he would enter a room set aside for the purpose. There he would drop to his knees before a consecrated table/altar and for a half hour or so pray fervently to God and His good angels, alternately reciting a litany of self-abasing confessions of his unworthiness to enter into the divine presence and boasting of his God-given right to do that very thing. With his consciousness duly exalted by prayer, he would then gaze into a crystal or a black mirror (a process known as scrying[25]) and wait to receive a vision.

In theory that's how it was supposed to work. However, even though Dee was skilled at composing long and eloquent prayers, he was not very good at scrying. In 1581 he started to advertise for someone who was. He had a small measure of success with a handful of rented seers until March of 1582, when he made the acquaintance of one Edward Talbot. Talbot (who would soon confess that his name was actually Kelley) was an unemployed alchemist's assistant and convicted forger. Kelley's questionable character notwithstanding, his skills as a scryer immediately impressed Dee, who hired him on the spot at a salary of fifty pounds a year, a handsome figure for the day.

The partnership of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley would last until 1587. Their angelic-magick workings for the most part concluded in 1584. During their time together they engaged in hundreds of scrying sessions of varying lengths, in which Kelley gazed into a crystal ball or a black obsidian mirror and reported everything he saw and heard during a variety of angelic communications. Dee, sitting at a nearby table with pen and ink, led the questioning and recorded everything in anal-retentive detail.

Not all of the sessions yielded profound revelations. Indeed, many appear to be attempts by the communicating intelligences to simply keep the conversation going. There were numerous instances when information received in earlier sessions was amended (sometimes radically) in subsequent sessions. There were even times when the magicians were informed that they had been deceived in earlier communications by evil spirits. Nevertheless, the consistency of the bulk of the material is staggeringly impressive, and the double-/triple-blind nature in which it was delivered, especially the angelic language, calls, and magical tablets, boggles the imagination.

The Dee and Kelley years can be viewed as having occurred in three major phases, resulting in what appears on the surface to be three separate and unique magical systems. I will discuss these in more detail shortly. Here at the beginning it is enough to simply point out it is the third and last phase of their angelic workings (the three-month period between April 10 and July 13, 1584) that yielded the material for the system of vision magick that can be properly called Enochian.

The Enochian period was highly productive and bore much promise. In fewer than a hundred days Dee and Kelley received an angelic language, tablets containing the names of elemental and celestial beings, and calls in the angelic tongue that promised to unlock the secrets of heaven and earth. With sad, almost Faustian irony, however, once the Enochian material was in their hands, Dee and Kelley did not proceed to actually operate the system in subsequent workings.

They would go on to other magical adventures, attempting to impress (with little success) the crown heads of Europe with their supernatural counsel. Finally, after nearly five years of working together, years of exhausting magical sessions, and years of traipsing their families around Europe (not to mention a notorious wife-swapping incident), familiarity finally bred contempt, and the two magicians parted company without ever getting into the driver's seat of Enochian magick and turning the key.

Dee's complicated life would draw him back to the English court and the distracting world of political intrigue and survival. In 1588, as the Spanish armada set sail to annihilate England's much smaller fleet (an event Dee predicted years earlier), Elizabeth called again upon her Merlin. Dee shocked her courtiers by urging the queen to not engage the Spanish armada and keep her ships at bay, prophesizing that a mighty storm would scatter and destroy the Spaniards. Elizabeth wisely heeded Dee's words. The storm manifested right on cue, and in the chaos that followed, the Spanish armada went down to defeat. In many circles Dee was credited with magically raising the tempest that saved England. The story of this event became instant legend. William Shakespeare, writing only twenty-three years later, would use Dee as the model for Prospero, the storm-raising magician in his play, The Tempest.

Kelley's post-Enochian years would not earn him such renown. His ambitions kept him on the continent, where he peddled the promise of alchemical treasures to the crown heads of Europe. He was knighted by Emperor Rudolph II of Bohemia but was shortly thereafter imprisoned by his royal patron for failing to manufacture alchemical gold. With fairy-tale panache, Sir Edward Kelley plunged to an untimely death in November of 1595 while attempting to escape from the turret of Emperor Rudolph's prison tower.

Dee's end was not so colorful. Elizabeth appointed him warden of Christ's College in Manchester, but it was not a happy tenure. His wife (and, it is believed, several of his children) died there during the plague in 1605. Dee returned to his home at Mortlake, where his daughter Katherine cared for him until his death in late 1608 or early 1609.

How so many of Dee's manuscripts survived to see the light of the twenty-first century is a magical wonder story in and of itself. Several of the most important documents Dee had hidden in the false bottom of a cedar chest (can we get much more romantic?), where they lay undiscovered for over fifty years after his death. Through a curious chain of events (that tragically saw a portion of the manuscripts baked as pie wrappings), the surviving material came to the attention of the illustrious antiquary, politician, astrologer, chemist, and Freemason, Alias Ashmole (1617–1692), one of the few people in the world capable of recognizing the importance of the discovery. Thanks to Ashmole, the material was catalogued and finally housed safely in his own museum at Oxford, the British Museum, and the British Library, where, over three hundred years after its reception, it captured the attention of S. L. MacGregor Mathers, Wynn Wescott, and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, then Aleister Crowley—and now you.

CHAPTER THREE

Dee and Kelley vs. the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley

> Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darknesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch. Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witness of my promise toward thee.
> —The angel Ave, Monday, June 25, 1584[26]

Modern Enochian magick (as first developed in the late nineteenth century by S. L. MacGregor Mathers and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and later adapted and augmented by Aleister Crowley and others) is a remarkable and tidy self-referential system of visionary magick. It is based upon a small portion of sixteenth-century manuscripts of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley, and the mystique of its colorful origins make it initially alluring to magical dilettantes and dabblers. However, the complexity of the system, as outlined by Golden Dawn/Crowley texts, continues to effectively guard the mysteries of this marvelous magical art form from all but the most serious, courageous, tenacious, foolish, or naïve.[27]

For most of us who cut our Enochian-magick teeth during the latter half of the twentieth century, the Golden Dawn (GD) and Crowley books were at the time the only source material readily available to us. By following the intricate procedures outlined in these texts, we proceeded with our visionary quests along the two avenues of experimentation offered us by the GD/Crowley model: one branch of the system dealing with the elemental (manifest) universe, the other dealing with the aethyric (celestial). I'll discuss these branches in more detail in book IV.

Both of these magical environments are populated by spiritual beings whose names are drawn from five grids of lettered squares received by Dee and Kelley during a series of angelic communications during the third (or Enochian) period of their magical operations. Both the elemental and the celestial magical environments (and their spirit inhabitants) are accessed by intoning one or more of nineteen calls, which are chanted in an angelic language that was given to the Elizabethan magicians under breathtaking and extraordinary circumstances during the last months of their angelic magick workings. Theoretically, these calls induce very specific trances, whereby the magician can pinpoint particular spiritual entities or environments he or she wishes to contact or visit. As you can imagine, this is a very attractive prospect to the magical explorer.

The visionary labor of many post-modern Enochian explorers was well repaid, for we soon discovered that despite our very limited access to the original texts (not to mention our inexperience and ineptitude) this kind of magick actually worked. With surprisingly few exceptions, when we followed the GD/Crowley procedures and techniques, even the most insensitive and skeptical among us received visions we deemed appropriate to the particular regions we were exploring.

The technique used to receive visions such as these is called scrying. The Golden Dawn and Crowley often referred to the practice as "traveling in the spirit vision." Scrying is, quite simply, the ability to put oneself in touch with one's own psychic senses. In magical operations the scrying session is usually preceded by a formal ceremony designed to put the magician in an altered state of consciousness. It is, for all intents and purposes, a shamanistic experience. The thoughts, mental images, and impressions that flood the magician's mind during this altered state are subsequently recorded in the magician's journal and analyzed.

Naturally, some of us proved more talented than others. Art lovers and movie fans make particularly good candidates for Enochian vision magick, for they see with the romantic's eye and already possess a vast memory bank of evocative landscapes, archetypal characters, and supernatural beings. They are by nature dreamers skilled at communicating through a vocabulary of images and visual metaphors. But even the least imaginative of us, in short order, learned to develop our own visionary skills that became increasingly honed by our repeated work with the system.

There is no question (in my mind, at least) that the Enochian magick procedures and techniques developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley embody a highly effective system of magical working that, if properly applied, can become an integral component in the modern magician's program of personal self-development. This is especially true for those of us whose magical careers have led us to the Qabalah-based disciplines referred to today in specialized circles as hermetic or ceremonial magick.

To modern ceremonial magicians, Enochian magick appears at first glance to enjoy a comfortable compatibility with our world of pentagram rituals, hexagram rituals, tarot cards, trees of life, qabalistic path workings, chakra work, invocations, god-forms, and spirit evocations. This compatibility, however, has been, for the most part, contrived and jerry-rigged. For as efficacious as the GD/Crowley applications and techniques are, they bear little resemblance to anything Dee and Kelley practiced or were instructed to engage in by their angelic contacts. With all due respect to Mathers, it is clear that he and his Golden Dawn adepts chose to limit their attention to only those portions of source texts that offered material that they could fit easily into the qabalistic/hermetic schema to which they were so passionately committed. Furthermore, it is clear that in many instances, when the original material didn't fit the schema, they found a way to make it fit.

This fact should not diminish in our respect for the wonderfully effective system the Golden Dawn and Crowley have bequeathed to us. But it has prompted many of us (who obviously have an inordinate amount of time on our hands) to examine in greater detail the surviving Dee and Kelley material that has now become more readily available to the serious student. What we discovered is an overwhelmingly large body of work—books, notebooks, and diaries—the most interesting of which span the better part of three years of intense magical operations. Most of this material appears to have nothing whatsoever to do with Enochian magick as practiced today.

As I mentioned earlier, Dee and Kelley's magical workings took place in three distinct phases that yielded three unique magical systems. For convenience, I will refer to these as (1) Heptarchia Mystica (or simply Heptarchia), (2) Loagaeth (which includes an angelic alphabet), and (3) Enochian.

One could argue quite convincingly that the revelations Dee and Kelley received during the Enochian period represent the crème de la crème of their magical workings and that it is unnecessary to waste our time on the painfully complex details of the Heptarchia and Loagaeth working periods. After all, the GD/Crowley system and techniques were developed from this plus ultra Enochian material, and everything seems to work just fine, thank you. In fact, for the better part of twenty years I was one of the most vocal apologists for the Enochian school whose motto is, "Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!" Then, starting in 1999, a couple of things happened that caused me to rethink the wisdom of this attitude.

First, I became enthralled with the work of Clay Holden and the John Dee Publication Project, which brought the glories of Quinti Libri Mysteriorum to life on the World Wide Web. Then, in 2003, my O.T.O.[28] Brother and Enochian magick adept Christeos Pir sent me a computer disk of material from a marvelous Enochian seminar he presented in Pittston, Pennsylvania. Along with the seminar material, he sent me a collection of photographic files of surviving Dee manuscripts from the British Library and other materials that were of great interest to me. I assure you, I could not have written this book without these materials and the profound insights of this great modern magician.

Around the same time, my publisher sent me a copy of Joseph H. Peterson's book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery: Original Sourcebook of Enochian Magic. I had years earlier examined much of this material enlarged from microfilm, but now I had the luxury of comfortably reviewing it in clearer formats (with Latin translations) on my home computer and from Peterson's marvelously well-organized book.

I must confess that even with this information stacked conveniently and legibly under my nose, I was overwhelmed by the sheer immensity of it all. I'm interested in the magical adventures of Dee and Kelley as much as the next fellow, but I also have a life. Did I need to sacrifice three years of my own life in order to eavesdrop on every detail of three years of theirs? More than ever I saw the wisdom of simply using the magical system Dee and Kelley received and of not wasting precious time trying to recreate the magick they practiced to receive the system. After all, can't I drive a car without first having to build it myself?

But we're not talking about driving cars; we're talking about the art of magick. In the final analysis, no matter what system the magician chooses, in order to make it work most effectively he or she must first become attuned to that system's particular way of viewing of the universe. This concept is so important to the understanding of what will follow in this book that I will pause to illustrate with an example.

The ceremonial magician who practices qabalistic magick acquiesces (at least for the duration of the working) to see all things in heaven and earth in terms of a hierarchy of spiritual personages expressed by the various god names, archangels, angels, spirits, intelligences, and demons of the system. In Qabalah-based magic, such spiritual beings are conveniently organized and arranged according to fourfold formulas dictated by the Hebrew letters that make up the great Name of God, Yod Heh Vav Heh, and by the familiar schema of the Tree of Life, with its ten sephiroth and the twenty-two paths that connect them. Before the magician is ready to operate within the laws and peculiarities of this qabalistic worldview, he or she must first become a fit component of that universe—a harmonious and integral part of this great divine machine, a vital step on this hierarchical stairway of consciousness.

Like the ballerina whose ninety minutes on stage is the product of years of practice and thousands of hours of rehearsal, the magical artist must also be first transformed into a proper instrument of his or her craft. Magicians achieve this transformation with preliminary meditations and rituals, by which we adjust our focus step-by-step until we become comfortable citizens of the specific magical world in which we intend to operate. For the western ceremonial magician, the well-worn curriculum of the Golden Dawn provides perfect examples of this step-by-step adjustment process.

First the magician becomes master of the pentagram and a full citizen of the world of the five elements of the microcosmic universe. By repeated performances of the pentagram rituals and meditations, the magician's psyche becomes balanced and accustomed to the world of the four directional winds, the four elements, and the corresponding magical weapons: the wand, cup, sword, and disk.

Once the elemental (microcosmic) universe is mastered, the magician then moves on to the next step in the attunement process by mastering rituals of the hexagram. Here the magician's point of reference is enlarged as his or her consciousness and identity is obliged to expand from the microcosmic world of the elements to the macrocosmic greater world—the world characterized by the sun orbited by the planets and surrounded by the belt of the zodiac.

This is very basic stuff, but it illustrates how rituals enable the ceremonial magician to externalize internal processes and undergo self-transformation. Would-be magicians who attempt more advanced work without being adjusted by these early attunements are ill prepared to understand or properly absorb what is happening to them within the context of the progressively higher magical environments in which they presumptuously wish to operate. It is true that some magicians may receive seemingly dramatic and noteworthy effects from such premature efforts, but seeds of promise cannot long take root in soil that is not properly prepared or that is too shallow.

Late in 2005, while gathering material for yet another workshop series on Enochian magick for my Monday night magick class, I poured over the records of Dee and Kelley's pre-Enochian workings in hopes of finding the key to their preparatory processes. What exactly did the angels do to Dee and Kelley during the years prior to the final Enochian revelations? Dee and Kelley received some pretty interesting things during those earlier workings, including instructions for the creation of an array of magical implements that the Golden Dawn and Crowley all but ignored:

- a Ring;[29]
- a Lamen, which was to be worn by the magician as a breastplate and which connects him or her to the Holy Table;
- the Holy Table itself, inscribed with letters from an angelic alphabet and upon which would rest the Sigillium Dei Aemeth;
- the Sigillium Dei Aemeth, an intricately carved disk made of purified beeswax (an artifact so stunning and historically intriguing that it is prominently displayed today in the King's Library wing of the British Museum);

- seven talismans (five squares and two circles), called Ensigns of Creation, which surround the Sigillium on the Holy Table.

All of these items were linked to one another and to the magicians by an overwhelmingly complex process that distilled, shuffled, and organized thousands of letters from numerous and varied alphanumeric grids. These grids had been painstakingly received in vision, one letter at a time, by Kelley and duly transcribed by Dee. The letters spelled the names of great angels, which, in turn, when manipulated, yielded the names of subordinate angels, which produced still more names.

Now, before we get too excited about dusting off and playing with all these pre-Enochian magical tools and furniture, I have to make myself clear on one very important point. These items were received during the first phase of Dee and Kelley's workings.

This period yielded a unique system of planetary magick they referred to as Heptarchia Mystica (see book II). To all appearances, heptarchic magick has little or no direct relationship to the Enochian magick system they received during their final days of practice. Also, it is demonstrably clear (in my mind at least) that Enochian magick can be performed quite effectively without using the Ring, the Lamen, the Holy Table, and so on. However, it is equally clear to me that, as Dee and Kelley were receiving and working with the items and concepts of heptarchic magick, their minds and psychic bodies were, day by day, undergoing subtle yet profound evolutionary changes.

Could the reason the practical Enochian material came so very late in the game be that Dee and Kelley had to first complete their transformation into magicians who could appreciate and handle the advanced work? After all, isn't that what magick is really about—changes in the magician? Could these changes have been brought about by the mere act of meticulously following the angels' complex directions, which filtered and distilled these magical concepts into material manifestation? If so, this would be a vital preparatory step that modern Enochian magicians are omitting entirely.

I grew intrigued with this idea. Given the fact that the GD/Crowley methods of Enochian magick already work so well right out of the box, how much better might these same techniques work if the magician were first prepared and attuned in a manner similar to the way Dee and Kelley had been prepared and attuned. A magician so equipped would be picking up, as it were, where the two Elizabethans left off in 1584.[30]

I was at first uneasy with this theory because it came dangerously near to destroying my comfortable philosophy of "Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!" However, my inherent laziness was rewarded, and I eventually took comfort in the realization that in order to ceremonially prepare oneself to perform Enochian magick, one might not need to torturously repeat everything Dee and Kelley did to receive the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. Instead, one must simply understand and use (in a way that mirrors the preparation process) the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth that they received!

This book was written to show the practicing Enochian magician how to do precisely that, and the little ritual in chapter one (and outlined in greater detail in appendix I) is the ceremony that embodies this preparation process. Like the rituals of the pentagram that prepare us for elemental magick, like the rituals of the hexagram that prepare us for planetary magick, I believe this little ceremony captures the essence of the step-by-step processes of personal alchemy that prepared and attuned Dee and Kelley.

The material is based on two series of classes that Constance and I held in our home in 2005 and 2006—visionary workings that spanned a period of just over seven months. While the class spent a considerable amount of time discussing and analyzing the magical theories that underlie these methods of preparation, most of our time was spent actually applying the techniques in a formal and ceremonial manner prior to group and individual Enochian scrying sessions.

My biggest challenge, for both the class series and writing this book, has been how best to communicate the essence of the breathtakingly intricate procedures that occupied Dee and Kelley during their years of preparation without enmeshing the reader in a time-devouring web of details. It is somewhat like trying to convey the profundity of a great cathedral without dwelling minutely on every action of every stonemason who fashioned each perfect stone. I have resolved, therefore, to stay focused on the big picture and allow the reader to wrap his or her mind around the major themes, secure in the knowledge that he or she can proceed to dissect the method of the madness—and discover further revelations—by referring to the now readily available source texts. It is very important for the reader to understand that this book was not written as a substitute for the source material but simply as a guide to the practical, self-transformational applications of this magical art. I advise those of you who may be committed to in-depth academic research of this subject not to view my book as an authoritative replacement for the original texts. Dee and Kelley's records are liberally peppered with irregularities, conflicting instructions, missing pieces, and typos. I've done my best to wade through these and be as consistent and accurate as possible. But when I say I'm going to stay focused on the big picture, that is exactly what I mean.

Are you ready to begin? If so, we need to first talk briefly about the mind of Dr. John Dee and explore the reasons why the secrets of heaven and earth were communicated to him in alphanumeric ciphers, tables, and squares.

CHAPTER FOUR

The Mind of a Cryptographer

Now first I understand what he, the sage, has said: "The world of spirits is not shut away; Thy sense is closed, thy heart is dead!"

—Faust, Act I, Scene I[31]

Are angels, spirits, and demons real? Do they have an existence apart from and outside the mind? Ever since human beings could frame thoughts into words, we have asked ourselves that question. It is an eternal debate among magicians and mystics and one that likely will never be resolved to anyone's complete satisfaction. Personally, I agree with the venerable Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford who said, "It's all in your head. You just have no idea how big your head is."[32] Certainly every outside impression we receive is ultimately processed inside our own minds. Just keeping that fact in mind we might conclude that, where objective reality is concerned, there is no outside-of-ourselves.

In either case, in the art of magick, the magician must behave (at least for the duration of the operation) as if the spirits are independent intelligences and have an objective existence in a dimension outside his or her own mind. Dee and Kelley (who believed most fervently in a tangible heaven, hell, and the characters and events of the Bible) certainly assumed that the communicating spirits and angels were real and enjoyed an independent existence. This gave the Elizabethan partners a decided psychological edge over modern magicians, who must overcome a smug mountain of logic, rationality, and spiritual cynicism in order to even begin to operate this most naïvely romantic of spiritual art forms.

For practical purposes, it does not matter whether the magician is making contact with "spirit" intelligences from a "spirit world" or merely tapping into currently unexplainable levels in his or her own mind. If the magician is properly prepared (and operating under the right circumstance), it is indeed possible for him or her to make contact with intelligences that for all intents and purposes could be characterized (objectively or metaphorically) as angels, spirits, and demons.

No two individuals are alike, and the art of preparing oneself and arranging the right circumstances for spirit contact is unique for every magician. For us to understand the elements of Enochian magick, we will need to get a basic idea of how the spirits went about reaching the minds of Dee and Kelley—especially Dee, who was, after all, the operating magician. In fact, there are instances where the communicating intelligences indicated that they viewed the two magicians as a single entity with Kelley acting as an extension of Dee's mind. On April 28, 1582, Dee asks of the archangel Michael, "You mean us two (Dee and Kelley) to be joined so, and in mind united, as if we were one man?" and Michael answered, "Thou understandest."

As I mentioned earlier, Dee was not a particularly talented scryer. Although his diaries record several instances when he saw certain spirits and phenomena, he relied almost entirely on the visionary skills of others. This makes perfect sense to me. Dee's immense intellect was actually a magical handicap. His magnificent brain was too engaged to surrender its analytical control. His mind worked too fast, and his thoughts were too loud to hear the subtle messages from the spirits. This is not good for mystical experiences. In order for the communicating intelligences to get past Dee's constantly churning mind, they had to force him to use his mind to overcome his mind. They had to beat his brain at its own game.

And what were the favorite games of Dr. John Dee's brain? Ciphers, codes, puzzles, magick squares—these were the arts that touched Dee's sense of wonder. Had he been obsessed with music, the spirits might have communicated to him through melodies or harmonies or rhythm. Had he been a dancer, they would have communicated through elements of body movement; had he been a military man, they would have through the metaphors of battle. But he wasn't a musician or a dancer or a soldier. Dee was, at heart, a cryptographer—perhaps the best in the world—and whether he consciously realized it or not, this was how he could make contact with his subconscious mind. This is how he expected the cosmos to unveil her secrets to him. For Dr. John Dee, the secrets of the universe were codes that could be broken. Divine revelation was a matter of decipherment, and he was willing to work for it. Indeed, by working for it, he would prepare himself to receive it. Give me the raw data, and I will decode the mind of God.

Dee was already looking for that raw data the day Edward Kelley first knocked on his door. He was looking for it in the Book of Soyga.

CHAPTER FIVE

The Book of Soyga

Dee: Is my book of Soyga of any excellency?

Uriel: That book was revealed to Adam in Paradise by God's good angels . . .

Dee: . . . Oh, my great and long desire hath been to be able to read those tables of Soyga.

—JOHN DEE AND THE ARCHANGEL URIEL, MARCH 10, 1582[33]

Even before Dee met Kelley he was immersed in the study of a magical treatise written in Latin called Aldaraia sive Soyga: Tractatus Astrologico magicus or, more simply, the Book of Soyga.[34] We know that Dee was intrigued by the Book of Soyga because his diary records that it was the subject of one of the very first questions he asked of the archangel Uriel during Edward Kelley's inaugural scrying session on March 10, 1582. In later diary entries he laments that he has misplaced his Book of Soyga, and still-later entries indicate that he eventually found it.

The book is an anonymous, late-medieval grimoire of planetary, angelic, and demonic magick that is in many ways not too dissimilar from other magical treatises of the period. However, there are several things that distinguish Soyga—things that obviously made it particularly attractive to Dee. For one thing, a great deal of the text concerns itself with alphanumeric exercises and puzzles; letters with numerical, astrological, and elemental values, which are combined, recombined and reduced to form magick words (spelled forwards and backwards), all of which contain increasingly complex values and magical virtues. As we will see, this magical letter distillation process is characteristic of Enochian magick.

Perhaps most intriguing to Dee were the last eighteen leaves of Soyga. These pages contain thirty-six tables, each comprising a grid of 1,296 squares, arranged in 36 x 36 grids. Each of the tables' 1,296 squares is filled with a Latin letter. Together the tables could form a cube comprising 46,656 squares. Each of the thirty-six tables is identified by an astrological or elemental symbol; the first twenty-four are attributed (in pairs) to signs of the zodiac, the next seven to the planets, the next four to the elements (Fire, Water, Air, and Earth), and one simply to "Magistri."[35,36]

For our purposes, I impress upon the reader's mind the profound importance of alphanumerics and how much information can be encoded within a grid of a magick table. I will try to demonstrate this with a very simple illustration, shown in figure 1.

♆ A 1	♅ B 2	♄ C 3
♃ D 4	♂ E 5	☉ F 6
♀ G 7	☿ H 8	☽ I 9

This table is made up of nine squares. Each square contains one of nine letters, and these letters can be considered by themselves or in combination with the others to spell magical words. Each individual letter has many traditional meanings attached to it. To keep things simple, I've arbitrarily assigned just two correspondences (numerical and planetary) to each of the letters; these are shown in the corners of each lettered square. Theoretically, the number of correspondences each square can represent is nearly infinite.

For example, in this particular table, c not only represents the letter c but also the number three and all things threeish. What do I mean by threeish? One very big example is all things in the universe that exist in time and have movement, and all things that have a beginning, a middle, and an end. In this example c also represents Saturn and everything Saturnian (from wisdom and restriction to darkness, old age, and lead).

Like DNA, alphanumeric squares carry an unimaginably vast amount of information in a deceptively small package. As a resident of our 3 x 3 table, the c square also carries information drawn from its position relative to the other letters and their correspondences. Can you begin to see how much information is contained in that one little square alone? Imagine, then, the mass of complex data that could be tightly stored in a 36 x 36 x 36 square cube represented by the Book of Soyga.

I've discovered no evidence of a direct connection between the Book of Soyga and any of the magical workings that led ultimately to the reception of Enochian magick. Nevertheless, the fact remains that even before Dee met Kelley, the mechanics of the alphanumeric cipher system, as presented in Soyga, captured Dee's analytical imagination and had become part of the way he expected to receive divine information. Indeed, at every phase of Dee and Kelley's workings, alphanumeric squares and codes would play a major role.

We know Dee held the Book of Soyga in high regard and was particularly preoccupied with learning the secrets of the thirty-six tables. The magical process of the Book of Soyga (shuffling and distilling immense numbers of letters and squares into smaller and smaller bits of concentrated information) would become the modus operandi by which the spirits would ultimately communicate the secrets of Enochian magick to Dee and Kelley. It would be the method by which they received the Holy Table, the Lamen, the Ensigns of Creation, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Table of Nalvage, the Elemental Tablets, and, most dramatically, the angelic language and the forty-eight calls. In a way, this process is a metaphor of the mechanics of creation itself. As Carl Sagan[37] said, "If you wish to make an apple pie from scratch, you must first create the universe." In this case, our apple pie is the manifest universe—the world as it presently exists—the world Dee and Kelley wished to understand and magically affect.

This world is the end product of a progression of cosmic events that physicists believe began with an immeasurably dense singularity (containing all the potential information that would eventually become the universe) that burst open and set into motion the phases of creation. The immensely packed assembly of thirty-six 36 x 36 alphanumeric squares found in the Book of Soyga is a crude but appropriate model for such a singularity. The intricate process of combining, shuffling, and distilling information-packed squares magically mimics the astronomical processes by which atoms and elements to stars and planets were formed in the creation cycle from seemingly chaotic units of a potential universe.

The Book of Soyga did not play a direct role in the magical operations of Dee and Kelley, but the patterns and formulae it embodied would remain the methodology of their angelic communications until the end of their association. I believe that the two magicians, by taking part in this incremental process of creation, became personally attuned to the magical universe as it presently exists, and thus prepared themselves to receive and engage in Enochian magick. In the chapters that follow, I will present only the briefest snapshots of the step-by-step process that I believe was the attunement program that prepared Dee and Kelley to receive the Enochian magick system. Hopefully, by your participation in the process, you also will undergo (however vicariously) a similar transformational experience and become fully prepared to actually practice Enochian vision magick.

But first, let us pray.

CHAPTER SIX

Let Us Pray

No man should ever undertake any great or important undertaking without first invoking the blessing of God.

—Master's admonition, California Free and Accepted Masons

The whole secret may be summarized in these four words: "Inflame thyself in praying."

—Aleister Crowley[38]

One of the most fundamental and important magical tools Dee used throughout his life was prayer. So, before we begin to examine magick rings and protective breastplates and holy tables and other such wizardly items, we need to first get something straight about prayer.

It's okay to pray. Even if you think you don't believe in the same God that Dee and Kelley believed in, it's okay to pray. I realize for many twenty-first-century magicians the word prayer carries with it unpleasant memories of childhood church and Sunday school traumas, and bedtime fears that "if I die before I wake" somebody was going to take my soul to God knows where.

In magick, prayer has nothing to do with religion. It does, however, have everything to do with the magician's grasp of facts of life in the magical world in which he or she intends to operate. Part of that reality is the mystical fact that existence itself is an expression of consciousness, and there are levels of consciousness higher and lower than the one we are currently attuned to.

By the simple act of uttering a prayer, our apparently limited consciousness reaches out and makes contact with a higher level of consciousness, and by doing so, we insert ourselves into the divine circuitry of the cosmos. As we do, part of us (a part that we might not be aware of) wakes up, as it were, and recognizes our rightful place in this circuitry.

In my book The Key to Solomon's Key,[39] I illustrate this concept using the legend of King Solomon as my example. In the excerpt below, I discuss prayer in the context of spirit evocation, but the same thoughts hold true to all forms of magick, including Enochian.

> The third chapter of the book of Kings[40] tells us that at the beginning of his reign the Lord appeared to Solomon in a vision by night and said, "Ask that which I should give you." Solomon answered:
> > "Give therefore to thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people and to discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?" And it pleased the Lord because Solomon had asked this thing. And the Lord said to Solomon, "Because you have asked this thing and have not asked for yourself riches, neither have you asked the lives of your enemies nor have you asked for yourself long life, but have asked for yourself wisdom to discern judgment; Behold, I have done according to your words; lo, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there has been none like you before you, neither shall any arise after you like you."[41]
> Before undertaking the task of ruling his people and building the Temple, Solomon doesn't begin by consulting with his inferiors (his ministers, his generals, his architects, his building-supply contractors, or labor leaders). He doesn't immediately enmesh himself in the energy-draining details of micromanaging > such a huge and important project. Instead he turns his attention upward to the highest level of the hierarchical scale of consciousness. He makes direct contact with Deity and, instead of behaving like a helpless youngster asking a parent for pocket money, he boldly makes himself available to serve as a conduit through which the Deity's infinite wisdom and understanding can pass.

>
> This profoundly mature and uncomplicated request is instantly granted, as if Deity had no choice but to acquiesce. A unique[42] spiritual hierarchy is created, with Solomon enthroned midway between heaven and hell—poised to work in cosmic harmony with the divine consciousness above him, poised to compel the infernal spirits to do the same.
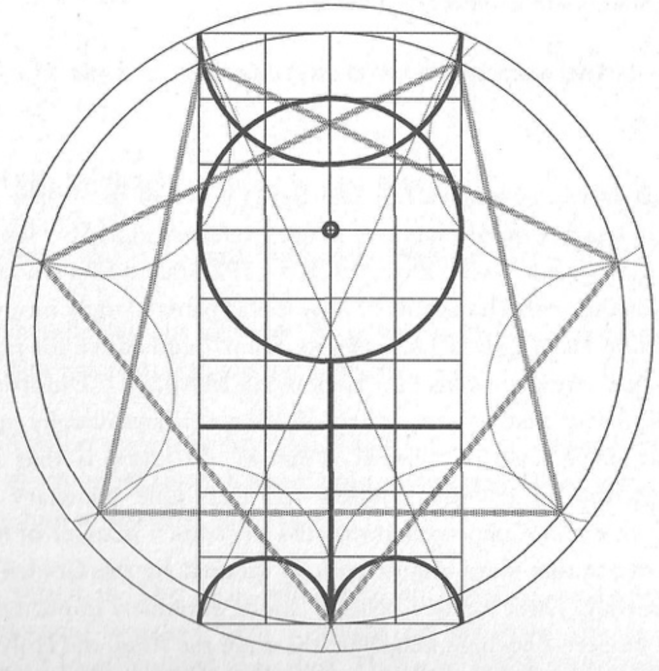
> This is the primary secret of Solomonic magic. As long as the magician remains plugged in to that which is above, he or she is simultaneously plugged into (and must begin to master) that which is below.[43]

Dee's prayers, both in English and Latin, fill page after page of his diaries and magical records. I confess I am neither inclined nor devotionally equipped to follow his exhausting example. I do, however, recognize the efficacy of prayer as an indispensable preliminary to magical operations. And, while I do not personally believe that the biblical Solomon ever existed as such in empirical history, as a magical artist I embrace his myth and happily adopt him as a patron saint of magick.

How appropriate, then, that the first magical tool Dee and Kelley would receive from their angelic contacts was the Ring of Solomon, and that before putting on that ring, the magician must first pray.

BOOK II

De Heptarchia Mystica



CHAPTER SEVEN

The Ring

Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon.

—The archangel Michael, March 14, 1582

The first system of magick Dee and Kelley received from their angelic contacts was a form of planetary magick referred to as De Heptarchia Mystica. It was delivered mostly in late 1582 and amended somewhat the following year. The details of how it was painstakingly received are recorded in Dee's Quinti Libri Mysteriorum[44] and edited for purposes of practical working in his "De Heptarchia Mystica."[45] Unfortunately, we don't know exactly how, or even if, the magicians actually operated this particular form of magick. What we do know is that besides receiving the names and symbols for forty-nine planetary "good angels" Dee and Kelley were instructed to create a number of magical items—items that were almost entirely ignored by the Golden Dawn and Crowley. These items, I believe, can be extremely important tools for the modern Enochian magician; these are the Ring, the Holy Table, the Ensigns of Creation, the Lamen, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

First we need to examine the Ring, for without the Ring the magicians were told they could "do nothing." Unlike most other things they would receive from their angelic contacts, the Ring was delivered in a relatively straightforward manner.

I will not quote long passages from Dee's records, but his description of the circumstances surrounding the reception of the magic Ring are so colorfully dramatic that I cannot resist quoting a brief passage. The date is Wednesday, March 14, 1582. Dee and Kelley were engaged in their fourth action[46] and experiencing a close encounter with the archangels Michael and Uriel. (The following excerpt retains the inconsistent spelling and punctuation of Elizabethan English. The Greek delta, Δ, is Dee, "Mi" the archangel Michael.)

> Δ: Now Michael thrust out his right arme, with the sword: and bad the skryer to loke. Then his sword did seame to cleave in two: and a great fyre, flamed out of it, vehemently. Then he toke a ring out of the flame of his sworde: and gave it, to Uriel: and sayd, thus:
>
> Mi: The strength of God, is unspeakable. Praysed be god for ever and ever.
>
> Δ: Then Uriel did make cursy unto him.
>
> Mi: After this sort, must thy ring be: Note it.
>
> Δ: Then he rose, or disapeared, out of the chayre, and by and by, cam again, and sayde, as followeth.
>
> Mi: I will reveale thee this ring: which was never revealed since the death of Salomon: with whom I was present. I was present with him in strength, and mercy.
>
> Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon: This is it, which I have revealed unto thee. This is it, which Philosophie dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels skarse know. This is it, and blessed be his Name: yea, his Name be blessed for ever.

Δ: Then he layd the Ring down uppon the Table: and sayd, Note.

Δ: It shewed to be a Ring of Gold: with a seale graved in it: and had a rownd thing in the myddle of the seale and a thing like an V, throwgh the top of the circle: and an L, in the bottome: and a barr cleane throwgh it: And had these fowre letters in it, P E L E. After that, he threw the ring on the borde, or Table: and it semed to fall throwgh the Table and then he sayde, thus,

Mi: So shall it do, at thy commanndement. Without this, thow shalt do nothing. Blessed be his name, that cumpasseth all things: Wonders are in him, and his Name is WONDERFULL: His Name worketh wonders from generation, to generation.[47]

Solomon was, and remains, the archetypal magician, and his legendary exploits as a master of spirits fill the pages of traditional Jewish, Islamic, and Ethiopian religious literature. In many of the stories, his magical ring played an important role as the source of his power to control demons. I can imagine Dee and Kelley were very impressed to be given the Ring of Solomon by none other than the archangel Michael himself.

Although the ring's design is unique, the word PELE (wonder worker) is found in two books which Dee already had in his library: De Verbo Mirifico by German humanist and Hebrew scholar Johann Reuchlin and Cornelius Agrippa's Occult Philosophy. (Agrippa apparently took the term from Reuchlin.)

Dee was told the Ring should be made of pure gold. If he indeed had one made, it has not survived the centuries. Realistically, few of us today have the skill to fashion or the resources to have a golden ring custom made.[48] Nevertheless, Michael seemed adamant, "Without this, thow shalt do nothing." And so I've come to the conclusion if I'm to practice this particular art of magick, then before I do anything, I'm going to wear the Ring.

Here is the pattern for a Ring that can be made out of colored paper or poster board. I realize such material is not as impressive or romantic as pure gold. You might even think that a true magick Ring cannot be made from a scrap of paper. You might tell me you'd feel silly wearing a paper ring. If you feel this way, then I hope you won't be offended when I tell you that if you can't make a real magick Ring out of paper, then you'll not be able to make one out of gold. The same goes for the other magical items I am going to discuss in the next few chapters.

Before I practice any aspect of Enochian magick, I recite two short prayers. The first is a prayer John Dee used regularly throughout the years of his magical workings:[49]

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.

The second is a prayer I fashioned from the words the archangel Michael spoke to Dee and Kelley during their March 14, 1582, action:

> Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

After reciting these prayers and putting on the Ring, I then position myself at the Holy Table and prepare to put on the Lamen.

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Lamen

Beware of wavering. Blot out suspicion of us, for we are God's creatures that have reigned, do reign, and shall reign forever. All our Mysteries shall be known unto you.

—THE ANGEL BRALGES, ONE OF THE ANGELIC PRINCES NAMED ON THE LAMEN, NOVEMBER 16, 1582, PRINCE BRALGES, NOVEMBER 16, 1582[50]

The Lamen and the Holy Table are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamen over the heart, the magician becomes linked to the Holy Table. I cannot say it any plainer than that. But putting on the Lamen and sitting at the Holy Table are empty gestures unless the magician has some idea of what these items represent and how they are connected.

The designs for both the Lamen and the Holy Table were distilled from tables composed of letters of the names of planetary angels of the Heptarchia. Even though the chronology of their reception is a bit tangled, it is probably easiest to discuss the Lamen first.

Traditionally a Lamen is a breastplate that is hung from the neck by a chain or ribbon. The breastplate of the high priest of Israel is the biblical archetype for this most important piece of magical adornment. It was a square plate, a 3 x 4 grid embedded with twelve precious stones representing, among other twelveish concepts, the tribes of Israel and the signs of the zodiac. The Lamen that the angels delivered to Dee and Kelley contained no precious stones but displayed eighty-four angelic letters arranged in a most curious and exacting manner.

Two versions of the Lamen were received by Dee and Kelley. The first, delivered in 1582, was a rather odd assortment of lines, squiggles, and letters reminiscent of Solomonic or Goetic sigils. This Lamen, they were told, was to be made in gold and worn as a protective device. After receiving it, the magicians spent the rest of the year and part of 1583 receiving material relating to the forty-nine planetary good angels of the Heptarchia (see figure 5).

The seven-letter names of these angels were received (much to Dee's cryptographic delight, I'm sure) by the complex manipulation and distillation of letters from a cross-shaped table composed of seven 7 x 7 tables (343 squares in all, each containing a number and a letter). This process was dictated by the archangel Michael during a grueling three-hour session. Just to give you an idea of the shape and size of this table, I've included a rough image without the letters and numbers.

The magicians were then instructed how to organize and arrange these 343 letters to reveal the hierarchy of planetary good angels. Each of the seven planetary spheres was assigned a king, a prince, and five ministers. Figure 5 shows how the 343 letters form the names of the forty-nine good angels and how they are arranged according to planet (starting at the top of the wheel and working counterclockwise: Venus, Luna, Saturn, Mercury, Jupiter, Mars, Sol). Note also that only the names of the kings and princes are in all capital letters.

It is obvious from the surviving material that some technique of practical magic was intended to call forth the heptarchic kings, princes, and ministers. Illustrations of flat wooden disks containing the names of the kings and other unexplained characters tantalize us with glimpses of an organized magical system. But the sad fact remains that important source material that could shed light on this has not survived the centuries.

However, just as amber encapsulates and preserves the essence of a prehistoric insect (right down to the DNA), so too the Lamen and the Holy Table capture the distilled essence of the heptarchic hierarchy and system.

After receiving the names, sigils, and hierarchical structures of the forty-nine good angels, the magicians were informed that the first Lamen they received during their actions the previous year was a false one, delivered to them by an "illuding spirit." They were given instructions how to create a new one, which was to be worn not for protection per se, but in order to "dignify" the magicians as worthy practitioners of this form of magick.

I'm going to try to illustrate (as painlessly as possible) how both the Lamen and the Holy Table were created and why I believe their use in Enochian magick is important. Now, the reader might be tempted to skim over the following material, invoking my slogan, "Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received." But I beg you to resist that temptation. By following through (even halfheartedly) the methods by which these magical tools were constructed, you will slip, however subtly, into the divine creative stream that produced them. You will become part of the same process that programmed and prepared Dee and Kelley.

The key to the construction of the Lamen was a 12 x 7 table containing the letters of the names (minus the initial b[51]) of the seven planetary heptarchic kings and their princes (see figure 6).

As you can see, the names of the kings are found on the right half of the table, the names of the princes on the left half. The names in this table are read from right to left. You will immediately notice that the kings of one planet are not matched on the same line as the prince of the same planet (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of on the line of the sun ☉ prince, Befafes).[52] This odd juxtaposition of planetary king and prince puts a certain strain on the sensitivities of those of us who like the order of our universe nice and symmetrical. However, this is the arrangement the angels insisted upon for the 12 x 7 table from which the Lamen was to be formed. As we will soon see in the following chapter, they will rectify the imbalance in the 12 x 7 table in order to create the Holy Table. But first let's continue to see how the Lamen is built.

The basic form of the Lamen is a table of twenty-four squares (arranged from top to bottom: 2—4—6—6—4—2) enclosed within diamond square, enclosed by a square, enclosed by a larger square.

The letters of the 12 x 7 table were applied to the Lamen by means of an exercise that first divided the table into three sections, described as flesh, heart, and skin. The letters were then transferred to the blank Lamen in three steps.

Step One: The letters of the flesh were added to the perimeter of the Lamen in their same relative positions to the 12 x 7 table.

Step Three: First, the corners of the skin letters were added to the corners of the innermost diamond square of the Lamen in a manner consistent with their relative positions on the 12 x 7 table. Second, the remaining twenty-four letters of the 12 x 7 table were then braided into the remaining squares in the center of the Lamen.

Dee was told that the Latin letters of the finished Lamen should be translated into the angelic script. (I'll discuss the angelic alphabet a bit later.) Figure 15 shows the completed Lamen with angelic letters.

As with the Ring, gold was the material suggested for the Lamen, but it can be made from paper or poster board. The Lamen I first used was printed on both sides (Latin letters on one side, angelic script on the other) and laminated in plastic. In the area just above the top center I punched a hole through which I threaded a black ribbon.

As I put on the Lamen I utter the prayer:[53]

Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

To understand what I mean by that prayer, we'll next need to turn our attention to the Holy Table.

CHAPTER NINE

The Holy Table

Every one of those sides must have 21 Characters: But first, at every corner make a great B.

—The angel Il, April 28, 1583[54]

Magick tables were nothing new to Renaissance magicians. Unlike the protective circle and triangle spirit-trap apparatus used by Solomonic magicians, a properly consecrated magick table in a room transforms the entire chamber into holy ground. The table itself becomes the Holy of Holies, the place whereupon earth and heaven touch. Drawings of the period show the magician on his knees, his arms stretched in supplication, before a magick table sheltered by a conical tent.

Dee was already using a table of practice before Edward Kelley entered the picture, but afterwards, as the elements of the heptarchic magick developed, it became clear that the communicating spirits wanted Dee to customize his table in a most specific manner. The angels wanted the Holy Table to be an "instrument of conciliation," made of "sweet wood,"[55] and built two cubits square and two cubits high.[56] The table was to stand upon a carpet of red silk that was large enough to accommodate the scryer's chair. Once the Sigillum Dei Aemeth and the seven Ensigns of Creation were in position, the Holy Table was covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that hung from the corners.

The scrying stone or black mirror was then placed upon the covered Sigillum.

The public's first view of the Holy Table (sometimes referred to as the Table of Covenant or Table of Practice) was published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon in his A True & Faithful Relation . . . .[57] It was Casaubon's image that was reproduced in 1912 in Aleister Crowley's magazine The Equinox[58] and numerous books since then.

It may come as a surprise to many (and be highly amusing to others) that Casaubon's impressively printed image of the Holy Table is perhaps the greatest flaw in his liberally flawed and ill-titled A True & Faithful Relation. One look at the description and drawing in Dee's Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Appendix[59] reveals the eighty-four letters that form the border of the Holy Table and the twelve letters that fill the 3 x 4 center square of Casaubon's image are printed in backward order. Figures 16 and 19 illustrate the correct arrangement of the letters on the Holy Table.

The Holy Table and the Lamen are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamen, the magician is linked, or conciliated, to the Holy Table. The object that forms this magical link and serves as the common denominator between the Holy Table and Lamen is the same 12 x 7 table that was used to construct the Lamen—the same table that bore the names of the seven planetary kings and the seven planetary princes of the heptarchic hierarchy.

Did I say the same 12 x 7 table? That's not entirely accurate.

Recall that when we were discussing the 12 x 7 table in the previous chapter, something appeared out of whack. The names of the planetary kings did not share the same lines as their planetary counterpart prince (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of his sun ☉ prince, Befafes). This planetary mismatch in the 12 x 7 table's construction did not appear to bother the angels, and indeed the "flaw" seemed to be a vital characteristic of the Lamen.

As you can see in Figure 17, the version of the 12 x 7 table that is the key to the Holy Table "corrects" this imbalance by rearranging the names of the planetary kings to match those of the princes of the same planet. Furthermore, the table is reversed, so that the kings now occupy the left side of the table and princes the right, and the direction in which the names are read is reversed to read from left to right.

In my mind, the differences between the two 12 x 7 tables demonstrate a fundamental fact of life—the fact that even though human beings are an integral part of the hierarchy of spiritual beings, we currently find ourselves "on earth," trapped in a tomb of matter and to all appearances separated from the greater realities of the spiritual "heavens."

Qabalists tell us that we are created in the image of Deity—that we are, in the truest sense, a little reflection (a microcosm) of the great intelligence and creative force that creates, sustains, and destroys all things in the universe (the macrocosm). As Hermes Trismegistus said, "As above, so below."

That's all fine and good, and I go about my magical business as if it were true. But honestly, even though I'm composed of the same material that makes up the sun and moon and stars and angels and archangels and the supreme Deity, even though I am striving for self-awareness and do my best to be a divinely creative individual, still I don't feel much like the macrocosmic Deity. Compared to the macrocosm, my microcosm is way out of whack. My life is one of stress and imbalance. From where I stand, there is a very big break between Deity's above and Lon Milo DuQuette's below. I'm like the 12 x 7 table from which the Lamen is created: I've got all the condensed components of a perfectly tuned universe in me, but they are out of sync just enough to keep me from actually being the perfect reflection of the big "way things are."

I can really identify with the way the Lamen is constructed. Like it, my hierarchy of planets is mismatched and unbalanced. (Take one look at my astrological chart if you don't believe it!) Like the curious inconsistencies that characterize how the individual letters are transferred from the 12 x 7 table to the Lamen, my individual components are a litany of curious inconsistencies.

The 12 x 7 table that makes the Holy Table, on the other hand, sets this all straight. It is like the macrocosm showing the microcosm how it's done. As I sit before the Holy Table with the Lamen over my heart, I can almost feel the Holy Table's order and perfection pulling magnetically at my heart through the Lamen, connecting me by an almost tangible electric current to the Holy of Holies, pulling my heart and my attention toward the sacred spot in my living-room temple where heaven touches earth. The Holy Table is indeed an instrument of conciliation, an instrument of reunion.[60]

The letters of the 12 x 7 table are transferred to the Holy Table in the following manner. First, to make things a little easier to see let's turn the 12 x 7 table on its end.

The border of the Holy Table is first segmented into twenty-one cells per side. Per angelic instructions, the sacred letter B is placed in the four corners, and then the letters of the 12 x 7 table are inserted in the remaining cells as indicated by the four sets of arrows on figure 18. The 3 x 4 square in the center of the Holy Table is extracted from the central heart of the 12 x 7 table, as highlighted in figure 18.

The arrows around the edges of figure 19 (see page 54) show that the letters are arranged to generate a counterclockwise whirl. In the Ritual of Preparation of chapter one, I chant seven rounds of the perimeter letters in this order using the angelic pronunciation. I also do the same for the twelve letters of the center square. By doing so, I effectively activate the Holy Table and the objects that sit upon it (including the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Ensigns of Creation, and the skrying mirror). The chant affects a powerful shift in consciousness unlike anything I have experienced before in magical practice.

As the manifest universe is the evolving end product of the dynamic forces that created it, so too the Holy Table manifests on earth as the perfect miniature working model of the heavenly matrix. It is a magical machine with many moving parts, all in perpetual motion.

the border of the Holy Table circumscribe the other objects on the tabletop with an eternal counterclockwise movement around the outside of the table's hexagram (symbol of the macrocosm).

Within, the twelve angelic letters in the 3 x 4 square in the center of the Holy Table's hexagram churn with the dynamics of the up-down/right-left movement suggested by its four rows of three letters networked with its three columns of four letters.

The Lamen is born of the same alphanumeric codes as the Holy Table, but its construction is flawed by a slight imbalance. So too the magician, in his or her present state, is the seemingly flawed *micro*cosmic reflection of Deity. By wearing the Lamen, the imperfect magician is linked to the perfection of the Holy Table, and while in this exalted state may become privy to the secrets of the *macro*cosmic universe.

The design of Dee's Sigillum Dei Aemeth ("the seal of God's truth") is perhaps the most recognizable image of Enochian magick. It is a powerful magical device, alive with the angelic forces of an ordered universe in which "Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is."

Unlike the hierarchies of the Lamen and the Holy Table, the Sigillum's hierarchy of angels was not condensed, distilled, or otherwise generated from the seven 12 x 7 tables from which the names of the forty-nine good angels were drawn. Nevertheless, the Sigillum is the centerpiece of heptarchic magick and is the object through which all heptarchic energy (if we dare call it that) is focused.

The Sigillum itself was a disk nine inches in diameter and approximately an inch and a half thick. It was made of pure beeswax and placed in the center of the Holy Table. The scrying crystal or black mirror was placed upon it. Four smaller wax versions were placed beneath small boxes, upon which stood the four legs of the Holy Table.

Dee was first told to simply copy the design from a book he already had in his library. But Dee had at least two volumes[62] that contained designs for sigilla. He couldn't make up his mind which one to use, so he asked for further clarification. The angel then gave instructions how to construct an entirely new sigillum based on the format of the others but adding an array of heavenly personages: seven god names enclosing seven sets of angelic names.

It is clear to me that the construction of the Sigillum was a vital step in Dee and Kelley's preparation program and that construction can serve that same important purpose to the modern magician as well. I'm going to walk you through the steps of how it is constructed, because I hope readers who are serious about actually doing magick, rather than merely studying it, will want to build their own.

I've provided you with a blank sigillum (figure 21), and I encourage you to make multiple photocopies of it. Enlarge it, if you wish, to nine inches in diameter. Then follow the step-by-step instructions. As you do, you will not only be building this magical device on paper, but you also will be installing it inside yourself. Constructing your own Sigillum Dei Aemeth is the fastest and easiest way I know to meet and connect with the angelic forces resident in the design and make them part of you. It may take you several tries to get it all right, but I'm confident when you have completed your Sigillum you will think it worth the effort.

Building the Sigillum

Step One: The Seven God Names

The seven god names were drawn from numbers and letters that appear in the forty cells that make up the perimeter of the Sigillum. The magicians were told to divide the outer perimeter of a blank ring into four sections. Then they were to divide each of the four sections into ten (making forty cells in all). Kelley then had a dramatic and colorful vision, facilitated by the archangel Michael, with the help of Uriel and the angel Semiael. In this vision, forty angels stepped forth, one at a time, and parted their garments to reveal one of three things:

1. a number positioned above a letter,
2. a letter positioned above a number, or
3. a single letter.

Some of the letters were capitalized, but most were lowercase. As they revealed their letters and numbers, each of the forty angels also uttered a different pious declaration in Latin, such as, "O God, God, our God, blessed are you, now and forever" or "And you are true in your works." Then the angel disappeared or was consumed in flashes of fire or other such dramatics. The magicians were then left with a string of numbers and letters, which I've arranged in a table (see figure 22).

←	4	9	7	t	22		6	22	20	14	6		18	26	l		l	7	13	H		y	t	o	e	10	11	15	8	r		6	o	5	h	o		a	a	6

	*	*																*		*								*				*		*

Figure 22: Outer perimeter bar code (the lowercase letter l is italicized so as to not be confused with uppercase I*)*

First make sure your blank Sigillum is oriented so that the pentagram in the center is pointing toward the top of the page. Then refer to figure 23 and locate the topmost cell of the Sigillum's outer perimeter—the cell that contains the number 4 over the capital letter T. Fill in that cell with a 4 over a T. Then, referring to the table (figure 22) and moving clockwise, fill in the remaining thirty-nine cells of the outer perimeter of your blank Sigillum as you see them in figure 23.

From the letters and numbers of the perimeter the seven god names and their sigils are drawn. The starting points for the god names are the cells that contain capital letters. These are also identified in figure 22 with asterisks beneath them.

From those starting points, note the number inside the cell and count your way to find the next letter in the god name. You count clockwise when the number in the cell is positioned above the letter, and you count counterclockwise when the letter is positioned above the number. Keep counting until you reach a cell that contains a letter but no number. That will be the last letter of that particular god name. It's almost like turning the dial of a combination lock, and, indeed, that's exactly what you're doing.

Confused? Don't be. It's much easier to actually do it than describe it. Just keep figure 23 in front of you as you follow the directions that follow.

Starting at the cell with 9/G in it (near the top of the circle), count nine cells clockwise (because the number is above) to 6/a. From there, count six cells clockwise to l/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise (because the letter is above) to 20/a. Count twenty cells clockwise to 8/a. Count eight cells clockwise to the single letter s. Because there is no number assigned to the s cell, we know that s is the final letter to this god name.

When all the counting is done, we have spelled the god name Galaas. The archangel Michael would later advise Dee and Kelley to alter the spelling (an archangel's prerogative) to Galas.

Michael assigned Galas a characteristic sigil and a number (see figure 24). He also instructed that the sigil and number of Galas should be placed on the Sigillum, in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately the eleven o'clock position (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galas and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Saturn.

Starting with 7/G (near the bottom of the circle), count seven cells clockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the unnumbered letters og to finish the god name Gethog.

Michael assigned Gethog the sigil and number shown in figure 25 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately nine o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Gethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Jupiter.

Starting with 4/T (near the top of the circle), count four cells clockwise to 22/h. Count twenty-two cells clockwise (because the number 22 is on top) to 11/A. Count eleven cells clockwise to a/5. Count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to the cell that contains the single letter h to finish the god name ThAaoth.

Again using his archangel's prerogative, Michael later advised Dee to slightly alter the spelling to Thaoth. He also assigned Thaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 26 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately seven o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Thaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mars.

Starting with H/12 (near the bottom of the circle), count twelve cells counterclockwise to 22/o. Count twenty-two cells clockwise to r/16. Count sixteen cells counterclockwise to 26/l. Count twenty-six cells clockwise to 6/ω.[63] Count six cells clockwise to single letter n, producing the god name Horlωn.

Michael assigned Horlωn the sigil and number shown in figure 27 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at six o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Horlωn and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Sol.

Starting with 15/I (near the left-hand side of the circle), count fifteen cells clockwise to 7/n. Count seven cells clockwise to 14/n. Count fourteen cells clockwise to o/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise to the single letter n, producing the name Innon.

Michael assigned Innon the sigil and number shown in figure 28 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately four o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Innon and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Venus.

With Aaoth, you have your choice of either (1) starting at 11/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting eleven cells clockwise to a/5 or (2) starting with 6/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting six cells clockwise to a/5.

In either case, once you get to a/5, count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to finish at h, producing the god name Aaoth.

Michael assigned Aaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 29 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately two o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Aaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mercury.

Starting at 5/G (near the left-hand side of the circle), count five cells clockwise to a/24. Count twenty-four cells counterclockwise to l/30. Count thirty cells counterclockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the single letters og, producing the name Galethog.

Michael assigned Galethog the sigil shown in figure 30 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately one o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Luna.

These seven god names—Galas, Gethog, Thaoth, Horlωn, Innon, Aaoth, and Galethog—are distilled into one supreme name. Strangely enough, the great name is also spelled Galethog. The code that reveals this distillation can be found on those little numbers that appear beside six of the sigils of the god names. Let's take a look at the supreme god name as it appears with the sigils.

Obviously, the sigils of the divine names contain the stylized letters G, a, l, xe, t, and og. The little numbers beside the letters point out seven landmarks among the forty cells: 5/G, a/24, l/30, e/21, t/9. Og has no number attached to it, confirming that it is the end of the supreme god name.

Step Two: The Seven God Names of the Outer Heptagon and of the Planetary Archangels

A heptagon (a seven-sided figure) rests just inside the perimeter of the Sigillum. Each of the seven bars that compose the heptagon is divided into seven cells and is filled with the names of the next order of angels in the hierarchy of the Sigillum. These seven names were drawn from a 7 x 7 (sevenfold) table delivered to Dee and Kelley in a series of brief and colorful visions (see figure 33).

When the table is read vertically, however, the names of the seven classic planetary archangels appear:

Zaphkiel	(Saturn)	Zadkiel	(Jupiter)
Cumael	(Mars)	Raphael	(Sol)
Haniel	(Venus)	Michael	(Mercury)
Gabriel	(Luna)

These archangels were assigned to these planets many years before Dee and Kelley received them and could have been found in any number of books in Dee's library. However, Dee and Kelley insisted that the table was given to them before they noticed these names were generated by the table. Whether we choose to believe their assertion or not, the fact remains that these particular angels are not unique to the Enochian system.

In order to read each archangel's name using the seven god names on the bars of the heptagon, we are obliged to project the letters in progressive layers rising from the surface of the Sigillum itself. I wish I could graphically illustrate this using the modern magick of animation, but you can demonstrate this for yourself. Let's turn to the first table in figure 35 and use the name of the planetary archangel of Saturn, Zaphkiel, as our example.

Start with the capital Z found in the first cell of the name ZllRHia, then move to the first cell of the name aZCaacb (to pick up the a), then move to the first cell of the name paupnhr (to pick up the p), then move to the first cell of hdmhlaI (to pick up the h), then move to the first cell of Kkaaeee to pick up the K, then move to the first cell of eellMG (to pick up the e). Finally, move to the second cell of the ZllRHia bar of the heptagon and pick up the final l to spell Zaphkiel.

I hope you can visualize what happens every time you move to another bar of the heptagon to pick up a letter in the archangel's name. As you move, you are literally shifting the dimensional structure of the Sigillum up another level—in the case of Zaphkiel, eight levels in all (see figure 36). (Picture the multilevel chess game played by characters on Star Trek.)

Compound this with the fact that Zaphkiel's name is braided together in these same layers with the names of the six other archangels' names. Viewed this way, the Sigillum is no longer a flat image placed on the flat surface of the Holy Table. It is a multidimensional space hovering over the Holy Table—a magical basket formed of the netting of the entwined letters of the names of the seven planetary archangels. It is within this invisible basket that the scrying stone or black mirror is placed during the magical operation. Is it any wonder visions appear in such an environment?

But we're far from through with the wonders of the Sigillum. Fill the cells of your personal Sigillum's outer heptagon, and then let's move inward another step.

Step Three: The Seven Names of the Planetary Angels Beneath the Bars of the Outer Heptagon

Just inside the bars of the outer heptagon are seven more divine names. These names are drawn from a second 7 x 7 (sevenfold) table given to Dee and Kelley, letter by letter, in vision. These names are read horizontally and placed beneath the bars of the outer heptagon.

S	A	A	I $^{21}_{\underset{\cdot}{8}}$	E	M	E $\underset{\cdot}{8}$

I	L	A	O	I $^{21}_{\underset{\cdot}{8}}$	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	$^{21}_{\underset{\cdot}{8}}$

You will immediately notice some of the squares in this table contain tiny numbers (21 over 8, 8, 26, 30, and so on) and variously placed dots. These are added to indicate the addition of the letter l or letters el or al (angelic suffixes) to the letter in the square, the better to spell out the names of the various angels this table will produce.

These names of these seven great angels are added to the Sigilum as shown in figure 38.

Step Four: The Daughters of the Light

Five more sets of planetary angels are drawn from the second sevenfold table. The first set was revealed in vision by seven young women (called "Daughters of Light" or "Women") clad in green silk. Each bore a little blue tablet on her forehead that identified her by name: El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, and Stimcul.

The names of the Daughters of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the upper right section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Although the angels were not identified with planets in the original material, the manner in which the vision proceeded to reveal these names suggests these seven angels carry the following planetary assignments:

E(l)	Saturn	Me	Jupiter
Ese	Mars	Iana	Sol
Akele	Venus	Azdobn	Mercury
Stimcul	Luna

The names of the Daughters of Light are placed on the Sigillum in clockwise order in the points created by the interlocking lines of the heptagram (see figure 40).

Step Five: The Sons of the Light

Next came seven young men (called the "Sons of the Light" or "Men") dressed in white, each carrying a metal ball: the first ball was gold, the second silver, the third copper, the fourth tin, the fifth iron, the sixth quicksilver, and the seventh lead. Each had a tablet of gold on his breast that identified him by name: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, and Stimcul.

The names of the Sons of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the lower left section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Step Eight: The Planetary Angels of the Pentagram

Finally, Dee and Kelley were instructed in a relatively straightforward manner how to arrange the names of seven planetary angels—Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semeliel (Sol), Nogahel (Venus), Corabiel (Mercury), and Lavanael (Luna)—around a pentagram at the very center of the Sigillum. These seven names are also drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading it in a zigzag manner, illustrated in figure 47.

Because the original Dee and Kelley material does not confirm the planetary attributions to all the various names on the Sigillum, I will not presume to do so either. I have, however, created a chart (see figure 49) that I currently use to help me in my meditations on the subject. I offer it along with the key to reading the names of planetary archangels from the first sevenfold table.

Step Nine: The Crosses

Once the names of these angels were placed around the central pentagram, a number of tiny crosses were added to the Sigillum in a curiously inconsistent manner (see figure 50).

And now your Sigillum is nearly complete. The only thing left to add is the design on the back. It is a very simple image of a cross dominating a small circle, around which are the letters of the divine word AGLA (an acronym for the Hebrew phrase Ateh Gibor Le-olam Adonai, "the Lord is mighty forever.")

Years ago, on a Christmas morning, I melted the stubs of scores of candles into a round Christmas cookie tin.[64] After the wax cooled and hardened, I removed the wax disk from the tin and set to work carving my own Sigillum. Other magicians I know have sealed their drawings of the Sigillum upon wooden disks that they purchased for pennies at a crafts store, or glued the image to foam board. Whatever the medium, I think the presence of the Sigillum is an important factor in creating the magical environment conducive to Enochian vision magick.

There is so much more the angels told Dee and Kelley about the Sigillum, including suggestions for how every letter in each of the names contains a set of angels, and on and on by sevens by sevens. I encourage you to continue your exploration of the Sigillum's mysteries. But now we must move on to the seven Ensigns of Creation, where I promise you a much shorter journey.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Ensigns of Creation

Of these seven tables, characters, or scotcheons. Consider the words spoken in the fifth book Anno 1583, April 2nd. How they are proper to every King and prince in their order. They are Instruments of Conciliation.

—JOHN DEE, FOOTNOTE TO Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Liber Tertius

The Ensigns of Creation are seven planetary talismans designed to be positioned on the Holy Table in a circle surrounding the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or laid out in a line along the edge of the table nearest the scryer. They were to be made of purified tin or else painted directly upon the Holy Table. Like the Lamen and the Holy Table, they are "Instruments of Conciliation" connected to the Heptarchia planetary kings and princes in a manner that, I must confess, is not altogether clear to me.

Five of them are square tables containing squares filled with numbers, letters, crosses, and lines. Two ensigns are a circle surrounded by a square. The letter B (Pa in the angelic language) is by far the most used letter in the ensigns.

The ensigns originally displayed Latin letters. The communicating angel would later insist that the Latin letters be replaced with the corresponding characters of the angelic script (see chapter fourteen). Dee was reluctant to do this and even asked the angel if he really had to. The angel said he must. We don't know if he ever did.

It is clear that the ensigns were to be utilized ritualistically, such as being held in the magician's hand during prayers or invocations. But information on exactly how things were to be done is incomplete, and there are no records whatsoever of Dee and Kelley actually performing rituals of heptarchic magick.

However, the ensigns remain part of the Holy Table ensemble, and their subsequent connection to the table and the magician's own Lamen make them, in my opinion, an integral component of the hierarchical current that charges the holy ground of the Enochian magick temple.

Figures 53 and 54 show the ensigns lettered in the angelic script. To my knowledge, this is the first time the ensigns have appeared in print in their correct form.[65] As with the Ring, Holy Table, Lamen, and Sigillum, the ensigns can be reproduced in paper board or whatever material is at the magician's disposal.

Figure 55 shows the positions in which the ensigns are placed on the Holy Table around the Sigillum. Note they are positioned near the points of the Sigillum's heptagram.

The entire assembly is one big magical machine—the Sigillum resting like a sevenfold, multidimensional dynamo in the center of the Holy Table's swirling and churning angels and the circling Ensigns of Creation. The scrying stone or black mirror is placed upon the Sigillum at the very heart of this magnificent instrument like the monitor screen of a magical computer connected to the ultimate worldwide-web.

We have made only the tiniest scratch on the surface of Dee and Kelley's material of this period. There is much more information concerning De Heptarchia Mystica available to the serious student, and I encourage the reader who feels drawn to this system to make the effort. I know it is only a matter of time before some bright magician fine-tunes, perfects, and transforms the material into a workable magical system.

The focus of this book, however, is Enochian vision magick, and we must now move on to the second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations. Through our understanding of the Ring, the Lamen, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the Ensigns of Creation and of their construction, we have prepared ourselves to meet with angels on the holy ground of our temple.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Do I Need All This Stuff?

Never since the beginning of the world was this secret delivered, nor this holy mystery set open, before the weaklings of this world.

—THE ANGEL IL, APRIL 29, 1583

The question I'm sure many of you are asking at this point is, "Do I need all this stuff?"

During the classes that I conducted in our home in 2005 and 2006 (with experienced magicians) and subsequent day-long workshops I've conducted around the country with people having little or no prior magical experience) it has become abundantly clear to me that the magical objects and "furniture" Dee and Kelley received during the Heptarchia periods (the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamen, the Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth) can and should be formally employed in order to create the specific environment of consciousness conducive to the practice of angelic vision magick.

Furthermore, it has been my observation that regular and repeated activation of this magical "temple" by means of the little ritual outlined in chapter one (and laid out more fully in appendix I) can attune the magician to this uniquely ordered universe and serve to progressively strengthen and enhance his or her visionary capabilities.

Most exciting for me was the discovery that once the magician is prepared and the temple activated the angelic forces (especially the good angels resident in the Holy Table, Lamen, Ensigns of Creation, and the planetary angels resident in the Sigillum) can be individually called forth or visited by means of classic evocation techniques or even informal extemporaneous prayers and conjurations. In other words, I believe that even if he or she never went on to practice Enochian magick per se, a resourceful magician, willing to experiment, and armed with a proper understanding of the tools and formulae of the Heptarchic periods would be already prepared to engage in angelic vision magick of a high order.

This is new territory for all of us, but it holds much promise, for it entails the possibility of contacting the same angelic forces that engaged Dee and Kelley throughout most of their day-to-day actions. Obviously, dealing with these angelic forces offers an alluring challenge for today's more intrepid magicians who, when frustrated by gaps and perplexities in the original material, will not be afraid to go straight to the communicating angels for guidance and clarification on how all this should operate. Indeed, I expect to see in the years to come exciting and viable magical systems develop as the result of the magical efforts of gifted practitioners who dare to make such angelic contact.

But do you need all this stuff?

My answer is this: In order to do this particular variety of magick you need all this stuff inside you. That's where the real magick takes place. But until such time as you have internalized all this (even in the most cursory and general manner) it is necessary to have some outward, visible, material representation of the magical concepts and forces you are dealing with.

I suggest, if you're serious about engaging in this magical art form, then you should, at the very least, provide yourself with a Ring, a Holy Table, a Lamen, a Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the seven Ensigns of Creation. Make them out of paper if you have to. Copy them straight out of this book if you have to. But have them. Make them real to you. Consecrate them by using them. Use them to create your Enochian magick temple.

The sense of art for some magicians is stimulated by replicating as much as humanly possible the tools and procedures as outlined in ancient texts. By doing so, they achieve a level of empowerment they believe is necessary to execute the work. Personally, my sense of art is quite happy with paper rings and photocopied Holy Tables. However, I have over the years been blessed with many talented colleagues who have generously helped me equip my temple so I might better demonstrate these things to others.

Here is as good a place as any for me to pause and describe what I believe the source material suggests would transform a clean uncluttered room into the holy ground of an Enochian magick temple.

The Temple

Upon the floor in the center of the room is a square carpet of red silk cloth large enough to accommodate the Holy Table and the chair of the scryer.

Upon the silken carpet are placed four miniatures of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of wax. They are covered and protected from the table legs by shallow cylindrical boxes.

Upon the box-covered sigilli rest the four legs of the Holy Table.

The Holy Table is made of sweet wood (laurel).

Upon the Holy Table, arranged as we've discussed, are the seven Ensigns of Creation (lettered in the angelic script) and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of purified beeswax, nine inches in diameter and an inch and a half thick.

The Holy Table and all the objects upon it are covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that dangle from the corners. This cloth should match in material and color that of the red silk carpet.

Upon the covered Sigillum the scrying stone (a crystal ball) or black mirror is placed.

The scryer's chair is placed on the carpet near the table. His or her feet should touch the carpet.

The Ring and Lamen should be near. The magician should ceremonially put them on at the beginning of each session and remove them at the conclusion.

Renaissance magicians often wore crowns and white linen robes, and on one occasion in preparation for a specific working, Dee and Kelley were instructed to wear white linen robes. In an operation that took place on July 13, 1584 (at the very end of the Enochian communications), the archangel Gabriel told the magicians:

> See that your garments be clean. Herein be not rash: Nor over hasty; For those that are hasty and rash, and are loathsomely appareled, my knock long before they enter.[66]

In practical operations conducted by my Monday night class and my Enochian magick workshops, everyone is shoeless and wears comfortable street clothes. In private sessions, such as the one I described in chapter one, I put on a simple black robe. Not only does it carry with it a certain personal magical virtue, but its color does not distract from the images reflected in the black mirror as I scry.

once, and severally, by themselves, by distinction many be spoken.
Until thou come to the City, thou canst not behold the beauty thereof.

—THE ANGEL ME TO JOHN DEE, EASTER DAY, 1583[67]

The second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations remains, for the most part, a tantalizing mystery to modern students. Covering most of 1582 and 1583, it is a period characterized by considerable tension between the two magicians, but one that also produced a large body of work in the form of a book referred to at various times as Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus, the Book of Enoch, and Liber Loagaeth.[68] While in recent years Enochian scholars have courageously set out to give us a closer examination of this information, it unfortunately has not been enough to allow modern practitioners to develop anything near a workable system from this material.

One of the reasons more attention isn't paid to this period is the nature of the material itself and the nearly complete lack of direction concerning how it is to be applied. Also, the focus of the communications of this period is driven by Dee's very personal fixation on discovering lost books of the Bible, the Apocrypha, and in particular the Book of Enoch, which is mentioned in several places in the Bible. The resulting character of Liber Loagaeth is rich in apocalyptic imagery and prophetic sounding rhetoric. This has been seized upon in recent years by commentators who would project a patently sectarian interpretation upon the material, even going so far as to suggest sinister (perhaps even Satanic or Lovecraftian) motives behind the "angelic" communications.

We are all, of course, free to our own religious convictions and spiritual worldviews. After all, they are part of the magical artist's pallet of tools. I think it wise, however, to keep in mind that when we study the Dee and Kelley material, we are not only eavesdropping on questions framed in the minds of two sixteenth-century Englishmen and put in the context of biblical literature, but we are also hearing the answers to those questions given in such a manner as these men could understand—that is, framed within the same cultural and Biblical context. I'm sure if Dee had been a Chinese alchemist or an African shaman in these same circumstances, the angels would have communicated the same universal answers unencumbered by the apocalyptic nomenclature familiar to the Jewish or Christian mind.

Joseph Peterson wrote in the introduction of his marvelous book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery:

> The importance of Liber Loagaeth cannot be overemphasized. From it would "be restored the holy bokes, which haue perished euen from the beginning, and from the first that liued." The truths it contains will end religious disputes and restore religious unity. "Which when it hath spread a while, THEN COMMETH THE END."[69] In short, it will usher in the new age. Since the book is so central to these angelic communications, it is amazing that it has remained unpublished.[70]

Amazing indeed, but as I wrote concerning De Heptarchia Mystica, it is only a matter of time before someone cracks the code of this breathtakingly immense body of work. What do I mean by breathtakingly immense?

One surviving manuscript comprises forty-eight leaves, each containing 49 x 49 lettered squares, 115,000 lettered squares in all. Each square was filled, letter-by-letter, according to Kelley's vision. In the end, the magicians were left with forty-nine calls in an angelic language. (Note: These calls were not the same calls in the angelic tongue that would come later and form the centerpiece of the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's partnership.) Loagaeth literally means "speech from God," and the magicians were informed that the words of the forty-nine calls were the same as those uttered by God at the dawn of creation—in the same language spoken by Adam when he named all things.

Unfortunately, these calls were never translated (or else the material has been lost), and attempts by modern linguists have failed to find enough landmarks of a properly constructed language to put the calls of Loagaeth in the same category as the angelic language that would be received in the third and final phase of the magicians' actions.

Kelley's visionary skills were severely exploited during this period, and his visions were characterized by the presence of a dazzling light that both magicians could see. The light would fly out of the scrying stone and penetrate Kelley's head, putting him in a trance in which he could read and comprehend the text of Liber Loagaeth. He was, however, forbidden to translate it and told that God would later provide the translation. At the end of the session, the light would leave Kelley's head and return to the stone. When he returned to normal consciousness, he claimed to have no memory of the experience.

As tempting as it might be, I am, for the time being not incorporating any of the calls from Loagaeth in my Enochian-magick preparation ritual. However, something else of great importance came out of this period: the angelic alphabet.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Angelic Alphabet

He wiped his finger on the top of the Table, and there came out above the Table certain Characters enclosed in no line: but standing by them selves, and points between them. He pointed orderly to them with his finger, and looked toward the skryer at every pointing.

—EDWARD KELLEY DESCRIBING HIS VISION OF THE ANGEL'S REVELATION OF THE ANGELIC ALPHABET, MARCH 26, 1583[71]

I confess, even with clear copies and transcriptions of the source material in front of me, it has been very difficult for me to wrap my mind around the order of the visionary events of Dee and Kelley's years together. Because certain elements of these magical systems were often corrected or amended by the angels in subsequent visions, often occurring months apart, it is extremely difficult (for me at least) to present a clean chronology of events. The circumstances surrounding the reception of the angelic alphabet are no exception.

The alphabet was received during the Loagaeth period, but because the magicians were told to replace the Latin/English letters of the Lamen, Holy Table, and the seven Ensigns of Creation with letters from the angelic script, its influence reached back in time to touch the Heptarchia period as well.

The twenty-one characters of the angelic alphabet appeared fully formed in yellowish letters that rose in Kelley's vision above the table. The images of the individual letters then obligingly hovered over a sheet of paper and stayed visible long enough for him to copy them in ink before fading away.

Words in the angelic language are written from right to left, and that is the order the letters first appeared to Kelley. All twenty-one letters appeared in a single row and were separated by dots. There was also a dot preceding the first letter.

You will notice that the name for the first letter received, Pa, is the only letter whose name is capitalized. Pa, b in English, has a special significance in the magick of the Heptarchia. For example, the names of all the forty-nine good angels begin with b, the letter b appears overwhelmingly on the Ensigns of Creation, and each of the four corners of the Holy Table displays an oversized Pa.

This abundance of *b*s has caused several knowledgeable modern magical commentators to speculate that b must represent the number seven, the number upon which these magical systems seem to be based. While that makes a great deal of sense to me, I have nonetheless found nothing in the original material that would specifically suggest numerical equivalents to any of the single letters of the angelic alphabet.

What is very clear, however, is the fact that the communicating angel wanted Dee and Kelley to immediately memorize the letters of the angelic alphabet and the letters' names. Dee was a busy man and wanted to be excused from this time-consuming duty. The angel Me would have none of it. In this March 26, 1583, exchange, Dee tries to make the angel understand, "Look man, I've gòt a life!"

> Me: I instructed thee before-hand and told thee, that both of you must jointly learn those holy letters (For, so, I may boldly call them) in memory: with their names: to the intent, that the finger may point to the head, and the head to the understanding of his charge.
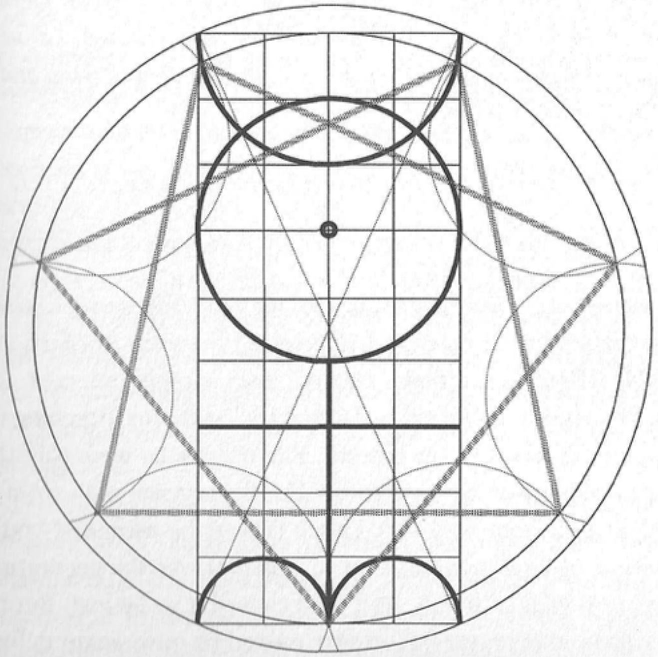
> Dee: You perceive that I have diverse affairs which at this present do withdraw me from peculiar diligence using to these Characters and their names learning by heart: And therefore I trust, I shall not offend, if I bestow all the convenient leisure that I shall get, about the learning thereof.
>
> Me: Peace, Thou talkest, as though, thou understoodest not. We know thee, we see thee in thy heart: Nor one thing shall not let another. For short is the time, that shall bring these things to proof.[72]

BOOK IV

Enochiana



CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Enochian Magick

The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was merciful unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown to his Parents, by reason of their fall : for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth : And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.

—The Angel Ave, Monday, June 25, 1584[73]

To my knowledge, Dee and Kelley never used the word Enochian to describe the system of magick they received between April 10 and July 13, 1584. Throughout their actions, they simply referred to it as angelic. We cannot, however, be faulted too badly for attaching the biblical patriarch's name to the system. The magicians were told that this was the magick given by God to Enoch (the seventh man from Adam) in the form of a book and that Enoch (before he ascended bodily into the presence of God) passed it on to others. Over the generations, the book fell into wicked hands, and God caused it to be lost. But because of Dee's piety and prayers, God was moved to once again deliver it to mankind.

These final days were an especially difficult period in Dee and Kelley's relationship. They and their families were living in Krakow, Poland. Their actions were regularly interrupted by "evil spirits," who encouraged the magicians to abandon the actions. Kelley was increasingly impatient and uncomfortable with the work, voicing his fear of the possible evil nature of the communications on one hand. Ironically, Kelley was at the time practicing demon magick behind Dee's back. Dee was furious when he learned of this. So were the communicating angels, who warned that such behavior attracted evil spirits into the magician's environment—an annoying and time-consuming distraction. Finally Kelley promised Dee and the angels that he would knock off the black magick.

The angels, too, appeared to be growing impatient with Dee and Kelley, as if they realized the magical chemistry that existed between the two magicians (the personal factors that made them such a perfect operator/receiver team) was rapidly disintegrating. In April, the magicians were told in no uncertain terms that the work had to be completed by August. The magicians met their deadline with time to spare. July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, saw the final communication that completed the reception of the angelic calls and provided the names of the thirty Aethyrs. Not only had the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's operations ended, but, indeed, the entire angelic adventure had also come to a close. The plug was pulled. The communicating angels fell silent.

The magicians would continue on and off for several years with visionary operations and unsuccessful mago-political adventures in Europe. But, with the exception of only three brief references in their subsequent diaries, they never again mention the angelic magick. One of those latter-day references (the Tabula Recensa), however, is very significant to the study of the Enochian magick period. I'll speak more on that very soon.

The reception of the Enochian material was (at least to my impatient attention span) even more confused and topsy-turvy than that which characterized the Heptarchia and Liber Loagaeth periods. Sadly, as we discovered in the two earlier cases, the surviving information, while abundant, still does not provide us with adequate information on how it all was supposed to work as a practical system of magick.

And here is where we must again tip our magical hats to S. L. MacGregor Mathers, the adepts of the Golden Dawn, and Aleister Crowley, who at the dawn of the twentieth century developed this material into a remarkably logical system of vision magick—a system possessed of the solid infrastructure lacking in the surviving source material, a system that, for all intents and purposes, offers the diligent practitioner a practical and elegant unified field theory of hermetic and qabalistic magick.

As applied most commonly today, Enochian magick is a two-part magical system: one part focusing on the elemental universe, the other on the aethyric. The former enables the magician to summon or visit in vision the spirits of the myriad levels of the elemental worlds of Fire, Water, Air, Earth, and Spirit; the latter enables the magician to systematically penetrate increasingly higher heavens (or Aethyrs) to access information from those heavenly levels of consciousness.

I will soon show how these two systems are operated. But before I do that, and in keeping with our program of systematic attunement, I need to introduce you to another magick table. It was the first revelation of the Enochian period, but it is also, in my opinion, the final component of the preparation protocol. This tablet was delivered to the magicians by the angel Nalvage in April of 1584. It is an item that was acknowledged by the adepts of the Golden Dawn but never incorporated into any practice. It is something, however, I believe should not escape our attention. No name was given to this object. Some modern scholars designate it simply the Tablet of God. I shall refer to it as the Round Tablet of Nalvage.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The Round Tablet of Nalvage

The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things.

—The Angel Nalvage, April 10, 1584

"The Method of Science—The Aim of Religion" was the official motto of The Equinox, the great magical periodical first published by Aleister Crowley and his colleagues in the early years of the twentieth century.[74] This same phrase could also comfortably serve as the watchwords that describe what the art of magick is to me.

Conversely, superstition (as the word is commonly understood) has, in my opinion, no place in the arsenal of the modern magician. This, I believe, is especially true concerning the practice of Enochian vision magick. In all my years of magical practice and exploration of this system, I have never encountered a single case of so-called psychic attack, demon possession, headache, hives, or hernia—indeed any ill effects whatsoever—resulting from the practice of this particular kind of magick.

That being said, strange and unexpected things do occasionally happen to those who practice magick. And while I believe it is bad for one's mental health to ascribe undue importance to these phenomena, it is important that they be dispassionately observed and recorded. So, before I discuss the Round Tablet of Nalvage and its importance to the system of Enochian magick, I feel I must share with you two little stories that might help you understand the level of respect I hold for this particular magical object.

Twenty years ago, I was teaching a class in Enochian vision magick at our home in Costa Mesa. This class was different from the Enochian magick classes I had taught previously, for it was the first time we would study and experiment with using the Round Tablet of Nalvage. In preparation for the first class, I decided to make a copy of the tablet out of wax (as I had done with my Sigillum Dei Aemeth). A friend had given me two massive, black wax candles shaped like giant chessmen (bishops). My plan was to melt these down in a round Christmas cookie tin and carve the squares and the angelic letters of the Tablet of Nalvage on the cooled wax disk.

It was a foolish time to be starting an arts project like this, because our landlord had just informed us he was bulldozing our house in two weeks and building apartments on our lot (thanks a lot!), and we were deep in the midst of packing up our things to move. Still, magick is magick, and life goes on. I put the two black wax bishops in the cookie tin and slid them into the oven. I set the heat on the lowest possible warm level and went out to the garage to help (watch) Constance pack.

As you might imagine, we had some very interesting things in our garage, many of which we hadn't looked at in years. We did more reminiscing than packing. I didn't forget the black wax bishops in the oven, however, and checked on them regularly. It seemed they were taking a long time to melt, so I turned up the heat a little higher.

Back out in the garage we found a stash of psychedelic artwork Constance had painted and drawn in the late sixties, when we were hippies living in the woods of southern Oregon. We hadn't seen them in fifteen years. What a treat! We lingered over them for probably ten minutes before I remembered the black wax bishops for the Round Tablet of Nalvage in the oven.

When I opened the back door, I found the kitchen dark except for a warm orange glow that, like a spectacular sunset, brightened the dark clouds of smoke that filled the house from the ceiling to about four feet from the floor. The oven was completely engulfed in flames. I ran into the living room and found our son, Jean-Paul, lying on the floor watching television completely oblivious to the black smoke pressing its way toward him from above.

Once he and the dog were evacuated, I called for Constance (always a level head in times of emergency), and we proceeded to attack the fire. When I opened the flaming oven, I discovered that one of the bishops had slid to the side of the cookie tin and parts of it had melted down the outside rim. The wax had run to the bottom of the oven and dripped down upon the pilot light, which then become the eternal flame of Costa Mesa. There was nothing we could do to turn off the oven. Constance eventually had to turn off the gas outside, and with the help of baking soda and wet towels, we got the fire out. I rescued the cookie tin and let it cool in the sink. A couple hours later, in the charred ruins of our kitchen, I carved a beautiful black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage.

Now, I'm the first to confess that this story has less to do with magick and superstition and more with my own carelessness and stupidity. (I am now forbidden to use the oven for magical crafts.) The accident did, however, serve to give me a healthy respect for the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a respect that in the last year has increased immeasurably. And that brings me to my second magical tale of Nalvage.

As we'll soon see, there is much we know about the Round Tablet of Nalvage. What we don't know is how it was intended to be used. As I was preparing for the class series that inspired this book, I debated with myself how (or even if) I was going to introduce it into our studies. After all, there is nothing in the source material that hints at what is to be done with it. Late in the afternoon, I prepared our living room temple for the evening's class. The Sigillum and ensigns were set neatly on the Holy Table; the table was covered with its red silk cloth, and the obsidian mirror was set in place.

I went to the closet cupboard in my office and took down my black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage from the topmost shelf. I unzipped its plastic bubble-wrapped envelope and carefully removed it. I had to admit, after all those years, it still looked magnificently magical. I took it into the living room and set it down upon the covered table. I sat down in my comfy chair, and in the warm glow of sunset (which brought to my mind the glow of our blazing kitchen so many years earlier), I meditated about how the Round Tablet of Nalvage fits into the system.

I didn't get much meditating done, because the moment I closed my eyes I fell asleep. I awoke just a few minutes before people would start arriving for class. I still didn't know how or if I was going to the use the tablet for the night's gathering. I hastily decided that if I didn't have sound reasons for using the tablet, I was going to skip it altogether—at least for that night. I took the tablet off the Holy Table, wrapped it back up, and carefully put it back on the top shelf of the closet cupboard.

I went to my desk to turn off the computer and gather things for class, when I was startled by the sound of something smashing against my guitar, which was mounted upright in its stand near the open closet door. With the guitar strings still ringing, I turned to see that the Tablet of Nalvage had flown from its shelf, ricocheted off my guitar, and was resting inches from my feet.

As a reasonably rational man, I am of the opinion that there is nothing supernatural in the world, just natural things that have yet to be explained. I'm sure there is nothing I can say to convince the cynic that the tablet hadn't fallen naturally from the shelf because I hadn't put it there properly. I remain, however, extremely impressed at the distance this object had to travel across physical space in order to strike the guitar and find its way to my feet at the very moment I had decided not to discuss it at that evening's class.

Needless to say, I changed my mind about the importance of the tablet, and in the few moments remaining before class members started to arrive, I composed the two-part chorus that incorporates the dynamics created by the letters of the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a chant that has become the last (and perhaps the most important) component of the Ceremony of Preparation.[75]

Now, let's take a brief look at those dynamics and how a chant based on the Round Tablet of Nalvage can be constructed.

The Tablet of Nalvage is not really round. It is a square divided into four squares (or continents) and surrounded by four outer bars (see figure 59). The continents and bars are subdivided into lettered squares (nine squares per continent and four squares per bar). But before we start filling in the letters, let's see what the angel Nalvage had to say about the continents.

Nalvage told Dee and Kelley that continents 1 and 2 are "dignified," while 3 "is not yet dignified, but to be dignified," and 4 is "without glory or dignity." Nalvage described them in Latin as follows:

1. Vita suprema (highest life), the continent of "joy";
2. Vita (life), the continent of "potentiality";
3. Vita non dignificata, sed dignificanda (life not dignified, but which shall be dignified), the continent of "creation"; and
4. Vita est etiam haec, sed quae perperit mors ("Even this is life, but life which will be paid with death"), the continent of "discord."

Each continent contains nine letters that, when read in various ways, yield words in the angelic language. In order to more easily see these words, I have separated the tablet into its component parts (see figure 60).

When read counterclockwise, the outer bars of the tablet spell the names of four classes of angels: luah (praising angels), lang (ministering angels), sach (confirming angels), and urch (confounding angels).

idz – Gaudium – Joy aoi – Praesentia – Presence mzr – Laudantes – Praising	sai – Actio – Action god – Factum – Events urr – Confirmantes – Establishing bna – Potestas – Power daz – Motus – Motion iab – Ministrantes – Ministering	fos – Luctos – Lamentation sea – Discordia – Discord rdi – Confundantes – Confusing

Figure 61: Words and meanings of the words of the four continents

Figure 62 shows how the letters of the continents are read to reveal the nature of the divine powers resident in the tablet.

First notice how the three letters of outer corners of each of the four continents (upper left corner of upper left continent, lower left corner of lower left continent, and so on) all spell the Enochian word meaning God—iad.

Notice next that the three diagonal letters of continents spell the words moz (joy), bab (power), sor (action), and ser (lamentation).

Finally, the three letters of the inner corners of the continents spell the words zir (I am), zna (motion), gru (deed), and osf (discord).

The arrows in figure 62 show the beautiful symmetry the words create within the tablet. If we put the words of each continent together, we arrive at phrases such as:

Continent 1.	iad moz zir (I am the Joy of God.)
Continent 2.	iad bab zna (God's Power in Motion)
Continent 3.	iad sor gru (Result of God's Action)
Continent 4.	iad ser osf (God's Discord and Lamentation)

This rich tapestry of joy, movement, creation, and sorrow is contained and encircled by a counterclockwise whirl of the angels: luah, lang, sach, and urch.

Concerning the tablet as a whole, Nalvage said,"The Substance is attributed to God the Father."[76]

In reference to the letters on the outer bars, Nalvage said, "The first circular mover, the circumference, God the Son, The finger of the Father, and mover of all things."[77]

Referring to the continents and the manner in which their letters are read, he said, "The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things."[78]

Like the Holy Table, the Round Tablet of Nalvage, once decoded, displays divine and angelic words and names in perpetual motion in such a way that one can almost sense what is meant by the term choir of angels. In group workings, I break the participants up into two voices as we ceremonially chant the words from the tablet.

Voice One: luah lang sach urch

Voice Two: iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf

The effect is powerful even when I'm alone in the middle of the night and chant one voice at a time.

Once Nalvage described the dynamics of the tablet, he didn't go on to provide instructions on how, or even if, the tablet was to be used. Is it a talisman? Is it to be worn as the Lamen? Is it to be held or placed on the Holy Table? We don't know.

However, we do know that after the two magicians had become attuned to the structure of the Round Tablet of Nalvage, the entire remaining system of Enochian magick was revealed in less than ninety days. This has led more than a few magicians to speculate that the Round Tablet of Nalvage might be the key to a mysterious and unexpressed "first call" of the Enochian system, or perhaps even represent the call itself.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

The Forty-eight Calls

Move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the Mysteries of your Creation: Be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

—FROM THE FIRST CALL[79]

The centerpiece of the Enochian system is a collection of calls[80] in an angelic tongue that is significantly different from the language delivered in Liber Loagaeth. The reception of the calls followed that of the Tablet of Nalvage. They were first dictated to the magicians in the angelic tongue, then afterwards translated into English. Careful examination of the calls and their translations reveal that Enochian is a real language and not simply strings of barbarous names and words. The calls read like evocative hymns or invocations. They are constructed of real, sometimes breathtakingly beautiful sentences that can be translated (not merely transliterated). The language exhibits a remarkable consistency of word meaning from call to call. It has a form of grammar and syntax. This phenomenon, coupled with the multiple double-blind/letter-by-letter method by which it was received, makes this (in my mind at least) one of the most extraordinary aspects of Dee and Kelley's workings.

Technically, there are forty-nine calls. However, as the first call was said to be unexpressed, I will refer to them as if there were forty-eight.

They appear translated in their entirety in appendix II of this book, along with the keys to how they are put to use by modern Enochian magicians (see also chapter twenty-seven).

Beginning on April 10, 1584, the first four calls were painstakingly delivered, letter-by-letter (in backward order, because the angels at first voiced fears that the calls were so powerful it might be too dangerous to deliver them in a straightforward manner). As usual, the letters were drawn from an assortment of lettered grids. The angels also provided translations to the first four calls immediately after their delivery.

Then things changed. It appears that even the angels became impatient with this tedious method. They proceeded to deliver calls five through eighteen in a straightforward manner, but they would wait six weeks before delivering the English translations.

The fact that the translated words from the first four calls (delivered backwards) matched (or were otherwise linguistically compatible with) the translated words of calls five through eighteen (delivered forward and translated six weeks later) all but rules out the possibility that either Dee or Kelley invented the angelic language or the calls.

The nineteenth call (the Call of the Ayres or Aethyrs) and the names of the thirty Aethyrs (or heavens) were received on July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, effectively ending Dee and Kelley's angelic magick relationship. However, before that final communication, the angels would deliver an incredible amount of material to the two magicians between April 10 and July 13—material that three hundred years later would inspire the adepts of the Golden Dawn to develop the hybrid system we now call Enochian magick. I call it hybrid because the "Enochian" magick developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley is based on a number of assumptions that connect the forty-eight calls with other "Enochian" material Dee and Kelley received after the reception of the calls. I refer to what are now commonly called the Elemental Tablets, which I will discuss in detail in chapter twenty-three and beyond. While eminently logical and based on the most anal-retentive hermetic principles, many of the assumptions made by the Golden Dawn and Crowley were nonetheless not clearly made in the original Dee material.

First, however, we need to look at the circumstances that triggered the final and most astounding chapter in the story of the reception of Enochian magick. It all started with Dee wanting to spy on the king of Poland and ended with the reception of what appears to be nothing less than the printed circuit board of the mind of God.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The Ninety-one Parts of the Earth

Dee: Hey Nalvage, I'd sure like to magically eavesdrop on secret meetings between King Stephen of Poland and his ministers. I'd like to know if Count Albert Laski will soon succeed Stephen as king of Poland. Can you help me do this?

Nalvage: No problem, Dr. Dee. But first you have to understand how the universe where this can happen operates. You need to understand how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth.[81]

—Imaginary conversation, John Dee and the angel Nalvage

The fantasy dialogue above is more than just another one of my lame attempts to be witty. It describes what, for all intents and purposes, was happening during this phase of the Enochian magick revelations. Dee was indeed trying to squeeze from the angels some information regarding political intrigues in Poland. The angel Nalvage's response was to first try to explain to Dee the mechanics of how specific spirits rule specific parts of the earth. In doing so, Nalvage would ambitiously attempt to demonstrate how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth. The results of this revelation Dee would neatly memorialize thirteen months later in Liber Scientae Auxilii et Vitoriae Terrestris.[82]

Nalvage started by dividing the universe into thirty segments that would eventually be identified as Aires, or Aethyrs (see column I of figure 63). To the thirty Aires he assigned ninety-one parts of the earth (see column II), which he first referred to by the geographical name recognizable to the sixteenth-century magicians, such as Syria (see second name in column III), then by the name by which it is known in the divine realms, such as Pascomb (see second name in column IV).

He then assigned each of these pairs of names to one of the twelve mythical tribes of Israel, along with their directional coordinates, an angelic king, and a respectable number of good ministers.

All this information and more can be found in figure 63. Columns I through V contain the information Dee and Kelley received at this stage of the reception. The symmetrical characters found in column VI and the names of the good princes of the Air in column VII were delivered to Dee and Kelley at a later date than the information in columns I through V. This fact will have astonishing significance when we examine the circumstances and sequence of events that brought to a close the angelic adventures of the two magicians.The key to the columns of the table is as follows:

Column I	Number of the Aire
Column II	Sequence of the ninety-one parts of the earth
Column III	Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by man[83]
Column IV	Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by God (Note: These are also the names of ninety-one governors of the Aethyrs; see chapter twenty-eight.)
Column V	(from top to bottom) Tribe of Israel, quarter of the earth assigned to the dispersed tribes of Israel, angelic kind, number of good ministers
Column VI	Divinely ordained symmetrical characters (see chapter twenty-one) (Note: The mystery of the missing symmetrical characters 28, 29, and 30 would be revealed to Dee and Kelley later; see chapter twenty-four.

Column VII Names of the good princes of the Air (Note: These are also the names of the thirty Aethyrs; see chapter twenty-eight.)

Using the second of the ninety-one parts of earth, Syria, as our example, we see that its divinely ordained name is Pascomb. The tribe of Zabulon is assigned to Syria/Pascomb, as are the angelic king Zinggen and 2,360 good ministers.

In order for you to appreciate the amazing circumstances surrounding the reception of the Enochian material, it will be important for you to have a general understanding of the chronology of events that took place in the spring and early summer of 1584. This I will try to provide in the following chapter.

The Golden Talisman and the Watchtowers of the Universe

Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the secret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by such as govern her, at your pleasure; and call her to a reckoning, as Steward doth the servants of the Lord.

Very early on the morning of Wednesday, June 20, 1584, Edward Kelley was aroused from a sound sleep by someone (something) patting him on the head. He opened his eyes and beheld an angel, "clothed with feathers, strangely wreathed about him all over, etc." standing at the head of his bed. The angel would later identify itself as Ave, one of the Sons of Sons of Light from the Sigillum Dei Aemeth (see chapter ten). Ave proceeded to project a vision that would dramatize the elements and structure of the entire system of Enochian magick as widely practiced today. The following is from Dee's diary:[85]

> There appeared to him [Kelley] four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the sound of a Trumpet. Then it seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more than the breadth of a Tablecloath . . . [86]
> . . . Out of every Gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.
>
> After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign Bearers.
>
> After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.
>
> Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.
>
> After him came five men, carrying up of his train.
>
> Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.
>
> These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.
>
> After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.
> After them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and to spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

The highlights of Kelley's vision would eventually be memorialized upon a round talisman etched in gold, which is today on display at the British Museum. Much as I'd like to believe this object was fashioned by Dee himself, it is almost certainly a forgery patterned upon the flawed image printed in Casaubon's A True & Faithful Relation. For reference, however, I will continue to refer to both the vision and the image as the Golden Talisman.

The four castles, or Watchtowers, formed a cross, the center of which was a circle supported by twenty-four columns. Figure 64 illustrates the lower quarter of the Golden Talisman.

Ave would elucidate upon the nature, powers, and hierarchical status of the characters on the Golden Talisman. Eventually he would go into far greater detail by projecting and organizing all of it upon what he called the Great Table or the Great Table of the Watchtowers. The Great Table is the Rosetta stone of Enochian magick. How it was received and how it is connected to the information Dee and Kelley had already received concerning the ninety-one parts of the earth present us with perhaps the most convincing proof that the two magicians were indeed in contact with noncorporeal intelligences of a superior order.

CHAPTER TWENTY

The Unlettered Great Table and the Four Great Seals

The seals and authorities of these Houses are confirmed in the beginning of the World. Unto everyone of them be 4 characters, (tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation.)

—The Angel Ave, June 20, 1584[87]

In a working that took place on Wednesday, June 25, 1584, the angel Ave showed the magicians the image of a table that was divided into four sections by a central cross. Each of the four sections was identified as one of the castles of the Golden Talisman vision. Also called Watchtowers, Watchmen, princes, and mighty angels of the Lord, they were each represented by a seal. Three of these seals, by their imagery, bear a direct and unambiguous connection to the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or the Ensigns of Creation.

The first seal was assigned to the upper left section of the table. It was the image of a capital letter T with four rays beaming vertically from the top bar. This seal comes from a major landmark of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. The 4/T cell is the first (near the top) of the forty cells that form the perimeter (see figure 23). The 4/T cell is where we began counting to create the seven Names of God drawn from the Sigillum.

The second seal was assigned to the upper right section of the table and identified as an alphabet cross. We first saw this cross on the (lower right) corner of the first sevenfold table (see figure 33), which generated the letters of the large outer heptagon of the Sigillum, where the cross appears at the top left (see figure 34).

The third seal was assigned to the lower right section of the Great Table. Its origin was a little harder to track down. Ave said, "It is in that table, which consisteth of 4 and 8." One of the seven Ensigns of Creation that ring the Sigillum on the Holy Table (the one many modern magicians associate with Mercury) is a 4 x 8 table (see figure 54). The square occupying the position of the second column, second row, contains the cross, numbers, and letters exactly as appears on the vision of the third seal.

The forth seal was assigned to the lower left section of the table and was the image of "a little round smoke, as big as a pin's head." It is illustrated in one of the drawings of the Great Table in Sloane 3191 as a tiny circle with twelve rays issuing from it. It is perhaps the stylized representation of the figure that appears on the back of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth: a small circle from which projects the four capital Ts of a cross potent formed from twelve right angles (see figure 51). Perhaps it is connected to the Round Table of Nalvage and the twelve words that occupy its four continents. Frankly I've been unable to find any reference in the original material that would suggest either of these connections.

Figure 65 shows the positions of the Great Seals on the Great Table and the order in which they were revealed to Dee and Kelley on June 25, 1584. On April 18, 1587 (nearly three years after the magicians had, for all intents and purposes, discontinued their angelic workings), Kelley would receive a vision that would alter (or reform) several aspects of the Great Table, including the relative positions of the seals and all they represent.

As one might expect, this reformation remains the source of intense frustration to Enochian students and practitioners. To add to all the confusion, Dee at different times assigned different directional attributes to the quarters of the table. Later, the Golden Dawn, in order to develop a workable system from this material, would attribute the quarters of the Great Table to the elements of Air, Water, Earth, and Fire. Eventually, I will do that as well, but for the moment, let's be satisfied with identifying the four quarters of the Great Table by their seals and original numbers as shown in figure 65, while we move on to the wonders of what next took place.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The Great Table

> There was a terrible storm of thunder and rain, toward the end of our yesterdays action: which I said, was somewhat more than natural.
> —JOHN DEE, JUNE 26, 1584[88]

I feel I must here briefly outline (if only for my own benefit) the sequential landmarks of the Enochian magick period up to this point:

- The reception of the Round Tablet of Nalvage,
- The beginning of the reception of the forty-eight calls in the angelic language,
- The reception of the order and earthly name of each of the ninety-one parts of the earth, together with:
  - its divinely given name,
  - the tribe of Israel to which it is assigned,[89]
  - the direction assigned to that tribe,
  - the name of its ruling angelic king,
  - the number of good ministers.

(All of the above information is itemized in columns I through IV of the figure 63 in chapter eighteen.)

Then came:

- The vision of the Golden Talisman, with its four sets of castles:
  - one trumpeter,
  - three ensign bearers,
  - six seniors ("six ancient men"),
  - the king and his five princes (the "comely man, with very much Apparel" and the "five men, carrying up of his train"),
  - five crosses in the air ("one great Crosse" and "four lesser Crosses"),
  - sixteen dispositors ("16 white Creatures").
- The vision of the unlettered Great Table and the four Great Seals.

What happened next was so remarkable that I hope I can recount what happened clearly enough for you to appreciate how remarkable it was.

During the working of Monday, June 25, 1584, Kelley was given in vision four blank grids, each of which was twelve squares wide by thirteen squares high. These grids were said to represent the four quarters of the unlettered Great Table of the vision of a few days earlier. As the vision proceeded, "little pricks," or dots, began to appear in the squares. Kelley was then instructed to connect the dots in groups of seven, which created sigils, each forming a curious pattern.

When he was through connecting the dots, all but eight of the 624 squares that make up the four grids were covered by eighty-eight characters, each unique in form, each covering seven squares, but none of which intruded upon another character's squares. These symbols were identified as "the true images of God his Spiritual Creatures."

Now we know what those zigzag lines that fill column VI in chapter eighteen's figure 63 are. They are called symmetrical characters because each one is formed from the same number of pricks—in this case, seven.

Once the blank grids were filled with the lines of the symmetrical characters, Kelley was instructed to fill in the squares with letters. Starting at the top left of each grid and moving to the right, letters began to appear to Kelley, one by one, as Dee copied them down. Some of the letters were capitalized, but most were not. A few of the capitalized letters appeared to be written backwards.

When all four grids were filled in with letters and characters, it became clear that the characters spelled out names. Not only that, but each of these eighty-eight names also began with a capital letter and contained no other capital letter among the remaining six.

This phenomenon is in itself impressive, but it is nothing compared to what Dee and Kelley would learn next. Within a few hours (and with a few helpful hints from the angels), the two magicians discovered, to their utter amazement, that the symmetrical characters spelled all but three of the divine names of the ninety-one parts of the earth—names they had been given days earlier and in list format. Figure 67 shows an example of how the divine name of the second part of the earth, Pascomb, is spelled out by its symmetric character.

All four grids were filled with similar characters all spelling out (with a few minor irregularities) the names of eighty-eight of the ninety-one parts of the earth.

The next day the angels tidied up this array by joining the four 12 x 13 grids with a central cross and turning it into one Great Table. The letters of the three missing divine names of the parts of the earth were found distributed in the central cross (sometimes referred to as the Black Cross or the Great Central Cross) and a mysterious ninety-second name, Paraoan, was created from certain of the backwards letters that occupied the squares left vacant by the symmetrical characters (see chapter twenty-four). Things were wrapped up pretty neatly.

Before we continue, I would like to again stress how impressive was the method of reception. Enochian scholar and magician David R. Jones, wrote:

> The student of Enochian can compare the lists of names with the sigils, which formulate their existence on the Watchtowers, and easily see the correlation. But realize that the names were delivered first and then the Watchtowers horizontally line by line and after having both figures at hand. The Angels demonstrated that, by discrete (7 letters, the number of letters in each Governor's name) linear connections, all of the letters given in the Watchtowers could be accounted for from the letters that formulate names of the Governors previously given. This would require either a monumental and complex second and third order memorization (2 dimensions to 1 dimension then back to 2 dimensions and with directional correlation from a 3 dimensional origin to a 3 dimensional conclusion) on Kelly's part or an elaborate and extremely obtuse deception on Dee's part. This constitutes one of the chief proofs of the system.[90]

The magicians would eventually be informed that the ninety-one divine names of the parts of the earth are also the names of ninety-one governors who inhabit the thirty Aethyrs, or Aires, or heavens that surround the Watchtowers like a heavenly glass onion. We've yet to discuss the Aethyrs because their names (see figure 63, column VII) were among the last bits of information Dee and Kelley received in their Enochian magick workings. The lowest of these Aethyrs, Tex, is inhabited by four governors. The remaining Aethyrs including the highest, Lil, each have three governors.

I will talk more about the Aethyrs in chapter twenty-five. Here it is important for us to simply understand that linking the ninety-one parts of the earth to the thirty Aethyrs was the Enochian way of identifying and linking all levels of divine consciousness from bottom to top. Thus, the dynamics of the Great Table really are a demonstration of how everything in heaven and earth is indeed connected to everything else in heaven and earth.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Tabula Recensa

> At length, E. K. was willed to go down into his Chamber, and I did remain still at our Dineing Table till his return, which was within an hour or somewhat more. And at his return this he brought in writing . . . .
> —John Dee, April 20, 1587[91]

Such was the amazing genesis of the Great Table. How all this is connected to the vision of the Golden Talisman and the practice of modern Enochian magick will be the subjects of the next chapters. Before moving on, however, and in order to more easily illustrate the structure of the system, I need to temporarily tighten up some of the loose ends that the irregularities in the original material often leave dangling in the eyes of the student. The most serious of these concerns the lettering of the Great Table and the various names of angels drawn therefrom. Here's the problem:

After they initially received the Great Table, the magicians were obliged to change or add certain letters in some of the squares. To confuse things further, in documents they received both earlier and later,[92] the names of a handful of the ninety-one governors of the table (whose names are spelled out by the symmetrical characters) and the names of specific angels drawn from the Watchtowers of the Great Table are in subsequent communications spelled a bit differently than they appear in the original table. This difference has proven very frustrating to modern Enochian magicians, who naturally would like to be confident in their ability to accurately identify and spell the name of the angel with whom they wish to communicate.

There are other loose-end inconsistencies that plagued Dee and Kelley, one of which was the uncertainty over which compass directions were to be assigned to the four quarters of the Great Table—a problem that Dee appears never to have resolved to his satisfaction, and one that I have chosen to sidestep completely by not using the directional references to identify the four quarters of the Great Table at all. These inconsistencies, however, pale before what happened in April of 1587, nearly three years after Dee and Kelley had ended their Enochian workings.

For some reason Kelley felt compelled to revisit the mysteries of the Great Table and once and for all settle the questions of unresolved inconsistencies. During a conversation with the archangel Raphael that lasted approximately one hour, he claimed to receive the Tabula Recensa, or "Reformed Table." This table, while correcting a few of the letters, was characterized by one very dramatic change: three of the quadrants housing the four Watchtowers were shifted to different positions within the full table. This alteration did not change any symmetrical characters, nor did it tinker all that much with the names of the governors or other angels within the table. What it did do was change the basic construction of the Great Table.

For the duration of this book I will, for the sake of consistency, try to use the Tabula Recensa as my main model for both the lettering and arrangement of the Watchtowers of the Great Table. I say "try to use" because for nearly the entire Enochian period the angels referenced the original Great Table (figure 68) when explaining the angelic hierarchies and spelling the names of individual angels. It will be necessary from time to time to refer to the original, unreformed Great Table, especially when we start discussing the Kerubs (see chapters twenty-three and twenty-four), whose names might be dramatically affected by the reformed table's new arrangement.

I should remind the reader that in magick it is eminently possible for many contradictory ideas to be simultaneously true. In the pages that follow, the alert reader will notice that the names of certain angels are spelled in a manner inconsistent with the original Great Table, the Tabula Recensa, and/or other obvious references within the text. It is probable that particular inconsistencies are the result of subsequent angelic instructions or other extenuating reasons. For a practical manual such as this it would be distracting to the point of absurdity for me to pause, footnote, cross reference, defend, and explain each and every one of these aberrations, especially considering the fact that in many instances I myself have not been able to track down the source of the differing lettering. For those of you whose research will take you deeper into this subject, I have included in appendix IV versions of the Watchtowers containing all the variations in lettering that I have been able to discover.

Also for convenience sake, I'm going to represent the segue between the Enochian magick of Dee and Kelley and Enochian magick as it is generally practiced today. Up to this point in the chronology of the adventures of Dee and Kelley, each of the four Watchtowers of the Great Table (both the original and reformed) have been identified by the one of the four Great Seals (see figure 65) or by certain landmark letters. At different times in the original material they have been identified by the order they were received or by the directions: east, south, west, or north. Nowhere in the surviving documents have I been able to find the four quadrants of the Great Table overtly identified as the Elemental Tablets of Fire, Water, Air, and Earth.

That being said, certain clear references in the continuing communications revealed elemental hierarchies and rulerships both of and within the individual Watchtowers. Building on this information, the adepts of the Golden Dawn projected an eminently logical elemental structure to the Great Table, its central Black Cross, and its individual subdivisions. These elemental attributions are the heart and soul of the system of Enochian magick taught and practiced by the Golden Dawn, Aleister Crowley, and most modern practitioners.

I personally believe that when these more modern adepts treated the Watchtowers as expressions of the elements they were picking up where Dee and Kelley had stopped and were taking the next logical step in the development of the system. To more easily discuss how all this is going to relate to the practical application of the system, I will now and for the remainder of this book, refer to the four Watchtowers by their modern elemental designations. Please refer to figure 69.

- The upper left quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Air.
- The upper right quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Water.
- The lower left quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Earth.
- The lower right quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Fire.

This is how they are identified in most modern Enochian literature. There is a fifth Elemental Tablet—the Tablet of Union—that is attributed to the quintessential element, Spirit. It is much smaller, containing only twenty squares, and its letters are drawn from those on the central Black Cross of the Great Table, which serves to unite the four Watchtowers in precisely the same way Spirit is said to unite and separate the four elements. I will have more to say about this very important tablet in chapter twenty-six.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

The Great Table Meets the Golden Talisman

> The Angels of the 4 angles shall make the Earth open unto you, and shall serve your necessities from the 4 parts of the Earth.
> —THE ANGEL AVE, JULY 2, 1584[93]

Recall, from chapter nineteen, that the vision of the Golden Talisman revealed four castles from which flowed four cloths of different colors. Out of each castle, marching in procession came one trumpeter, three ensign bearers, six seniors, and one king. The king was followed by five men (who held up his train) and five crosses (one great cross surrounded by four lesser crosses) that floated in the air above them. Each of the four lesser crosses "had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over."[94]

After the crosses came sixteen white creatures, identified as dispositors on the Golden Talisman, and then "an infinite number seemed to issue, almost before the four foresaid Castles."[95]

These images and characters provide, at least partially, the key to the divine hierarchy of the Great Table. This hierarchy represents the spiritual forces that govern not only the phenomenal universe but also heaven. Let's take a moment and project the vision of the Golden Talisman upon the Great Table.

The Four Castles

The castles are obviously the four Watchtowers (Elemental Tablets) themselves, and the rest of the characters in the vision represent the angelic hierarchy resident in each tablet. These angels can be called forth and visited in vision by intoning one or more of the first eighteen calls to activate the Elemental Tablet and the specific area of the tablet where they reside. I will show how that is done in appendix I. First, let's see how the cast of characters from the Golden Talisman fit on the individual Elemental Tablets.

For purposes of illustration, I will use the Elemental Tablet of Fire (the lower right quarter of the reformed Great Table) as our model.

The Trumpets (Trumpeter)

The first character to issue from each of the castles was the trumpeter. The trumpeters are the Great Seals of the tablets. In our example (the Elemental Tablet of Fire), the seal is the image of the sun emitting rays.

The Three Ensign Bearers

At the top of the hierarchical ladder of each Elemental Tablet are the three ensign bearers, who represent the Three Great Secret Names of God. These names appear in the central horizontal row of the Great Central Cross that divides each Elemental Tablet. This cross is made of the two vertical columns that bisect the tablet into left and right; the left column is called the Line of the Father and the right column is called the Line of the Son, and the single central row that bisects the tablet top and bottom is called the Line of the Holy Ghost.

Dee and Kelley were told that the three ensign bearers were respectively of the nature of "3, 4, and 5." This means that the Three Great Secret Names of God are spelled using the first three letters, the next four letters, and the final five letters of the central horizontal row of the central cross. In the case of the Fire tablet, these letter combinations are: oiP, teaa, pDoce.

of the Elemental Tablet of Fire

If there was any doubt as to the angels' meaning concerning the four sets of the Three Great Secret Names of God, they thoughtfully provided a round diagram with all twelve names neatly represented as ensign flags surrounding a central quartered square. In that diagram, all the letters of the names appeared in uppercase letters: OIP, TEAA, PDOCE.

The Three Great Secret Names of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

The Six Seniors

Next came the six seniors. While there is little specific indication in the surviving documents that would suggest the six seniors carry planetary attributions, it is nonetheless a logical assumption; it was made by the adepts of the Golden Dawn and is made by most modern practitioners. For clarity of reference (and for the duration of our discussion), I will adapt the modern planetary designations given to the seniors.

The six seniors of each of the Elemental Tablets are found on the Great Central Cross of each tablet. The seven-letter names of the six seniors radiate from the center two letters of the cross to its extremities.

On the Elemental Tablet of Fire, the six seniors are: aaetPio (Mars), adoeoet (Jupiter), aLndVod (Luna), aapDoce (Venus), arinna (Saturn), and aNodoin (Mercury).

In subsequent references to the seniors (such as in lists and prayers), Dee would standardize the capitalization of the names on all the Elemental Tablets. In our example: Aaetpio, Adoeoet, Alndvod, Aapdoce, Arinna, Anodoin.

The names of the seniors of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

In Kelley's vision of the Golden Talisman, the six seniors from each of the four castles march to the center and meet as pillars that support, as it were, the entire structure. This image is suggestive of the twenty-four elders who surround the throne of God in the Book of the Revelation of John.[96] The twenty-four seniors together are represented on the Golden Talisman as the twenty-four columns that ring the center circle of the talisman (see figure 64).

There is a seventh planetary senior who is attributed to the sun. Just as the sun is the central "king" of our solar system, so too is the sun senior identified as king and found in the center of each Elemental Tablet.

The King

Like the sun, which attracts and holds the planets in orbit, the king of each Elemental Tablet is said to summon and direct the seniors for heavenly duties. When those duties are of a merciful nature, the king spells his name a bit differently than when the duties are those of severity and judgment.

Like those of the six seniors, the seven letters of the king's name are drawn entirely from the Great Central Cross (the lines of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost) of the Elemental Tablet. Beginning with the fifth letter from the left in the horizontal line of the Holy Ghost, the name is spelled out in a clockwise whirl that ends in one of the two squares that occupies the center of the cross: either at the sixth letter from the left for operations of mercy (figure 75) or the seventh letter from the left for operations of judgment (figure 76).

In the case of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, the letters that hold those positions are both *a*s, so both names are Edlprna.

Figures 75 and 76: Clockwise whirl spelling the two names of the king of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, Edlprna and Edlprna

Perhaps my use of the Elemental Tablet of Fire is not the best example to illustrate how the name of the king is formed by the clockwise whirls because the resulting names are the same. The other three Elemental Tablets yield distinctly different names.

The names of the Kings of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

The Five Crosses (One Great Cross and Four Lesser Crosses)

Each of the four quarters formed by the Great Central Cross is a rectangle five squares wide by six squares high. These quadrants are often referred to in modern Enochian magick as lesser angles or subangles. Just as the reformed Great Table positions the Elemental Tablet of Air in its upper left, Water in its upper right, Earth in its lower left, and Fire in its lower right quadrants, so too each subangle is assigned one of the four elements and positioned on its Elemental Tablet in the same way.

Each of the four subangles is dominated by a Calvary cross made up of ten squares (the ten men of the vision of the Golden Talisman), which form the two god names of the subangle. The name drawn from the six letters of the vertical column of the cross (read top to bottom) was said to summon the angels of the subangle, and the five-letter god name of the horizontal bar of the cross (read left to right) was said to command them. Figure 78 shows the god names rzionr and nrzfm from the Fire subangle (the lower right quadrant) of the Elemental Tablet of Fire.

Sixteen White Creatures (Dispositors)

Next in procession in Kelley's vision (and next in the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablets) are the "16 white Creatures." On the Golden Talisman diagram they are represented as sixteen small columns standing side-by-side at the extremity of each rectangular cloth (see figure 64) where they are labeled "XVI Dispositors."

Among modern magicians there are several schools of thought concerning the identity of the sixteen dispositors. The simplest (and in my opinion the most correct) theory holds they are made up of the four angels who reside beneath the arms of the Calvary cross of each of the four subangles of the Elemental Tablet. Referred to as good angels or servient angels, they are invoked and commanded by the god names of their Calvary cross and have powers and knowledge that can be of great practical use to the magician (see appendix IV).

The names of the servient or good angels can be spelled with four letters (if you omit the central letter from the vertical bar of the Calvary cross) or with five letters (if you include the letter from the cross). In our example, the names are:

adre or ad[i]re sisp or si[o]sp pali or pa[n]li
ACar or AC[r]ar

This is a logical and very workable way of looking at the angelic hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet and conforms nicely to the vision of the Golden Talisman and to the way Dee composed his prayers to conjure these good angels.

This theory does, however, leave out in the cold the four letters above the arm of each Calvary cross. To address this issue we must bring up the several schools of thought concerning Kerubs.

Kerubic Angels

In Christian iconography, every well-appointed crucifix bears a rectangular piece of wood nailed above the head of Christ and displaying the four letters INRI.[97] So too above the arms of the Calvary cross of every subangle we find four letters that spell the name of the Kerub of the subangle, a unique spiritual personage. The Golden Dawn dubbed these angels Kerubs.[98]

Now, if you are paying attention, you might want to point out that there are only four subangles and only four Calvary crosses (one in each Elemental Tablet), and therefore there should only be four Kerub/dispositors, not sixteen, per tablet. Of course, your observation would be accurate—if we restrict ourselves to spelling their names in a straightforward and orderly manner. But according to this theory, there are actually four Kerubs hidden in the four letters above the arms of every Calvary cross, and these sixteen Kerubs are actually the sixteen dispositors.

Let's use the Fire (lower right) subangle of the Fire Elemental Tablet and the Kerub ZiZa as our example.

This subangle's four Kerubs are created from a simple permutation of the four letters above the arms of the Calvary cross; simply slide the four letters to the left, each time placing the displaced first letter to the back of the line:

ZiZa iZaZ ZaZi aZiZ

This dynamic perpetual motion of letters doesn't stop with the Kerub, for each letter of the Kerub's name can also rule a column and row of the sixteen letters of the servient angels residing beneath the arm of the Calvary cross.

In our example, the first Z in the Kerub's name rules the column directly beneath it and the arm of the cross: aspA.

The Z also rules the bottom row of the subangle: ACar.

Figure 81 shows how the other letters in the Kerub's name rule the servient angels of the subangle.

According to this theory, in order to open a subangle to summon or contact a servient angel, the magician must first invoke the two god names of the Calvary cross of the subangle in question, then invoke the Kerub, then invoke the servient angel of choice. This is a logical and workable system, but one that doesn't appear to have been on Dee and Kelley's menu. In fact, original material suggests that the Kerub is a unique citizen of the subangle, one who is not under the rulership of the Calvary cross, but under a "god" whose name begins with a sacred letter drawn from the Black Cross (the Great Central Cross) of the Great Table.

A Super Kerub?

Neither Dee or Kelley nor the modern magicians of the Golden Dawn ever use the term Super Kerub.

There is, however, a variety of kerubic angel who seems to embody that title. Like the variety of kerubs we've just discussed, the names of the Super Kerubs are drawn from the letters above the arms of the Calvary crosses of the subangles of the Great Tablet. But, instead of answering to the two Calvary cross god names of their subangle, the Super Kerubs answer to a higher authority—a supercharged angel who is linked directly to the Black Cross of the unreformed Great Tablet. This angel was the subject of much discussion in the original Dee and Kelley material, for its existence and posers were central to the understanding of the "wicked" angels.

In order for us to understand the nature of the Super Kerubs and the wicked angels, we will need to take a closer look at the Black Cross.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

The Black Cross, Super Kerubs, Wicked Angels, Missing Symmetrical Characters, and the Tablet of Union

That shall make the cross that bindeth the 4 Angles of the Table together. The same that stretcheth from the left to right, must also stretch from the right to the left . . .

—THE ANGEL AVE, JUNE 25, 1584[99]

I stated earlier that I have been unable to find in the surviving Dee and Kelley material any overt references to the four Watchtowers as being Elemental Tablets of Fire, Water, Air, and Earth. However, the communicating angels gave every indication that the dynamics and hierarchical structure of the Great Table were, at least in part, elemental in nature. In the communication of Monday, June 25, 1584, the angel Ave speaks of the virtues of the table:[100]

> First, generally this Table containeth:
>
> 1. All humane knowledge.
> 2. Out of it springeth Physick.
> 3. The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire—which is the secret life of all things.

4. The knowledge, finding and use of Metal.
   The vertues of them.
   The congelations, and vertues of Stones.
   } They are all of one matter.
5. The conjoining and knitting together of Natures. The destraction of Nature, and of things may perish.
6. Moving from place to place, [as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure.]
7. The knowledge of all crafts Mechanical.
8. Transmutatio formalis, sed non effentialis.[101]

If we look at the four quarters of the Great Table as being the Elemental Tablets of Air, Water, Earth, and Fire, the Black Cross that separates and joins the tablets would then obviously represent Spirit—that quintessential force that binds the four elements together in infinite quantities and ratios to create and sustain the universe, while at the same time keeping the elements separated just enough to retain their identities. This push/pull, active/passive nature is a defining characteristic of Spirit. As I mentioned earlier, this characteristic is illustrated (as every good ceremonial magician knows) by the dynamics of the pentagram, which allow for two types of Spirit pentagram, one active and one passive.

The Black Cross contains forty letters that radiate from the central blank square. When we read from the top of the column toward the center, we find the curiously spaced and inconsistently capitalized letters e xarp and h Coma. When we start at the center square of the Black Cross and read to the right, we find the letters nanTa and bitom.

We can find identical sets of letters if we read from the bottom of the column toward the center and from the center of the row to the left. In other words, the Black Cross contains mirror images of the letter groups e xarp, h Coma, nanTa, and bitom—a phenomenon curiously reflective of the dual nature of Spirit.

During the same June 25 session, Ave would (in remarkably few words) explain the letters on the Black Cross, answer questions concerning the three missing symmetrical characters of the tenth Aire (Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom—the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, and thirtieth parts of the earth; see chapter eighteen, figure 63), and demonstrate how those three names construct a master table, the Tablet of Union, which appears to rule the whole Great Table.

But before discussing all that, we have a small bit of unfinished business to clean up from the last chapter. I am, of course, talking about the Super Kerubs and the wicked angels.

Super Kerubs, or Gods of the Kerubs?

It is my opinion, and I'm sure many will disagree, that there are two hierarchies of angels existing simultaneously in each subangle. The first hierarchy simply begins with the two god names of the Calvary cross, who are invoked before calling upon the four servient angels whose names appear beneath the arm of the cross. In this schema, all the names of the angels in the hierarchy are drawn neatly and exclusively from within the subangle itself. The Kerub plays no role at all.

The second hierarchy, I believe, does not use the two god names of the Calvary cross at all, nor does it necessarily concern itself with the servient angels. Instead, it places a new character, a Super Kerub, or kerubic god, above a group of angels whose names are drawn exclusively from the four letters above the arms of the cross.

Figure 82 is a version of the original, unreformed Great Table that I've highlighted to, hopefully, make this all clear. I realize it may sound crazy for us to bounce back to using the unreformed table when locating these angels, but it is the unreformed table the angels used in 1584 when this information was received. For the moment, please ignore the circled backwards letters on the diagram.

The letters of the Black Cross are the key to creating the kerubic gods. Note how four of the letters in the column are isolated from others that appear neatly in groups of four. Reading from the top toward the center, the e of e xarp and the h of h Coma are isolated. Reading from the bottom toward the center, the p of exar p and the a of hCom a are also isolated. Note that these four isolated letters appear in the same rows as the Kerubs who live above the arms of the Calvary crosses of all sixteen subangles.

To determine the name of a subangle's kerubic god, simply insert the isolated letter (that appears on the same row as the Kerub's name) at the beginning of the Kerub's four-letter name. For example, the Kerub of the Fire subangle of the Fire tablet, ZiZa, would be transformed into the Super Kerub, pZiZa (see figure 80). Instead of ruling the servient angels, this Super Kerub pZiZa directly rules four angels whose names are created by the permutation of the Kerub's own name: ZiZa, iZaZ, ZaZi, and aZiZ. A table containing all the kerubic gods and their Kerubs can be found in appendix IV.

The important thing to remember is that in this system there are two hierarchies of angels in each of the sixteen subangles: one hierarchy that simply uses the god name of the Calvary cross to summon or contact the serviant angels living under the arms of the cross, and one hierarchy that selects a letter from the Black Cross (outside the Elemental Tablet) and adds it to the Kerub's name to create a kerubic god who rules four Kerubs whose names are created by the permutation of the regular Kerub's own name.

When to use one hierarchy and not the other in a magical operation remains a subject of debate among modern magicians. One thing is certain, the more the magician understands about the nature and dynamics of the Great Table, the more he or she will be able to devise a logical and workable mode. So let's discover more wonders of the Black Cross. Let's start with something we haven't encountered before in Enochian magick—wicked angels.

Wicked Angels

The letters of the Black Cross are also the key to creating the names of the four wicked, or evil or malevolent, angels of each subangle. Up to now we've been dealing with angels whose names are representative of complete and balanced segments of the Great Table and its Elemental Tablets. But during the June 25 session, as the angel Ave was expounding on the virtues of the Black Cross, he also introduced Dee and Kelley to a set of angels that are not complete and balanced—angels he referred to as being "wicked." These malevolent angels manifest aversely the powers of their good-angel subangle neighbors. For example, if the good angels are useful for healing, the wicked angels bring sickness and affliction (see appendix IV).

But some of the wicked angel duties seem rather tempting and are said to be useful in obtaining money and for gambling. Kelley initially got pretty excited about such prospects and was very disappointed when Ave in no uncertain terms told him hands off the evil angels. Why Ave would give details of these critters and turn around and tell the magicians not to use them remains a mystery. Or does it?

The name of an evil angel is a portrait of incompleteness and imbalance supercharged with an injection of the immense power of the Black Cross—a dangerous recipe if there ever was one. Creating it is very simple. Here's how to do it.

Remember how we created the name of a kerubic god by prefacing the name of a regular Kerub with the letter from the Black Cross occupying the same row? Well, that's almost exactly what we do to create the name of a wicked angel. However, instead of prefacing the four letters of a Kerub's name, we preface only the first two letters of the servient angel's name with its neighboring letter from the Black Cross. This three-letter supercharged perversion of the first half of a servient angel's name is a wicked angel.

r	r	s	O	n	i
p	i	z	i	n	r

And how does one, if one were inclined, call forth these evil angels? Who are their hierarchical rulers? As one might expect, the adverse god names that call forth the evil angels are the names on the Calvary cross spelled backwards. In the case of our example they are iOpgna and xanNu.

You can easily work out the names of the other evil angels and their rulers by referring to figure 82 or consulting the table in appendix IV.

Paraoan

Ave was particularly concerned that Dee and Kelley locate the name Paraoan on the Great Table. The significance of this great angel has not (at least to my satisfaction) been adequately explored or explained. The name Paraoan first appeared among the ninety-one parts of the earth as one of the three divine names (number 65) in the twenty-second Aire. Paraoan is the divine name of the part of the earth designated as Marmarica. According to Enochian scholar Robin Cousins, in Dee and Kelley's day, Marmarica was a North African coastal region straddling the Egyptian and Libyan coasts, bounded on the east by the River Nile (see appendix III).

Oddly enough, a perfectly good sixty-fifth symmetrical character already existed. It is found in the lower right section of the Elemental Tablet of Water, and spells the name Laxdizi.

Nevertheless, Paraoan seems to also hold the title of the sixty-fifth part of the earth known as Marmarica. The obvious and inescapable similarity between the names Marmarica and America inserts (into my mind at least) an added dimension of mystery to this curious anomaly. Add to this the enigmatic and direful comments Ave made concerning the final n in Paraoan:

> As far as that N. stretcheth in the Character, so far shall that Countrey be consumed with fire, and swallowed into Hell, as Sodom was for wickednesse. The end of all things is even at hand: and the earth must be purified, and delivered to another.[102]

A bit later, Dee presses Ave on this:

> Dee: I beseech you say somewhat of the N in Paraoan, of which you said, so far as that stretched, should sink to hell.
> Ave: Every letter in Paraoan, is a living fire: but all of one quality and of one Creation. But unto N is delivered a viol of Destruction, according to that part that he is of Paraoan the Governour.[103]

The letters of the name Paraoan are created from seven of the eight backward letters that appear scattered among the four Elemental Tablets of the Great Table. See the circled letters in figure 82. The eighth backwards letter, the backward L found in the lowermost square on the right of figure 82, has another very important job to do.

The Three Missing Symmetrical Characters of the Tenth Aire

Recall from the table in chapter eighteen (figure 63) that there were no symmetrical characters for the three parts of the earth assigned to the tenth Aire (those whose divine names were Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom). Neither can these three names be found within the available letters in any of the four Elemental Tablets. They are, however, to be found on the Black Cross, and the angel Ave, in his highly productive lecture of June 25, 1584, shows how it is done.

Ave instructed Dee and Kelley to pluck the backward capital L from the lower right corner of the lower right Watchtower (I've circled it in figure 82) and preface the lowercase letters e, x, a, r, p, and h from the column of the Black Cross to form dual versions of the divine name Lexarph.

Then starting with the capital letter C in the column, moving down from the top C (or up from the bottom C), then continuing to read either right or left into the horizontal row, dual versions of the divine name Comanan are formed.

Then, starting with the capital letter T in the left and right arms of the Black Cross and reading toward the extremities, we discover dual versions of the divine name Tabitom.

Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom are respectively the divine names of the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, and thirtieth parts of the earth in the tenth Aire, whose symmetrical characters were missing from the original material concerning the ninety-one parts of the earth. Their characters are simply the straight lines and rotating *L*s that spell out their names on the Black Cross.

Obviously, angelic beings whose names are drawn from the Black Cross are of a nature that sets them apart from their neighbors in the Elemental Tablets. Their presence in the tenth Aire also distinguishes that portion of the ninety-one parts of the earth for special attention—something that will be important to us later.

The Four Names of the Tablet of Union

Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom also contain within themselves the four names that appear in pairs on the Black Cross, names that are very familiar to practicing Enochian magicians: EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM. These are the four divine names of the elements that (in the practice of modern Enochian magick at least) rule the four Elemental Tablets.

These four names are arranged into a table five squares wide by four squares high. This Tablet of Union, in its profound simplicity, extracts the essence and hierarchical dynamics of the entire Great Table. The Tablet of Union is quite literally the Great Table distilled.

We'll soon learn much more about the Tablet of Union. But first, we are almost ready to bring the story of Dee and Kelley's Enochian period to an end. It was not long after Ave's revelations concerning the Black Cross, Kerubs, wicked angels, missing symmetrical characters, and the Tablet of Union that the two magicians' great angelic adventure, for all intents and purposes, came to a close. There remained only a couple of loose ends to tie up. But my heavens, what loose ends those were!

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

"There Is All."

Nalvage is called away and cannot be in Action with you until Wednesday. Then shall you have the Calls that you look for. And so enter into the knowledge and perfect understanding of the 49 Gates and Tables if you will.

—THE ARCHANGEL GABRIEL, MONDAY, JULY 9, 1584[104]

In early July of 1584, the two magicians were busy trying to tie up loose ends before a mysterious August deadline. On July 7, the angel Ave waxed eloquent about how Enoch made tablets such as those Dee and Kelley now possessed, and had labored fifty days in prayer and confession before receiving a supreme revelation. It appears from the communication[105] that the two magicians were to do likewise.

In a breathtakingly short amount of time, Dee and Kelley received the translations of the remaining angelic calls (five through eighteen), which they had six weeks earlier received in the angelic tongue, together with tantalizing hints that the eighteen calls might be connected to the Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets.

On Thursday, July 12, the angel Ilemese[106] began to deliver a nineteenth call, together with its translation. This call was said to be actually thirty calls, bringing the total number of calls to forty-eight. Add the unexpressed "first" call (see chapter sixteen), and we have a grand total of forty-nine (7 x 7) calls. The next day, Friday the thirteenth, 1584, John Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, Ilemese delivered the remaining portion of the nineteenth call and revealed that it was the key to accessing the thirty Aires (the heavens connected to the ninety-one parts of the earth). Lastly, he revealed the names of the thirty Aires, which until then had only been identified by numbers (see chapter nineteen, figure 63, columns I and VI).

The nineteenth call was a master call to be used to access each of the thirty Aires or Aethyrs. The only thing that differentiated the thirty calls from one another was insertion of the name of the particular Aire in the first line. Ilemese delivered the names of the Aires as a simple list and then engaged in a brief exchange with Dee.

The first Aire is called ———— Lil.
The second ———— Arn.

Ile: There is all—Now change the name, and the Call is all one.

Δ: Blessed be he who onely is always one.

I take these names to be as primus, secudus, tertius, and to 30.

A voice . . . Not so, they be the substantial names of the Aires.

Δ: It was said they had no proper names; but were to be called, O thou of the first Aire, O thou of the second, etc. I pray you reconcile the repugnancy of theses two places, as they should seem.[107]

Dee's testiness evoked a response from none other than the archangel Gabriel, who was sitting nearby in Kelley's vision during Ilemese's discourse. The great angel stood and informed the magicians they now possessed the knowledge they needed. He encouraged them to study and prepare for the August operation and then, after one more little jab at Dee's cheekiness, delivered a most poignant valediction.

E. K. The Curtain is opened.

E. E. [sic] Now Gabriel standeth up.

Gabr . . . Thus has God kept promise with you, and hath delivered you the keyes of his storehouses: wherein you shall find, (if you enter wisesly, humbly, and patiently) Treasures more worth than the frames of the heavens.

But it is not August come: Notwithstanding the Lord hath kept his promise with you be the time. Therefore, Now examine you Books, Confer one place with another, and learn to be perfect for the practice and entrance.

See that your garments be clean. Herein be not rash: Nor over hasty; For those that are hasty and rash, and are loathsomely appareled, may knock long before they enter.

There is no other reading of the Book, but the appearing of the Ministers and Creatures of God: which shewing what they are themselves, shew how they are conjoyed in power, and represented formally by those letters.

E. K. Now he taketh the Table, and seemeth to wrap it up together.

Δ: Seeing I have moved the doubt of their names I pray you to dissolve it.

Gab . . . You play with me childishly.

Δ: I have done.

Gab . . . Thinkest thou that we speak any thing that is not true?

Thou shalt never know the mysteries of all things that have been spoken.

If you love together, and dwell together, and in one God; Then the self-same God will be merciful unto you: Which bless you, comfort you, and strengthen you unto the end. More I would say, but words profit not. God be amongst you.

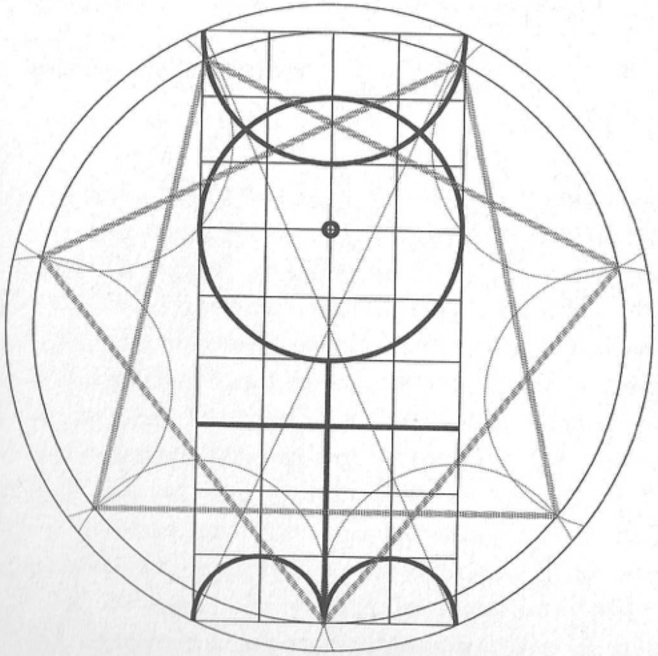
E.K. Now they both be gone in a great flame of fire upwards . . . [108]

Thus, in a dramatic burst of flame, the angels of Enochian magick fell silent, and the most amazing magical operation ever recorded came to an end. Unfortunately, we don't know if the two magicians actually performed the fifty-day operation scheduled for August. Surviving diary entries for the month treat on other matters. What we are left with, however, is an elegant and remarkably coherent system of vision magick.

For those of us who have made Enochian magick a part of our spiritual quest, Gabriel's parting words ring profoundly true. God did keep promise with Dee and Kelley and delivered unto them (and us) the keys to the storehouses wherein we shall find, if we enter wisely, humbly, and patiently, treasures worth more than the frames of the heavens.

BOOK V

Putting It Together



CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Rulership of the Tablet of Union

The Tablet of Union is a Great Table you can put in your briefcase; but EHNB is a Tablet of Union you can put in your pocket.

—Lon Milo DuQuette

I have purposefully placed this brief overview of practical Enochian vision magick after the chronology of Dee and Kelley's great Enochian adventure. I do so because Enochian vision magick as it is generally practiced today is a system that depends heavily on innovations that were developed long after the great magicians passed into history. Not that I think that modern Enochian magick is an affront to the memories of these two giants of magick. But I do think it is important for us to know the difference between the foundational material and the structures that have later been built upon it.

I think it is also important to remember that there is nothing particularly sacrosanct about the methods and techniques developed by the Golden Dawn, Crowley, or any other latter-day magicians. As an informed and competent magician, you are just as free as these individuals were and are to develop your own Enochian magick art form based and structured on your personal interpretation and understanding of Dee and Kelley's experiences and material. After all, in order for you to justly claim the title of magician you must be a magician, not merely a one-man or one-woman Society for Creative Anachronism dedicated to simply recreating the lives and works of real magicians of the past.

Enochian vision magick as practiced today can be divided into two broad categories: elemental and aethyric. Both require the ability to scry and to keep a faithful written record of one's workings. Scrying the Aethyrs has, in my later years, become the focus of most of my Enochian operations, because that process deals most directly with the current state of my personal initiatory career—by that I mean my personal transformational process, my spiritual journey, the lifting of my consciousness.

However, it has not always been so. Indeed, I would never encourage any magician, especially in the early stages of his or her Enochian career, to neglect either branch of Enochian exploration. I spent many years honing my visionary skills by exploring the elemental worlds that not only make up my physical, mental, and emotional environment but also actually represent everything that my limited senses tell me is me.

It is the elemental branch of Enochian vision magick that I will first discuss. To help me do this, I'm going to talk briefly about the structure of another great magical tool, the tarot.

Rulership of the Tablet of Union

The classic tarot image of the Magician shows the magician standing behind a table, upon which are four magical tools; a wand, a cup, a sword, and a disk. These are the four elemental weapons of the magician. They represent respectively the four suits of the tarot and the elements Fire, Water, Air, and Earth.

The master card of each suit is the ace. The ace is the "Spirit" of the suit—the "Spirit" of the element. The other cards in the suit are given life by the spirit of the ace. They are essentially subdivisions, components, and aspects of the ace—they all "live" inside the ace.

If we put an ace under a magick microscope, we would first see that it is composed of four major components.[109] These are the four court cards (commonly titled king, queen, prince, and princess) that represent respectively the elements Fire, Water, Air, and Earth. For example, if we put the Ace of Wands (Fire) under our magick microscope, we would see that it was composed of the King of Wands (the fiery aspect of Fire), the Queen of Wands (the watery aspect of Fire), the Prince of Wands (the airy aspect of Fire), and the Princess of Wands (the earthy aspect of Fire).

In the Enochian model, we can actually see Spirit's influence interpenetrating the heart and every quadrant of the Elemental Tablet in the form of the Great Central Cross and the Calvary crosses of the subangles. The Black Cross of the Great Table reveals Spirit's influence on an even larger scale. It literally holds together and separates the four Elemental Tablets. The Black Cross is like the ace of aces. All this is expressed most simply and elegantly in the Tablet of Union.

I draw your attention to figure 85 and the four rows of names in the Tablet of Union.

Recall that Exarp, Hcoma, Nanta, and Bitom are the four names found in pairs on the Black Cross of the Great Table. In modern Enochian magick, these Black Cross letters represent the element Spirit. The four names on the Tablet of Union are not merely the master keys to the elemental universe—they are the elemental universe.

Starting with the top row, we see that EXARP is the elemental world of Air; HCOMA the world of Water; NANTA, Earth; and BITOM, Fire.[110] (Note the little symbols of the elements to the left of each row of names.)

Now let's look at the five columns of the Tablet of Union. The leftmost column is made from the four first letters of the names, giving us the name EHNB. At the top of this column is a little circle with spokes inside. This is the symbol of Spirit. It tells us that EHNB is the column of Spirit and the essence of the entire tablet.

Obviously, the angelic entity described by the letters EHNB is profoundly powerful. It is a name that represents and contains within itself the entire Great Table and all the angelic forces within it. E represents the entire the Elemental Tablet of Air, H the Elemental Tablet of Water, N the Elemental Tablet of Earth, and B the Elemental Tablet of Fire.

In a real sense, the remaining sixteen letters all live inside EHNB in just the same way the sixteen court cards of the tarot live inside their aces. Put E under a microscope and see the letters XARP. Put H under a microscope and see COMA. Put N under a microscope and see ANTA. Put B under a microscope and see ITOM.

As we move right, the next column is XCAI, whose letters represent the four Air subangles of the four Elemental Tablets and all the resident angels inside the Air subangles. (XCAI would be the four princes of the tarot.)

AONT does the same for the Water subangles (queens of the tarot), RMTO for the Earth subangles (princesses of the tarot), and PAAM for the Fire subangles (kings of the tarot).

Now are you starting to see the power resident in the Tablet of Union? If we were to call EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM archangels of the elements, then we would have to say that EHNB is the archangel of archangels of the elements. The Tablet of Union is a Great Table you can put in your briefcase, but EHNB is a Tablet of Union you can put in your pocket.

The Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets are activated and penetrated in vision by intoning one or two of the first eighteen calls in the angelic tongue. I give details showing how this is done in appendix II, but here is a brief overview:

The first two calls are dedicated to the Tablet of Union exclusively and are never used to call or visit the angels of the Elemental Tablets.

The next four calls (three through six) deal with the angels of the individual letters of EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM, and/or are used to activate and penetrate the native subangles of the Elemental Tablets. (A native subangle is the subangle of an Elemental Tablet that represents the same element as the Elemental Tablet—e.g., the Air Subangle of the Air Tablet, the Water Subangle of the Water Tablet.)

The next twelve calls (seven through eighteen) are used to activate and penetrate the remaining three subangles of the Elemental Tablets. How these calls are allotted to the various subangles is an exercise in routine hermetic logic.

As I mentioned earlier, it is not necessary for you to have elaborate or expensive models of the Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union in order to perform Enochian magick. But it is important that you have a good understanding of them and have the equipment "installed" in your mind. When I work with the angels of the Elemental Tablets or the Tablet of Union, I simply have my four colored Elemental Tablets (positioned as they appear in the reformed Great Table) on a table before me and place my small Tablet of Union on the top of them in the center.

Now on to the business of actually doing Enochian vision magick.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Elemental Workings, Temple Openings, and Addressing the Hierarchies

Sylphs and Gnomes and Undines too,

Salamanders beckon you . . .

—"Theme from Mount Oread"[III]

Why on earth would anyone wish to call upon an angel of the elements? What can a salamander (Fire elemental) do for me? When does an undine (Water elemental) come in handy? Does a sylph (Air elemental) really look like Tinkerbell? Are gnomes (Earth elementals) really grumpy? Is exploration of the elements a necessary prerequisite to higher magical workings?

As I wrote in the prologue, the question of, "why magick?" is one that is not easily answered. The supreme goal of the magician is spiritual enlightenment and liberation of the soul. Do I expect to accomplish that end through the aid of elemental spirits?

Not directly. But the elementals are a part of my world, a part of my being. They move within me and around me. They dwell among themselves in their infinite number, ratios, and proportions. "Know Thyself" was chiseled above the doors of the ancient temples of initiation. How can I know myself when the mysteries of the elements of my own heart and soul remain undiscovered?

Enochian elemental magick is not a matter of calling up a spirit to command it to do a job for you, to cause the girl next door to fall in love with you, to bewitch your neighbor's cow, or to kill an enemy at a distance. Instead, when you visit an Enochian elemental angel in vision, you are exploring a specific aspect of creation, a highly specialized area of which the angel is the visual and metaphoric embodiment. You see things the way they are in that narrow quadrant of the universe. Once armed with the insights these spiritual specialists can provide, you are better prepared to know how to go about causing the girl next door to fall in love with you or bewitching your neighbor's cow. (I understand that killing at a distance is less satisfying than one might imagine.)

Does this really help the magician? First and most obviously, it broadens his or her understanding of how the spirit world is the subjective and underlying reality of the objective world. Just as the educated and seasoned traveler is better equipped than the novice to understand rewards and pitfalls of world travel, a magician experienced with elemental work is endowed with a greater understanding of existence. That in and of itself is a spiritual reward.

But more than that, each willed encounter with the angels of the elements activates, readjusts, and rebalances the magician's own internal elemental components. Like the computer user who periodically defragments the hard drive of his or her computer in order to make things to run more efficiently, the magician is changed and (hopefully) improved with every thoughtful and seriously examined elemental encounter.

At our Monday night magick class, we've developed a series of simple questions we first ask every angel we call from an Elemental Tablet. Just as we would not expect any two computer hard drives to be fragmented in exactly the same way, no two magicians should expect the exact same answers to these questions. Here are a few of them. The first questions are the simplest yet most important:

- What is your name? (Confirm you have who you've called.)
- What is your nature?

The next questions deal with how the angel is perceived by the human senses:

- What is your color?
- What is your sound (musical note, if possible)?
- How do you feel to the human touch?
- What do you taste like?
- How do you smell?

The next questions deal with how the angel makes itself known to us through our thoughts and emotions:

- How do I express you through emotions?
- In what form of images and ideas are you most revealed to me?
- When are you most manifest in my daily life?

Other questions could concern things more specific to one's own personal magical issues, but I think you get the picture.

Now that we know a little more about why to practice Enochian elemental magick, let's look at how to do it. It is likely that my opinion on this subject will be slightly at odds with a number of practicing Enochian magicians. It is even more certain to receive condemnation by legions of others who don't actually perform Enochian magick but instead enjoy speculating how Enochian magicians should operate.

Dee and Kelley contacted the angels by praying. Boy, did they pray! There is nothing in the surviving records that suggests that they performed banishing rituals, drew pentagrams or hexagrams in the air, made knocks or magical gestures, or called upon the strings of classic qabalistic Hebrew divine names from the sephiroth of the Tree of Life. The operating procedures of the Golden Dawn and Crowley, however, do all those things and more.

Here is an example of a Golden Dawn–style temple opening appropriate for working with the Elemental Table of Earth. It is a ceremony that incorporates ritual components from the GD's neophyte degree, the grade that represents Malkuth, the tenth and lowest sephirah on the Tree of Life. As you can see, the ritual invokes the qabalistic hierarchy of divine names, archangels, and angels traditionally attributed to Malkuth and the element Earth.

The Opening of the Temple in the Grade of $1^\circ = 10^\square$

Give the Sign of the God SET fighting.

Purify with Fire and Water, and announce "The Temple is cleansed."

Knock.

"Let us adore the Lord and King of Earth! Adonai ha Aretz, Adonai Melehk, unto Thee be the Kingdom, the Sceptre, and the Splendour: Malkuth, Geburah, Gedulah, The Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley, Amen!"

Sprinkle Salt before Earth tablet.

"Let the Earth adore Adonai!"

Make the Invoking Hexagram of Saturn.

Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Passive and pronounce . . .

"AHIH AGLA NANTA"

Make the Invoking Pentagram of Earth, and pronounce . . .

"ADNI MLK." And Elohim said: "Let us make Man in Our own image; and let them have dominion over the Fish of the Sea and over the Fowl of the Air; and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth. And the Elohim created ATh-h-ADAM: in the image of the Elohim created They them; male and female created They them. In the Name of ADNI MLK, and of the Bride and Queen of the Kingdom; Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!"

Make the Sign of Taurus.

"In the Name of Auriel, great archangel of Earth, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!"

Make the Cross.

"In the Names and Letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!"

Sprinkle water before Earth Tablet.

"In the three great secret Names of God, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, that are borne upon the Banners of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!"

Cense the Tablet.

"In the name of ICZHIHA, great king of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator! In the Name of Adonai Ha-Aretz, I declare that the Spirits of Earth have been duly invoked."

Knock. 4444—333—22—1

For many modern Enochian magicians, rituals such as this qabalistically formatted degree opening ceremony are perfect vehicles for establishing the proper elemental environment in which to operate. For years they were an indispensable part of my operating procedure as well. I discontinued, however, about ten years ago.

As we myopically focus on the fascinating intricacies of different magical systems, we often forget the big picture and the fact that we have only one universe to play with. There is no such thing as a separate qabalistic magick universe, or a separate Solomonic magick universe, or a separate Enochian magick universe. These various systems simply oblige us to view the same universe from different angles. Granted, when we look from differing points of view, we see certain similarities. After all, it's the same universe. There are certain to be recognizable landmarks. But we can't expect the structure of one system's point of view to neatly match or define the other.

It is my opinion that the spiritual forces inherent in Enochian magick are expressed units of living consciousness that reflect a uniquely structured and organized point of view of the universe—one that the communicating angels obliged Dee and Kelley to build from scratch. It is a perfect, self-referential system of looking at things that cannot be expected to be consistently compatible with other self-referential systems.

With all due respect to the knowledgeable and eloquent magicians who created the above temple opening, I believe that (unless your sensitivities as a magical artist demands it) most of it is completely unnecessary in order for you to properly activate an Elemental Tablet and effectively address the hierarchy of angels who rule the angel you may wish to contact. The use of the various pentagrams and the hexagram, the assumption of a Samo-Thracian elemental god-form, the invocation of the various names of the Hebrew deity and traditional angels, and the recitation of Bible verses are all tried-and-true magical methods to access the elemental world of Earth, but they are tools used in another kind of magical system—a system that views the magical universe from a slightly different angle, music played using a different scale of notes.

Please don't misunderstand me. Qabalistic temple openings such as the one above work effectively enough for Enochian elemental operations. But what makes them work, in my opinion, is not the pentagrams, Hebrew god names, or Bible verses. They work because, nestled within the ramblings and tossing about of salt and water, the magician is required to recognize and address by name the spiritual forces of the elements as they are uniquely organized and expressed in the Enochian magick system. In our example above, those names are Nanta (the great angel of Earth from the Tablet of Union), Mor, Dial, Hctga (the Three Great Secret Names of God from the Elemental Tablet of Earth), and Iczhiha (the king of the Elemental Tablet of Earth). The hierarchy of high elemental forces that the other magical system calls Adonai ha Aretz, Adonai Melehk, Malkuth, the Rose of Sharon, and the Lily of the Valley—everything the other system calls forth by means of pentagrams, gestures, and Bible verses—are all wrapped up and neatly addressed in the Enochian system in the names Nanta, Mor, Dial, Hctga, and Iczhiha.

If you conclude that my thoughts on this subject have some merit, I encourage you to customize for yourself a simply formatted little speech that addresses by name and in proper order the various angelic personages of the hierarchies of each Elemental Tablet. I will outline my address to the hierarchies at the end of this chapter. But first, let's discuss what the proper procedure for an elemental working might be.

DuQuette's Protocol for Enochian Elemental Vision Magick

The lower the angel you wish to contact is in the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet, the more superior angels there are above it who must be named and addressed. Therefore, for our example I will use Adre, a lowly servient angel found under the arms of the Calvary cross of the Fire Subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire. (See chapter twenty-three, figures 71 through 79.)

I. Preliminaries

Before embarking on any formal magical operation it is helpful, indeed necessary, to feel good about oneself. Therefore, I always recommend that the magician first bathe, dress in clean clothing, and operate in a clean and uncluttered space. It is also wise to formally purify and banish the area before operating. These preliminary ceremonies can be as simple or as elaborate as you feel necessary. I always begin with a simple Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram that I've customized to reflect my own taste and spiritual proclivity. A classic version if the pentagram ritual can be found at the beginning of appendix I.

I next perform the Ceremony of Preparation that is outlined in chapter one and appendix I of this book. I consider this ritual an Enochian magick temple opening par excellence. I believe it serves to purify, banish, and consecrate both the temple and the magician in a manner that is in harmony with the universe as perceived by the Enochian angels. It also establishes and sanctifies the magical environment for the black mirror or scrying stone.

II. The Call(s)

A complete list of the angels of all four Elemental Tablets, together with their traditional duties, can be found in appendix IV.

In order to contact any angel from an Elemental Tablet, one need first activate the tablet by intoning the proper call or calls in the Enochian tongue. The calls and the key to their use can be found in appendix II.

Only one call is necessary if your target angel resides in the Great Central Cross (one of the Three Great Secret Names of God, a senior, or a king). Also, only one call is necessary if your target angel resides in the native subangle of the Elemental Tablet (e.g., the Fire Subangle of the Fire Tablet, the Water Subangle of the Water Tablet, etc.). But if your target angel resides in a non-native subangle (e.g., the Earth Subangle of the Water Tablet, the Air Subangle of the Fire Tablet, etc.), you must also recite an additional call assigned specifically to the subangle.

Our target angel, Adre, resides in the native subangle (Fire Subangle of the Fire Tablet), so we need only recite the sixth call (see appendix II).

Reciting the sixth call switches on the power of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, as it were, and puts it in standby mode to await more specific actions from the magician.

III. Addressing the Hierarchy

Whether you feel it or not,[112] your recitation of the sixth call has put you in an altered state of consciousness. Magically speaking, you are now present within the environment of the Element Tablet of Fire. You have awakened the spiritual forces of the tablet, and they are waiting to see if you are worthy of their attention. If you can convince the spirits of the tablet that you know where you are and how you got there, they will acknowledge you as a natural citizen of their well-ordered magical universe. Once you've established rapport with its superiors, the target angel will have no choice but to be compliant and ready to open its mysteries to you.

You prove your worthiness by remembering your manners and addressing by name the angels who reign over your target angel. In the case of a servient angel like Adre, the hierarchy is essentially the whole cast of characters. Starting from the top we have:

1. The Supreme Name of Fire from the Tablet of Union: Bitom.
2. The Three Great Secret Names of God of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Oip, Teaa, Pdoce.
3. The name of the king of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Edlprna.
4. The names of the six planetary seniors of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Aaetpio, Adoeoet, Alndvod, Aapdoce, Arinna, and Anodoin.
5. The first god name of the Fire subangle: Rzionr.
6. The second god name of the Fire subangle: Nrzfm.
7. And finally, the name of our target servient angel: Adre.

If the target angel is higher on the hierarchical ladder, there are fewer names to include in your little speech. For example, to call a senior, you only need to use the names in steps 1, 2, and 3 before calling on the name of the target senior. If your target angel is the king of the Elemental Tablet, you only have to use the names in steps 1 and 2.[113]

And what about the kerubic angels who, as we learned earlier, have a separate hierarchy that skips the god names of the subangle?

In the case of the Fire subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, simply replace the name in step 5 with the name of the god Kerub (Pziza) and replace the name in step 6 with the name of the Kerub (ZiZa, iZaZ, ZaZi, or aZiZ).

IV. Calling Your Target Angel

Repeat out loud the name of the target angel, Adre, several times. State why you have called it; ask your questions and/or make your requests, then sit quietly and scry. If necessary, repeat the call to induce a deeper state of mind. If you wish, have a tape recorder running and describe your vision as it unfolds. Don't tire yourself. Conclude your visionary business at the first signs of fatigue. Thank the angel and formally close the session with a banishing ritual of your choice.

V. Write It All Down

Immediately transcribe everything into your magical journal. I mean everything: the date and time, weather conditions, astrological aspects (if you know them and care about such things). Even if you think there is nothing to report, write that down, along with your thoughts of why things might not have worked.

Sample of a Hierarchical Invocation

The invocation below is what I currently use to acknowledge and invoke the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet. I will provide the English translation of it first so you will know what it is saying. You may easily customize your own by referring to an Enochian dictionary.[114]

With the Elemental Tablet before me, I utter each angel's name and I wave my wand over the squares that spell it.

> I invoke and move thee, O thou, Spirit (name of target angel).
>
> And being exalted above you in the power of the Most High, I say unto you come forth and obey!
>
> In the name of (Supreme Name from the Tablet of Union; e.g., Exarp, Hcoma, Nanta, or Bitom);
>
> and in the name of (the Three Great Secret Names of God of the Elemental Tablet), > and in the name of (the name of the king of the Elemental Tablet), > and in the name of (the names of the six seniors of the Elemental Tablet),
>
>
>
> and in the name of . . . ,
>
> and in the name of. . . ,

and in the name of . . . (as many names in hierarchy as necessary),

I invoke and move thee, O thou Spirit (name of target angel).

Here is the same invocation in the Enochian angelic language:

Ol vinu od zacam, Ils gah (name of target angel).

Od lansh vors gi Iad, gohus pugo ils niiso od darbs!

Dooiap (Supreme Name from the Tablet of Union), od dooiap (the Three Great Secret Names of God), od dooiap (the name of the king), od dooiap (the names of the six seniors),

od dooiap . . . ,

od dooiap . . . ,

od dooiap . . . (as many names in hierarchy as necessary),

Ol vinu od zacam, Ils gah (name of target angel).

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Aethyric Workings

Everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth.

Everything in heaven and earth is the reflection of everything in heaven and earth.

Everything in heaven and earth contains the pattern of everything in heaven and earth.

Look hard enough at anything and you will eventually see everything.

—Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford[115]

In order to more easily understand what follows, I ask that you turn back to chapter eighteen and refer to the columns in figure 63.

Right up until the last day of the Enochian period, Dee and Kelley believed that the thirty Aires (column I) were simply the numbered segments of creation that organized in groups of three[116] the ninety-one parts of the earth. Furthermore, they believed that the ninety-one divinely appointed names of the parts of the earth (column IV) were merely the angelic language names for the geographic areas of the earth named in column III. But in his final communication of July 13, 1584, the angel Ilemese revealed that the thirty Aires had names and a certain connection with the nineteenth call. As we saw in chapter twenty-five, this concept appeared to confuse and irritate Dee, who seemed comfortable with merely identifying the Aires by their sequence number.

Even though there is very little in the surviving material to suggest the thirty Aires are anything other than containers for the parts of the Earth, many modern magicians believe they carry a more profound significance. Indeed, it appears to me that this is an excellent example of modern magicians picking up the football where Dee and Kelley dropped it and running with it for a very big touchdown. The basic idea is this.

In keeping with the most fundamental hermetic and qabalistic axiom, "As above, so below," the *micro*cosmic world (the physical universe and humanity) is the reflection of a heavenly *macro*cosmic world of divine consciousness. So too, the thirty Aires containing the ninety-one parts of the earth are the microcosmic reflection of thirty Aethyrs, or heavens, that surround and enclose the four Watchtowers of the Great Table in thirty heavenly spheres, like layers of a glass onion.

Like the ten sephiroth and the twenty-two paths on the Tree of Life, the thirty Aethyrs can be viewed as emanations of divine consciousness. The thirtieth or lowest Aethyr would represent a level of divine consciousness that is so low that it has almost descended into matter. The first or highest Aethyr would represent the pure and undifferentiated mind of Deity.

Using this model, the ninety-one parts of the earth (column IV of figure 63) have their counterparts in the Aethyrs, and the divine names of the parts of the earth (e.g., Pascomb for Syria) also serve as the names of angelic governors, who, in groups of three, inhabit the thirty Aethyrs. The only exception to this is the thirtieth Aethyr, Tex, which has four governors.

There is a great temptation among modern practitioners to project this thirty-Aethyr model upon classic schema of the qabalistic Tree of Life with its ten sephiroth and twenty-two paths that also represent levels of consciousness. Some magicians go so far as to suggest the thirty Aethyrs can simply be divided by three into ten units and superimposed upon the ten sephiroth of the Tree. I wish I could believe things were as simple as that, but, as I wrote in the previous chapter, the classic qabalistic and Enochian models oblige us to view the same universe from different angles.

Aleister Crowley gave perhaps the most comprehensible way of viewing the relationship of the thirty Aethyrs and the Tree of Life:

> It is to be remarked that the last three æthyrs have ten angels attributed to them, and they therefore represent the ten Sephiroth. Yet these ten form but one, a Malkuth-pendant to the next three, and so on, each set being, as it were, absorbed in the higher. The last set consists, therefore, of the first three æthyrs with the remaining twenty-seven as their Malkuth.[117]

The angels Crowley is referring to are the governors of the Aethyrs. Because Tex contains four governors instead of three, Crowley considered the last three Aethyrs (Tex, Rii, and Bag) as a set containing ten governors who could be projected on a Tree of Life (see figure 86).

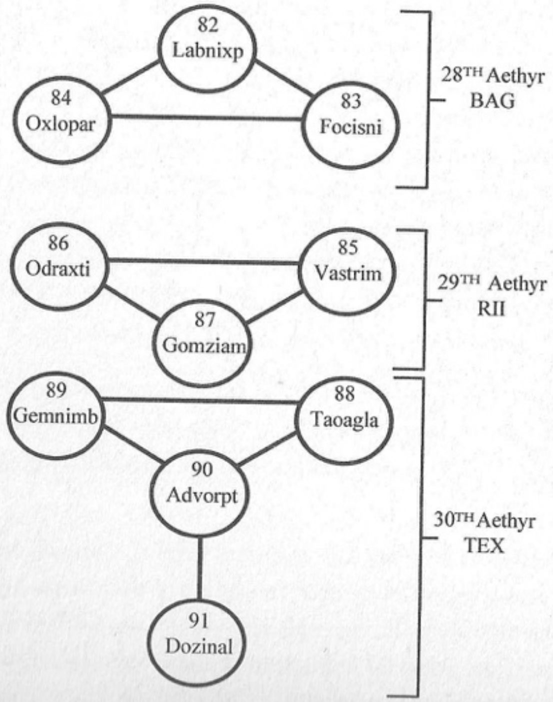

Figure 86: The first (lowest) set of governors (of the thirtieth, twenty-ninth, and twenty-eighth Aethyrs) projected on a single Tree of Life

He then posited that this entire Tree of Life becomes the Malkuth (the tenth and lowest sephirah) of a higher Tree of Life made up of the nine governors of the next three Aethyrs (Zaa, Des, and Vti), which, in turn, become the Malkuth of the next three Aethyrs, and so on all the way to the top.

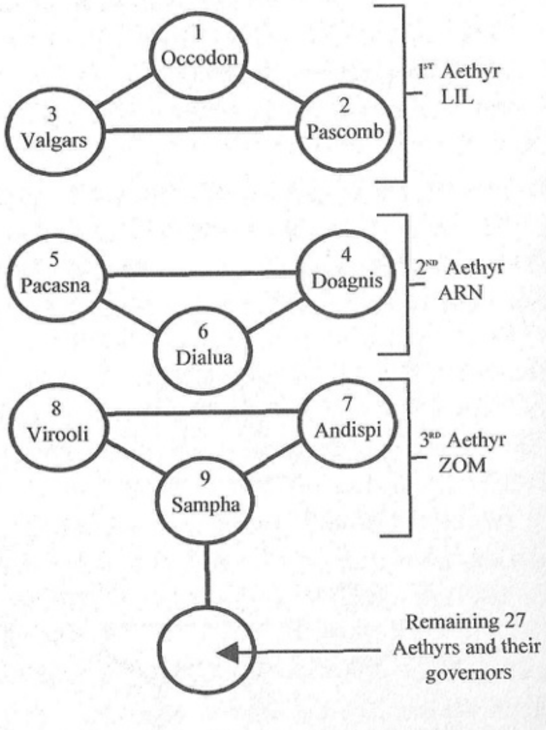

Figure 87: The last (highest) set of governors (of the first, second, and third Aethyrs) with the remaining twenty-seven Aethyrs and their governors encapsulated in a master Malkuth

You may or may not resonate with Crowley's view on this subject. Still, it is not unreasonable to compare the thirty Aethyrs to the sephiroth of the Tree of Life, especially when we understand both of them to be levels of personal initiation. This is precisely how Aleister Crowley viewed them. His systematic scrying of the Aethyrs as he walked across the North African Sahara in 1909 are chronicled in his visionary masterwork, The Vision & the Voice, a text I believe should be studied by anyone interested in Enochian aethyric vision work.

While I certainly am not yet ready to compare my aethyric adventures with those of Crowley's, I have on multiple occasions engaged in a systematic exploration of the Aethyrs. I have, on a number of occasions, scryed each Aethyr, starting with number thirty, Tex, and worked my way to number one, Lil. Even my Monday night magick class is obliged to now and again undergo thirty weeks of scrying the Aethyrs.

Am I suggesting that we all actually achieve the sublime levels of consciousness represented by the higher Aethyrs? Of course I am not. But most of us receive provocative and highly personal visions, especially in the lower Aethyrs. That is because the lower Aethyrs represent levels of consciousness that we visit all the time in the natural course of daily life—in dreams, reveries, ecstasies, even deliriums. Even as I write these words, I am probably dipping into the lower Aethyrs as my memory and imagination conjure images that help me crystallize ideas I can put into words on the page. (I probably spent my entire senior year of high school staring into space and cruising in the lower Aethyrs!)

As the magician moves upwards through the Aethyrs, he or she progressively breaks into higher and higher levels of consciousness. If we are prepared for this new territory, our visions are characterized by a certain spontaneity and lucidity. However, when we begin to get out of our depth—when we haven't yet achieved the level of consciousness necessary to take the next step—our visions become murky and forced, as if we were watching it through a glass darkly. When this happens, the vision is usually characterized by a clear message announcing in no uncertain terms that we have not completely penetrated the Aethyr.

But that is not a bad thing. In fact, it is exactly what we want to happen, because we then know where we are on the initiatory ladder. Moreover, we have a chance of knowing what it is we need to do (or, more accurately, we will know who we need to become) to take the next step in our initiatory career. Allow me to illustrate with a hypothetical example.

Let's say you've resolved to systematically scry all thirty Aethyrs, one per night, from thirty to one, over a one-month period. Each night after your scrying session, you dutifully record in your journal the details of your vision. Everything is going along nicely until you attempt to penetrate in vision the fifteenth Aethyr, Oxo. You recite the nineteenth call in the proper manner and call for the three governors of Oxo (Tahando, Nociabi, and Tastoxo; see figure 63 column IV).

As the vision begins, three angels appear in the mirror, crystal, or your mind's eye, and march in a circle around you so that you cannot move in any direction. They will not respond to your questions or vouchsafe a proper vision. When something like this happens, you know that your present level of consciousness (your personal initiatory grade) is not refined enough to penetrate, let alone appreciate, the next Aethyr. It's as though you are a radio receiver not yet equipped to pull in higher broadcast frequencies. In order for you to do so, you will need to upgrade your equipment by raising your level of consciousness.

You will need to undergo an initiatory experience that will turn you into a more refined visionary traveler. And, as in all initiations, there is an obstacle that needs to be overcome. This obstacle can be anything from a psychological issue to a personal demon or character flaw. In order to conquer it, you might need just a tiny illumination concerning life, or a magical shift of focus, or to successfully achieve a more profound meditative state or trance.

You won't need to look far to discover what this obstacle is. It should be right there in your magical diary, in the record of the last Aethyr you could successfully penetrate. Somewhere in that vision there is a message telling you what it is you must do in order to take the next step in your spiritual journey through the heavens. It is sublimely simple and personal. It makes Enochian aethyric magick, in my opinion, a far more effective and user-friendly method of magical self-transformation than guided meditations or qabalistic pathworkings.

The method I use is straightforward. After performing a banishing and the Ceremony of Preparation, I simply recite the nineteenth call using the name of the particular Aethyr I wish to visit. Then I repeat the names of the three governors of the Aethyr until the vision begins.

The vision is usually characterized by the appearance of one or more of the governors, who stand ready to answer my inquiries and demonstrate the nature of the Aethyr. As in elemental workings, I try not to tire myself, and afterward make a detailed record of my experiences in my diary.

A complete list of the governors is found in chapter eighteen, in column IV of the table designated figure 63, and in appendix II, figure 90.

Epilogue

In the Middle of the Night

Isn't it enough to see that a garden is beautiful without having to believe that there are fairies at the bottom of it too?

—Douglas Adams

It's 3:15 a.m. For the last few days, I have arranged to sleep through the afternoon heat of an unseasonably hot late summer so that I may write undisturbed in the cool peace and quiet of the wee hours. This book of magick has taken me much longer to complete than I anticipated. Did I say "complete"? It's a well-worn cliché that a writer never finishes a work, but merely abandons it. I've finally come to the place where I'm ready to abandon this book. For as slim as it is, it might be hard for you to believe that it has dominated my life for nearly three years. My publisher expected it in their hands over a year ago, and for their patience I am profoundly grateful.

This is far from the end of the material, however. I've worked hard and long on the appendices, which for the practicing Enochian magician will likely become the most worn and dog-eared section of the book.

I must confess that my attitudes concerning Enochian magick have changed many times in the thirty years it has been part of my life. My respect for the magical art form, however, has never diminished and has continued to grow unabated. I feel like the musician who is moved to tears by listening to a great symphony, but who can play only a few tunes himself and those only moderately well.

Perhaps you will never choose to make Enochian magick a part of your spiritual repertoire. Perhaps you will. In either case, as I abandon this book, it is my sincerest hope that I have been able to help you in some small measure attune your magical ear to the music of the spheres.

Adieu.

Appendix I

The Ceremony of Preparation

The magician purifies and banishes the temple as he or she has skill to do so. Below is a standard version of the Lesser Banishing Ritual, a ceremony used by many modern magicians.

Touching the forehead, say, Ateh ("Unto Thee").

Touching the breast, say, Malkuth ("the Kingdom").

Touching the right shoulder, say, ve-Geburah ("and the Power").

Touching the left shoulder, say, ve-Gedulah ("and the Glory").

Clasping the hand upon the breast, say, le-OLAHM, AMEN ("to the Ages, Amen").

Turning to the east, make the banishing pentagram (that of Earth) with the wand. Say, IHVH ("Ye-ho-wau").

Turning to the south, again draw the pentagram but say, ADNI ("Adonai").

Turning to the west, again draw the pentagram but say AHIH ("Eheieh").

Turning to the north, again draw the pentagram, but say AGLA ("Agla").

Extend the arms in the form of a cross say:

Before me Raphael,
Behind me Gabriel,
On my right hand, Michael,
On my left hand, Auriel,
For about me flames the pentagram
And in the column stands the six-rayed star.

Touching the forehead, say, Ateh ("Unto Thee").

Touching the breast, say, Malkuth ("the Kingdom").

Touching the right shoulder, say, ve-Geburah ("and the Power").

Touching the left shoulder, say, ve-Gedulah ("and the Glory").

Clasping the hand upon the breast, say, le-OLAHM, AMEN ("to the Ages, Amen").

The Ceremony of Preparation

The Temple

The Holy Table is set in the middle of the room upon a carpet of red silk. Four small versions of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth rest under the table legs. In the center of the Holy Table rests the Sigillum Dei Aemeth surrounded by the seven Ensigns of Creation. All are covered and draped by a red silk cloth with gold tassels at the corners. The black mirror or scrying crystal is placed upon the covered Sigillum. The Ring and Lamen are at hand upon the covered table.

A chair is positioned before the table so that the face of the scryer may be reflected in the mirror. The chair must also rest upon the red silk carpet. When operating at night or in a dimly lit room, one or two candles can also be place upon the covered Holy Table.

The Ceremony

After banishing, the magician sits down and prays:

> Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. Amen.

The magician picks up the Ring and prays:

> Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

The magician picks up the Lamen and prays:

> Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

The magician recites seven complete rounds of the chant of the Holy Table's Perimeter Letters. If possible, the magician traces with the wand the covered letters he or she is chanting:

Pa Med Fam Med Drux Fam Fam Ur Ged Graph Drux Med Graph Graph Med Med Or Med Gal Ged Ged Drux.

Pa Drux Un Tal Fam Don Ur Graph Don Or Gisg Gon Med Un Ged Med Graph Van Ur Don Don Un.

Pa Drux Ur Ur Don Ur Drux Un Med Graph Graph Med Med Graph Ceph Ged Ged Ur Mals Mals Fam Un.

The magician chants seven rounds of the twelve letters of the Holy Table's central square:

Med Gon Gisg, Don Ur Van, Ur Don Ur, Med Med Graph.
Med Don Ur Med, Gon Ur Don Med, Gisg Van Ur Graph.

The magician chants one round of the names of the forty-nine angels upon the Sigillum Dei Aemeth:

Galas Gethog Thaoth Horlωn Innon Aaoth Galethog

Zaphkiel Zedekiel Cumael Raphael Haniel Michael Gabriel

E(l) Me Ese Iana Akele Azdobon Stimcul

I Ih Ilr Dmal Heeoa Beigia Stimcul

S Ab Ath Izad Ekiei Madimi Esemeli

E An Ave Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemes

Sabathiel Zadkiel Madimiel Semeliel Nogahel Corabiel Lavanael

Finally, the magician quietly whispers the Holy Names of the Round Table of Nalvage. First the angel names of the corners:

luah lang sach urch

Then the god names of the four continents:

Iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf.

The magician then proceeds to the business at hand—calling an angel of an Elemental Tablet or scrying an Aethyr.

When the magician's work is done, he or she dismisses the spirit with thanks and prays:

> Thy Name be mighty, O God, which canst open the veil whereby Thy All-Powerful Will may be opened unto men. Power, Glory, and Honor be unto Thee, For Thou art the same God of all things, and art life eternal. Amen.

Appendix II

The Enochian Calls (Keys)

The genuineness of these Keys, altogether apart from any critical observation, is guaranteed by the fact that anyone with the smallest capacity for Magick finds that they work.

—Aleister Crowley[118]

Invocations?

Enochian magick as developed by the Golden Dawn and widely practiced today uses the first eighteen calls to activate the Elemental Tablets and contact the resident angels. However, in the hectic last days of the Enochian period, Dee was instructed in several places to write his own invocations. It remains unclear to me whether or not the angels were suggesting that additional "homemade" invocations were to be created as appendages to the calls. What is clear to me, after more than a quarter century of practical application, is the fact that the calls by themselves (with only the briefest of additional verbiage to awaken target angels and their hierarchy) serve admirably as the only invocations a magician needs.

Naturally, if it appeals to your magical sense of art to compose additional invocations to utter before and/or after the call, I encourage you to do so.

Pronunciation

You will probably be very surprised at how little time I spend on this subject. In fact, I am very tempted to simply paraphrase Rabbi Ben Clifford's heretical comment about the Hebrew language and tell you bluntly, "There is no such thing as correct Enochian pronunciation!" On a few occasions, the communicating angels gave Dee and Kelley suggestions as to how certain words are pronounced. But, by and large, we modern magicians are left to our own devices as to how to push these awkwardly constructed words out of our mouths.

Dee notated the words of the calls in columns. The left column contained the Enochian word in all uppercase letters—PIRIPSOL, for example. The right column contained the word in upper- and lowercase letters, which split the word into syllables and characterized certain letters as if to suggest pronunciation: Pe ríp sol. Sometimes the translation of the word appeared in a center column: "of the heavens."

The Golden Dawn and Crowley use a pronunciation method that they felt rolled more fluidly off the tongue. This method obliged the magician to insert a natural Hebrew vowel sound after every Enochian consonant. For example, the word butmon (meaning "mouth") would be pronounced, "but-a-mon-u." This is wonderful for words such as this one, giving it an almost Italian lilt. But things get a little crazy when in comes to the letter z, which the English currently pronounce as "zed" and in Dee and Kelley's day was pronounced "zod."

The angels did on occasion instruct Dee when and when not to use "zod," but its universal application to a language that uses the letter z very often becomes, in my opinion, laughably cumbersome. Using the Golden Dawn pronunciation method, the simple, one-syllable Enochain word zims ("clothing") becomes the unwieldy, four-syllable "zod-I-me-zod." You tell me which rolls off the tongue better.

The most obvious alternative to the GD pronunciation is simply sounding out the words as they are written (which appears to be what the angels generally wanted Dee and Kelley to do). For the last fifteen years, this is what I have done, and it is what I recommend to students who are learning Enochian magick. Before that, however, I used the GD/Crowley pronunciation method and was perfectly happy with it. In fact, I still use the Italian sounding method when I recite the first and second calls because I have them memorized and they hold a special place in my heart.

Both methods work just fine. In fact, any sincere effort on the part of the magician to sound out the words as they appear in the call works. Some of the best group scrying sessions I have experienced have followed the most horribly butchered recitations of the calls. It's as though the Enochian angels (like the French) appreciate any attempt on your part to speak their language. I often use the example of a mouse. If a mouse hopped up on your shoe and squeaked, you'd just shoo it away. But if it hopped up on your shoe and started to talk to you in your native tongue, you'd be impressed. You wouldn't even care if it spoke with a thick accent!

I have tried to present the calls below as close as possible to the original spelling, breaks, letter characterization, and punctuation. The English translation that follows each call is generally punctuated in the same way as the Enochian.

The Calls, the Tablet of Union, and the Elemental Tablets

According to the Golden Dawn, Crowley, and many modern Enochian magick practitioners, the first eighteen calls activate the Tablet of Union, the Elemental Tablets, and the hierarchy of angels resident in the tablets in a very specific (and demonstrably logical) manner. Although the Dee and Kelley source material does not support this arrangement, it has become the foundation of a remarkably workable system. This table is the key to their use.

I reign over you, sayeth the God of Justice, in power exalted above the firmaments of wrath: in whose hands the Sun is as a sword and the Moon as a through-thrusting fire which measureth your garments in the midst of my vestures, and trussed you together as the palms of my hands: Whose seats I garnished with the fire of gathering and (which) beautified your garments with admiration: to whom I made a law to govern the holy ones and delivered you a rod with the ark of knowledge. Moreover you lifted up your voices and swear obedience and faith to him that liveth and triumpheth whose beginning is not, nor end can not be, which shineth as a flame in the midst of your palace and reignneth amongst you as the balance of righteousness and truth. Move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the Mysteries of your Creation: Be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

The Call of the Thirty Aethyrs

The nineteenth call is used to open each of the thirty Aethyrs. Only the name of the Aethyr itself (the third word in the first sentence) is changed.

Each Aethyr (with the exception of the thirtieth) is inhabited by three governors, who could be considered personifications of the nature of the Aethyr. I believe that after you recite the call and before you settle down to scry, it is important to pronounce, vibrate, or otherwise incorporate the names of the governors in a brief invocation.

The names of the Aethyrs and their governors are listed in figure 90. If you wish to incorporate the sigils of the governors (the symmetrical characters) for visualizations or to create talismans, the sigils can be found in chapter eighteen, in column VI of figure 63.

O you heavens which dwell in the First Ayre are mighty in the parts of the Earth, and execute the Judgment of the Highest, to you it is said, Behold the face of your God, the beginning of comfort, whose eyes are the brightness of the heavens, which provided you for the government of the Earth and her unspeakable variety, furnishing you with a power of understanding to dispose all things according to the providence of Him that sitteth on the Holy Throne, and rose up in the beginning saying: the Earth let her be governed by her parts and let there be division in her, that the glory of her may be always drunken and vexed in it self. Her course, let it run with the heavens, and as a handmaid let her serve them. One season let it confound an other, and let there be no creature upon or within her the same, All her members let them differ in their qualities, and let there be no one creature equal with an other: the reasonable Creatures of the Earth let them vex and weed out one an other, and the dwelling places let them forget their names: the work of man, and his pomp, let them be defaced: his buildings let them become caves for the beasts of the field. Confound her understanding with darkness. For why? It repenteth me I made Man. One while let her be known and an other while a stranger: because she is the bed of a Harlot, and the dwelling place of Him that is Fallen. O you heavens arise: the lower heavens underneath you, let them serve you! Govern those that govern: cast down such as fall! Bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten! No place let it remain in one number: add and diminish until the stars be numbered! Arise, Move, and Appear before the Covenant of his mouth, which he hath sworn unto us in his Justice. Open the Mysteries of your Creation: and make us partakers of Undefiled Knowledge.

Appendix III

The Geographical Location of the Ninety-one Parts of the Earth Named by Man, as Detailed in John Dee's Liber Scientiae Auxilii Et Victoriae Terrestris[119]

by Robin E. Cousins

Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which forms part of Sloane Manuscript 3191, provides the details necessary to operate a system of magic, by which the magician can discover

> 'how to compare . . . [the] divisions of provinces according to the Divisions of the Stars, with the Ministry of the Ruling Intelligences, and Blessings of the Tribes of Israel, the Lots of the Apostles, and Typical Seals of the Sacred Scripture, [so that he] shall be able to obtain great and prophetical oracles, concerning every region, of things to come.'[120]

On Wednesday 23 May 1584, while in Krakow, John Dee and Edward Kelley received from the Spirit Nalvage the names of ninety-one regions and provinces of the physical world, as defined by man. At this time America was no longer considered to be a group of islands but Australia had yet to be discovered and the search for the North-West Passage had just commenced. The names of the ninety-one parts relate to the Ptolemaic ancient world of about AD 150 with some additions. The Spirit Nalvage explains:

> 'Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolemie, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But unto yon, the very true names of the World in her Creation are delivered.'[121]

The list is not altogether satisfactory. Dee, who was well-versed in geography, had not heard of some of the places and even Nalvage said, 'Here are 15, which were never known in these times . . . The rest are'. Many of the strange locations are indeed in the Polar Regions, which were uncharted at the time. In fact, a considerable Arctic land mass was believed to exist and was featured on sixteenth century maps. Nevertheless, locations for this region are desirable and there are many areas in the extreme north, whether land or sea, which can be covered by the descriptions. The belief of a south polar continent (Tolpam, Part 58) was not inaccurate, a location which can usefully extend to Australasia which was undiscovered at the time.

Two points emerge at the end of the communication relating to known lands not included in the list. Firstly, when Dee asks of 'Polonia, Moschovia, Dania, Hibernia (Ireland), Islandia, and so of many others', Nalvage replies: 'Polonia and Moscovia, are of Sarmatia (Russia); Denmark, Ireland, Frizeland, Iseland, are of Britain: And so it is of the rest.'[122] Does this imply that Brytania (Part 61) can be used to gain access to lands not included within the ninety-one parts? Secondly, when Dee presses Nalvage as to which part governs 'Atlantis and the annexed places, under the King of Spain called the West Indies', Nalvage replies: 'When these 30 appear, they can each tell you what they own. Prepare for tomorrows Action'. The communication is, therefore, incomplete. Unfortunately, 'tomorrows Action' never occurred, because Kelley believed Nalvage to have taken the descriptions from books, including Agrippa's Occult Philosophy, and refused to communicate further. 'E. K. remained of his wilful intent', noted a frustrated Dee. However, Onigap (Part 34) may refer to these lands and there is the possibly implied use of Brytania, as described above. Note that Dee held that the term 'West Indies' was very misleading and preferred to use 'Atlantis' instead of 'America', as a name for the new lands. Nevertheless, the additional thirty parts wait to be realised, which would bring the total of the parts of the Earth to 121. It is interesting to speculate, whether they would affect the design of the Great Table.

Dee bought Gerhard Mercator's Universal Chart of the World and the geographical work of Pomponius Mela to help him with his locations. He does not record his success. Ultimately, the advice of Nalvage in relation to Chaldei (Part 42) and Chaldea (Part 72) is the only way to establish the locations of the obscure and ambiguously described parts of the world: 'You shall finde the difference of it, in practice'.

The Ninety-One Parts of the World

Many of the locations are well-known. However, for the obscurer areas Dee's Spiritual Diaries (Cotton Appendix XLVI, Parts 1 & 2, published as A True and Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits, edited by Meric Casaubon, 1659) are often the only guide. In these instances, supportive quotations are given. Other parts, especially those located by Kelley or Nalvage in the Far Orient or in the Arctic regions, are difficult to place on the world map today, as in Dee's time these regions were largely unexplored and uncharted.

1 AEGYPTUS: Egypt.

2 SYRIA: Southern Syria.

3 MESOPOTAMIA: Land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in Northern Iraq and North-East Syria.

4 CAPPADOCIA: Extensive province of Central Turkey, stretching from the Black Sea in the north to Cilicia (Part 14) in the south. The original territory, Cappadocia Proper, occupied the southern areas.

5 TUSCIA: Tuscany or Etruria, a province in Central Italy including Florence.

6 PARVA ASIA: Asia Minor, Anatolia or Asiatic Turkey.

7 HYRCANIA: Area south-east of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

8 THRACIA: Thrace includes Eastern Greece, Turkey in Europe, and Southern Bulgaria.

9 GOSMAM: According to Kelley, 'Here appear great Hills, and veins of the Gold Mines appear: the men seem to have baskets of leather. This is one of the places under the Pole Artick.'

10 THEBAIDI: Thebes (Egypt) and surrounding area.

11 PARSADAL: Kelly, 'Here the sun shineth fair.' Most probably Pasargardae or Parsagarda ('the habitation of the Persians'), the ancient capital of Parsa/Persis/Persia Proper or the modern Iranian province of Fars (Part 74). Parsagarda is located about 60 miles northeast of Shiraz.

12 INDIA: Includes Indian provinces along the Indus River, roughly present-day Pakistan and India West of the Ganges (India Intra Ganges).

13 BACTRIANE: Bactriana covers Northern Afghanistan and the south-east of the Turkmenistan, the River Amu Darya (Oxus) forming the northern boundary. For lands to the north of the river, see Sogdiana (Part 26).

14 CILICIA: Coastal country bordering the Mediterranean in South-East Turkey.

15 OXIANA: Alexandreia Oxiana, a town and its surrounding area on the Oxus River (Amu Darya) on the borders of Northern Afghanistan and Uzbekistan.

16 NUMIDIA: Eastern Algerian coastal district between Africa (Part 86) and Mauretania (Part 91).

17 CYPRUS: Cyprus.

18 PARTHIA: North-East Iran, to the south of Hyrcania (Part 7). The region has a common border with Turkmenistan.

19 GETULIA: The Western Sahara, south of Morocco, including Southern Algeria, Mali and the modern state of Mauritania.

20 ARABIA: Saudi Arabia.

21 PHALAGON: Dee: 'I have never heard of it.'

Kelley: 'It is toward the North, where the veines of Gold . . . appear . . . The men have things on their shoulders of beasts skins.'

Dee: 'Groynland as I think' (i.e. Greenland).

22 MANTIANA: This is Matiana or the Mattieni by Lacus Matianus, now Lake Urmia in North-Western Iran. The population is mainly Kurdish. Lake Van, approximately 200 miles west in Eastern Turkey, was once called Lake Mantiana.

23 SOXIA: Sacae/Sachia/Sakas approximates with Xinjiang Uygar or Sinkiang Uighur region, North-West China. It is also known as Chinese Turkistan.

Kelley: 'People here appear of reddish colour.'

24 GALLIA: A 'greater' France with the Rhine forming the northern and eastern boundaries, thereby including Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Southern Netherlands.

25 ILLYRIA: At its greatest extent, Illyria included Central and Eastern Austria, Western Hungary or Transdanubia, the former Yugoslavia excluding Macedonia, Northern Bulgaria and Romania.

26 SOGDIANA: District between the rivers Amu Darya (Oxus) and Syr Darya (Jaxartes) including Uzbekistan, with the cities of Bokhara and Samarkand, and Western Tajikistan. Afghanistan is to the south, for which see Bactriana (Part 13).

27 LYDIA: Coastal region in Western Turkey.

28 CASPIS: Area to the south-west of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

29 GERMANIA: Includes modern Germany, Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, and extends to the Italian border in the south, incorporating Switzerland and the Tyrol in Western Austria. In the north, Germania can include Denmark, Norway and Sweden, although Dee was told that Brytania (Part 61) could be used for Denmark, which at that time governed Norway as well.

30 TRENAM: Kelley: 'Here appear Monkies, great flocks. The people have leather Coats, and no beards, thick leather, and Garthers . . . '

Nalvage: 'These people are not known to you?'

Dee: 'Are they not in Africa?'

Nalvage: 'They be.'

Probably Teniam, a region on Jodocus Hondius's World Map (1608) straddling the Ivory Coast/Upper Volta/Ghana borderlands.

31 BITHYNIA: Black Sea coastal region in the north of Turkey, west of Paphlagonia (Part 40), including Istanbul (Asian side).

32 GRAECIA: Nalvage: 'A great Citie, and the Sea hard by it.'

Dee: 'Is not that great Citie Constantinople?'

Nalvage: 'It is . . .'

Graecia is thus Istanbul, not Greece; for which use Achaia (Part 37).

33 LICIA: Lycia is a country on the south coast of Turkey or Anatolia.

34 ONIGAP: Kelley: 'Here appear handsome men, in gathered tucked garments, and their shoes come up to the middle of their legs, of diverse coloured leather.'

Nalvage: 'These be beyond Hispaniola.'

Kelley: 'It is a low Countrey. Here appear great piles of Stones like St Andrews Crosses . . . There are on this side of it (a great way) a great number of dead Carkases . . .'

Nalvage: 'It is beyond Giapan.' (That is, beyond Japan across the Pacific to the Americas. Note that Onigap is an anagram of Giapon.)

Dee: 'Then it is that land, which I use to call Atlantis.'

Nalvage: 'They stretch more near the west.'

This can only be Mexico, particularly the Yucatan. Beyond Hispaniola (Haiti and Domenica) and west of 'Atlantis' or America is Central Mexico and the Yucatan, which is a low-lying peninsula. The people wore bright colours; the temples could resemble St Andrew's crosses; and, many people were slaughtered by the Spanish Conquistadores.

35 INDIA MAJOR: India Extra Gangem or India east of the Ganges, which includes all of South-East Asia.

36 ORCHENY: Nalvage: 'A great many little Isles.'

> Dee: 'Do you mean the Isles of Orkney?'
>
> Nalvage: 'No.'
> Dee: 'They seem to be the Isles of Malacha.'

Dee is mistakenly thinking of the islands around Malaya (Malacha or Malacca) or even the Moluccas. The Orcheni were a people south of Chaldea (Part 72), living on or by islands in the marshlands of the lower Tigris and Euphrates.

37 ACHAIA: Southern Greece, including Athens and the Peloponnisos.

38 ARMENIA: Extensive region which, most comprehensively, stretches from the Euphrates in eastern Turkey to the Caspian Sea, thereby including Armenia and Azerbaijan.

39 CILICIA (NEMROD): Nalvage: 'You never knew this Cilicia. This is Cilicia where the Children of Nemrod dwell. It is up in the Mountains beyond Cathay.' Probably Calatia, a region in this location featured on Emery Molyneux's terrestrial globe of 1592. It equates with the extreme north-eastern province of Russia by the Bering Straits, the Magandan Oblast. Cilicia in Turkey is Part 14.

40 PAPHLAGONIA: Black Sea coastal country in the north of Turkey.

41 PHASIANA: Mainly Kurdish region in Eastern Turkey, north of Lake Van, not to be confused with Phazania/Fezzan in Libya, for which see Garamantica (Part 45).

42 CHALDEI: The people of Chaldea (Part 72).

43 ITERGI: Nalvage: '. . . the people are yellow, tawney . . . They are to the south of the last Cilicians.' This is possibly Mongolia, Manchuria (North-East China), and Korea. The name appears in this region on a terrestrial globe, dated 1492, of German geographer Martin Behaim (c.1459–1507).

44 MACEDONIA: Northern Greece and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

45 GARAMANTICA: Garamantes, a large area in Inner Africa, covering the Eastern Sahara, including the south of Libya (Fezzan), extreme South-Eastern Algeria, Niger and Chad.

46 SAUROMATICA: Sarmatia or European Russia.

47 AETHIOPIA: Includes Ethiopia south of Egypt and also the entire unknown African continent south of the Equator, which was known as Ethiopia Interior in Dee's time. Unexplored parts of Africa north of the Equator were known as Libya Interior.

48 FIACIM: Kelley: 'Now he sheweth by the North Pole and the great Mountain.'

This is the North Pole. A great mountain was believed to exist at the Pole.

49 COLCHICA: Colchis roughly equates with the modern Republic of Georgia, located to the east of the Black Sea.

50 CIRENIACA: Cyrenaica, a Mediterranean coastal region of Eastern Libya.

51 NASAMONIA: Ill-defined north-eastern Libyan coastal district by the Gulf of Sirte in the west of Cireniaca (Part 50).

52 CARTHAGO: Carthage, Tunisia.

53 COXLANT: Nalvage: 'It appeareth very Eastward.'

Kelley: 'It is on high ground. There come four Rivers out of it, one East, another West, another North, and another South . . . Is this the Paradise that Adam was banished out of?'

Nalvage: 'The very same.'

A discussion follows which does not help to locate Coxlant. The search for the Earthly Paradise, like the Eldorado, was the dream of early explorers. The four rivers are the Pison (The Persian Gulf?), Gihon (The Nile?), Hiddekel (Tigris), and Euphrates. The favourite location of Paradise was considered to be a little north of the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates. However, other locations favoured sites further north in Mesopotamia and Armenia. Tibet could be another location. It is very easterly; on high ground; and the four rivers are the Mekong (east), the Indus (west), the Yangtze (north), and the Brahmaputra (south). Ultimately, however, the location of Coxlant or the Earthly Paradise must rest with the spirituality of the individual.

54 IDUMEA: Also called Edom, this is Southern Israel and Jordan.

55 PARSTAVIA: Actually Bastarnia, approximately Bessarabia or Moldavia to the east of Romania.

56 CELTICA: Nalvage: 'It is that which you call Flandria, the Low Country.'

This is North-West France and Belgium, not Central Gaul which is usually known as Celtica.

57 VINSAN: Kelley: 'Here appear men with tallons like Lions. They be very devils. There are five isles of them.'

Suggest the ancient kingdom of Wu-Sun, south of Lake Balkhash in Kazakhstan. The 'isles' could be communities near the lake.

58 TOLPAM: Kelley: 'Under the South Pole.' This is Antarctica and Australasia.

59 CARCEDONIA: Carchedonia or modern Tunisia.

60 ITALIA: Italy, including the Istrian Peninsula in Croatia.

61 BRYTANIA: The British Isles, Scandinavia, and possibly places not included in the 91 parts.

62 PHENICES: Phoenicia, approximately the Lebanon and Northern Israel.

63 COMAGINEN: Commagene, a land-locked district in Southern Turkey, bounded on the east by the Euphrates and on the south by Syria. Cilicia (Part 14) is to the west.

64 APULIA: Province in south-east Italy between the Apennines and the Adriatic, bounded on the south by Calabria or the 'heel' of Italy.

65 MARMARICA: North African coastal region straddling the Egyptian and Libyan border. The Nile forms the eastern boundary.

66 CONCAVA SYRIA: Hollow Syria, usually known as Coele Syria, now forms Northern Syria.

67 GEBAL: Later Byblos, now Jubayl, about twenty miles north of Beirut, Lebanon.

68 ELAM: Also known as Susiana, it is approximately the same as the modern Iranian province of Khuzestan at the north of the Persian Gulf, bordering Iraq and including Abadan.

69 IDUNIA: Nalvage: 'It is beyond Greenland.'

70 MEDIA: North-Western Iran, south of Caspis (Part 28) and Hyrcania (Part 7). Includes Teheran.

71 ARIANA: Eastern Iran, Pakistan west of the Indus, Southern Afghanistan.

72 CHALDEA: A tract of country in South Iraq running along the Euphrates from the Persian Gulf to Babylon (about 50 miles south of Bagdad). The Shamiya Desert forms the western boundary.

73 SERICIPOPULI: A people in Eastern Asia. Serica or Seres equates with China and the Far East.

74 PERSIA: Persis or Parsa, this is approximately the modern Iranian province of Fars. Located in South-West Iran and bounded on the west by the Persian Gulf, the province was the kernel of ancient Persia and includes the ancient cities of Parsagarda (Part 11) and Persepolis.

75 GONGATHA: Kelley: 'Towards the South Pole.'

This is Gongala, an area to the south of Libya Interior by the Equator. In the sixteenth century Kelley's description is apt, but today the region equates with South Sudan.

76 GORSIM: Kelley: 'Beares and Lions here.'

Most probably Chorazin/Korazim/Gorazim, an ancient site to the north of Lake Tiberias (Sea of Galilee), Israel, with the ruins of a black basalt synagogue. The place was condemned by Jesus and legend claims the Antichrist will be born there. Note also Chorasmia/Khorezm/Khiva, south-east of the Caspian Sea in Turkmenistan.

77 HISPANIA: Spain and Portugal.

78 PAMPHILIA: Southern Turkish coastal land, between Lycia (Part 33) and Cilicia (Part 14), forming a narrow strip of land around the Bay of Antalya.

79 OACIDI: This is Oasitae ('. . . of the Oasis'), the oasis area west of the Nile, which includes the great oasis of the Oracle of Amon.

80 BABYLON or BABYLONIA: Region in Southern Iraq, extending north from the Persian Gulf between the Lower Tigris and the northeastern Arabian desert. Babylon, the capital, is about fifty miles south of Bagdad.

81 MEDIAN: Kelley: 'It is much Northward.'

Note, however, Midian—the land of the Midianites by Sinai; or, even the people of Media (Part 70).

82 IDUMIAN: Kelley: 'They are two Isles environed with an arm of the Scythian Sea, which goeth in at Maspi.'

Most probably the region to the north-east of the Aral Sea in the Kazakhstan. Suggest 'Maspi' is a corruption of the Aspisii Montes/Mons Aspisii, which shortened to M. Aspisii, distorts to Maspi. The mountains were supposedly located in this region, but in the sixteenth century much of this land and especially the far north of Siberia or Scythia was Terrae Incognita. Mercator's map of North-East Asia, which is dated 1569, shows a hypothetical arm of the Scythian Sea (Laptev and East Siberian seas) almost reaching to the north-east of the Aral Sea with the M. Aspisii nearby. The Aspisii Scythea were the people dwelling to the west of the mountains and to the north of the River Jaxartes (Syr Darya). Note also, however, the Arimaspi detailed in Part 88 below. The Maspii, a noble Persian tribe, are too far south to be considered.

83 FELIX ARABIA: Arabian Red Sea coastlands, particularly the south-western areas, including the Yemen.

84 METAGONITIDIM: The Metagonitae were a people living in Tangiers and the surrounding area. The district forms the west of Mauretania (Part 91) or modern Northern Morocco.

85 ASSYRIA: Eastern Iraq between the Tigris and the Iranian border.

86 AFRICA: Mediterranean coastal region of Libya, including Tripoli and the modern province of Tripolitania, but excluding the eastern part, for which see Cireniaca (Part 50) and Nasamonia (Part 51). The region also includes the eastern Algerian coastlands and the Algerian/Tunisian border. This is not the continent of Africa.

87 BACTRIANI: The people of Bactriana (Part 13).

88 AFNAN or AFRAN: Kelley: 'Here appear people with one eye in their head, seeming to be in their breast, towards the Equinoctial.'

Dee: 'I remember of people called Arimaspi.'

Dee is confused here, as the Arimaspi ('the one-eyed') were a people on the left bank of the Middle Volga, north of the Caspian Sea. The Afran are the people Ptolemy called the Aphricerones, located just north of Equatorial Africa in North Zaire. The ancient scholars considered that all the southern parts of Africa were uninhabitable (as with many unexplored lands) and populated with strange beasts. Herodotus included in his conjectures on unknown Africa descriptions of peoples with 'one eye in the breast instead of the usual head', which must be the people referred to.

89 PHRYGIA: Large province in Central Turkey. Greater Phrygia was bounded on the east by Cappadocia (Part 4).

90 CRETA: Crete.

91 MAURITANIA or MAURETANIA: Morocco and the north Algerian coastlands, not to be confused with the modern state of Mauritania, which is located further south and for which see Getulia (Part 19).

The Three Great Secret Names of God

At the very top of the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet are the Three Great Secret Names of God. In the practice of modern Enochian magick, prior to contacting any angel from the Elemental Tablet, the Three Great Secret Names of God should be first be invoked. The Golden Dawn and Crowley incorporated the names in a preliminary temple opening. Whether you use these temple openings in your own work, or if you design your own opening ritual, you must never neglect to recognize by name the Three Great Secret Names of God who rule the Elemental Tablet you are working with.

The Seniors and the Kings

Next in hierarchical order are the six seniors and the king of the Elemental Tablet. After invoking the Three Great Secret Names of God, these seven angels must also be recognized by name and made part of the magician's opening ritual.

If you are invoking an individual senior, you may omit the names of the other seniors (but not the king) in your ritual opening.

Three Examples of Enochian Magick Visions

Nanta, elo Hoath zorge ef.

"Spirit of Earth, first worshiper friendly visit."

—LAIDROM, MARS SENIOR OF EARTH

Example I[123]

First Session (September 25, 1980) Laidrom, Mars senior of the Elemental Tablet of Earth. Scryer: David P. Wilson.

For our first evocation session I decided we would work as Dee and Kelley did. One person would act as seer, and one as operator. The seer would recite the appropriate call, receive the vision, and communicate it during or after the session. The operator would banish, open and close the temple, and question the seer. I would be the operator, but I did not know who in our little class would be the first to sit in the visionary driver's seat. On class night there was only one rather reluctant volunteer.

David P. Wilson was not new to the world of magick. In the years leading up to his affiliation with our lodge he sat in with a host of magical groups and workshops in the Los Angeles area upon whom he later heaped scorn and ridicule because of their inability to show him "real magick." He was the boldest member of the class, also the most impatient and sarcastic. I could see the Enochian class going down in flames on opening night because David the curmudgeon once again "saw nothing!" He had done none of the preliminary Enochian work with the rest of the class. He hadn't painted a set of tablets or studied any of the calls. Still, he was our only volunteer.

I can't recall why but I decided we would to try to contact LAIDROM, the Mars Senior of the Elemental Tablet of Earth. In the spirit of better safe than sorry, we placed the Earth tablet in the South (Capricorn/Cardinal Earth) and enclosed the entire class in a circle cast with a clothesline cord. I banished with the rituals of the lesser and greater pentagrams and hexagrams, then opened the temple and invoked the hierarchical names as indicated in Liber Chanokh. David was seated on the floor at the southern edge of the circle, just inches away from the Earth tablet. Leaning against the wall behind the tablet was a huge cardboard version of the [Elemental] Tablet of Earth that I placed there for the other members of the class to focus upon. I turned on the tape recorder and gave David a copy of the Call to read. I sat down behind him while he read it aloud.

He did rather well considering he had never read it before. When he was finished, he closed his eyes and took a deep breath. Nothing happened. I asked him to read the Call again. He did so and after only a few seconds he said, "I have a landscape. I see a landscape."

I was relieved beyond words. "What does it look like?"

David proceeded to describe in surprising detail a desert vista of flat, trackless white crystalline powder stretching to the horizon. Great gray columns of volcanic rock towering over the plain broke the monotony of the scene. Between the columns the ground was pockmarked with countless gaping pits.

That was it. Nothing else was occurring. I asked him to read the Call a third time. This time there was movement. From out of a pit in the center of his field of vision arose a black cone. He said it sparkled from the inside and upon its surface with thousands of little sparks that jumped from one star to another.

I asked, "Is this LAIDROM?"

David grabbed his pencil and notepad and quickly scribbled something. I looked at what he had drawn. It looked like four very poorly drawn Enochian letters. At the time it meant nothing to me. I asked for a clearer answer. "Is this LAIDROM?"

"It's him! It's him! I see him."

He described a humanoid figure draped in the same material from which the cone was constructed. He had an egg-shaped head but no face. His hands were like mittens—there were no fingers. He reached his arm toward the ground and "drew" a diagram in the sand in front of him. David quickly copied the figure on the notepad. It was a square divided diagonally by two lines with a small circle in the lower left-hand corner. We took this to be LAIDROM's signature.

We were all very excited. It was as if the entire class saw David's vision in our mind's eye. Then it occurred to me. Now that we've got this guy, what the hell are we to do with him? Before I could think of what to do next, David said, "Lon, I feel like . . . I feel . . . I could make strange sounds."

This was a twist. "Let yourself." I told him. "Go with it." I tried to sound calm.

"Naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayeff. . . this is bullshit!"

"No! Relax, let it happen!"

"I mean it, I feel like an idiot. I'm too . . . zil-zi-anzilzi-lo-da-arp nan-ta . . . (inaudible) . . . ef . . . efee thar-zi. I am sorry. That's all. Nothing like this has ever happened before. I just felt like doing it." David's apology was comical. We all broke into nervous giggles.

It had been quite an evening. As we had planned nothing particular to do with LAIDROM, I thought it wise to quit while we were ahead. I asked David to thank our spirit guest for his visit and proceeded to banish and close the temple.

One of the class members had brought along his Enochian Dictionary[124] and suggested we try to use it to see if David's strange babbling actually meant something. I rewound the tape and played it back from the beginning. Everything was crystal clear right up to the time of LAIDROM's appearance, when the tape developed an irritating distortion. We joked that it was the fault of malicious spirits and expected it to soon clear up. It did not. In fact, by the time the tape reached David's babbling we could hardly pick his voice out from behind the bank of white noise. As soon as the good stuff was over, the distortion suddenly stopped.

Noise notwithstanding, after replaying the section of tape a dozen times or more, we picked up enough of what was being said to write down three audible strings of syllables:

naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayeff.

zil-zi-anzilzi-lo-da-arp nan-ta . . . (inaudible) and ef . . . efee thar-zi.

Starting at the beginning, we painstakingly played with the phonetics of each word (and the word/words following) and attempted to match them with words in the Enochian Dictionary. Obviously we weren't being very scientific, nor, I confess, very objective. This was all very exciting and romantic, and I am sure that night we would have squeezed some profundity out of any string of sounds. Be that as it may, it took less than an hour to break the sounds up as follows:

Nanta, elo Hoath zorge ef.—Which translated neatly to: "Spirit of Earth, first worshiper friendly visit."

Zil zien—"stretch forth hands"

Zilodarp Nanta—"stretch forth and conquer Spirit of Earth"

Ef etharzi—"visit in peace."

Needless to say we were all very impressed. At the end of the evening it was agreed that from now on class would meet two times a week to pursue Enochian magick. Sadly, David's ability to break spontaneously into the Enochian language would diminish rapidly as his familiarity with the language of the Calls increased. After the fourth or fifth session, he lost the ability completely. His visions, on the other hand, became clearer, more informative, and more provocative.

Example 2

Monday Night Magick Class (July 17, 2006) Twenty-ninth Aethyr Rii. Scryer: Jill Belanger

Enochian scrying sessions sometimes trigger emotional, physical, even sexual reactions. This is a clip from the transcription of a recording of a Monday night magick class scrying of the twenty-ninth Aethyr, Rii, and its governors: Vastrim, Odraxti, and Gomziam. The main scryer in this session was Jill Belanger, one of the class's most talented seers. It demonstrates that Enochian visions need not take the form of biblical-esque landscapes and heavy magical pronouncements. I thank Jill for being a very good sport and allowing us to eavesdrop on part of this provocative session.

This session started with the full opening ritual as outlined in chapter one.

As soon as I closed my eyes I was pulled into a vortex, an upside down six, and I was pulled in with an . . . um . . . another gentleman, a lover, a man, and we were instantly in sexual ecstasy going in water in the form of six, and just flying around, the flame was in the middle, and the water was swirling around, and I was lost in that ecstasy for a while. And then I thought, No, I've got to figure out what this message is about. So I tried to push him away. (Laughter from class.) And I said (very drunkenly), "Gumziam [sic], where are you? And I kept flying around in the water vortex. I then saw two triangles together but three dimensional, in sort of like (garbled) with three or four sides instead of eight sides, and then the two triangles . . . one split off from the other one. One on top, one on bottom, and the widest parts were together, and I was standing in the middle . . . and it was like the floor and ceiling were separating and apart.

And I looked down, and the floor was split into four parts, not like the Watchtowers, more like pyramids, and one was Fire, Water, Earth, and Air. Then it was stuck back together again, and I was swirling with the vortex again. I said, "Fire creates, but water solidifies," and the two pyramids went back together, and I was with this lover again, floating around, and I was like, "OK! Let's . . . well . . . OK!" (Laughter from class.) I'm still kind of hot! (More laughter.)

Public Workshop (July 22, 2006) Thirtieth Aethyr, Tex. Scryer: name withheld

The following is a letter I received a few days after I returned home from a workshop series on Enochian vision magick. The vision the young woman describes occurred during a scrying session that concluded a half-day public workshop. She, like most of the attendees at this event, had never performed Enochian magick before.

After I had outlined a brief history of Dee and Kelley's adventures and the fundamentals of Enochian magick, the entire class took part in the ritual and chanting of the Ring/Lamen/Holy Table/Sigillum/Table of Nalvage opening ceremony. Over their two-part chorus of the Table of Nalvage words, I recited the nineteenth call to penetrate the thirtieth Aethyr, Tex. Here is her experience.

Hi, Lon!

Thanks again for making the trek here . . . last weekend. I learned a lot more than I had expected to, which is why I'm writing you this. I didn't get a chance to talk to you about the things I saw/did when you led the class foray into the Enochian aethyrs, and initially I was hesitant to because of the rather personal nature of some of it. But after talking to [my brother] about it, I realized I should tell you; in fact, he insisted I do so. So here goes.

We had just finished chanting the Holy Table, and you indicated we should close our eyes while you continued chanting and just follow the images that came to us. Initially I got not images per se, but random geometric shapes in dark shades of purple and green, mostly pyramids, and pyramids of one color in front of squares of a slightly darker shade. I realized that I was falling forward, swiftly, down a triangular corridor filled with a dark purplish haze, with occasional lighter purple flashes—like falling through layers and layers and layers, whoosh, whoosh, whoosh, with something spinning all around me at the same time. Then I realized I wasn't going down anymore, but rising, still through this triangular purple infused corridor, whoosh, whoosh, whoosh, still the spinning, and I began to feel my heart pounding like it would burst inside me, I felt dizzy and slightly nauseous, and just when I thought I couldn't stand it for another moment longer, I stopped speeding forward, and the purple mist cleared, and I was standing on a grassy plain, almost a hilltop, that rose slightly upward in front of me. I realized that the thing that had been spinning seemed to be the petals of an enormous flower, a lotus, perhaps, and that the hillside on which I stood was contained within its perimeter, like a low wall going around it. It occurs to me now that I was facing north.

Beyond the border of the wall were two more hills in the distance, one to the left and one to the right, covered in vibrant dark green vegetation, and I knew vaguely that there were Things in those hills, in those trees, but I didn't have time to think about them. There were four pillars that stretched up around me, at the outside edge of the wall, and as I watched, a pyramid rose up out of the hillside in front of me, or perhaps I simply moved swiftly up the hillside towards it. It wasn't large, maybe only one or one and a half stories high; it was four sided and made of a smooth golden brick or stone. A blinding light issued from the center of it, and, as I watched, the form of a person appeared in the center of this light and was walking towards me.

My impression was that he came from inside the pyramid, and he seemed to be coming from some distance, though the pyramid was just in front of me. He was tall and blond and blue eyed and wore a garment of brilliant white and a golden circlet about his temples. And he was smiling, he was so glad to see me. As he came close to me, he opened up the robe to reveal a column of blinding white light running down the centerline of his body. As my eyes adjusted to the light, I realized that the light was coming from his chakras, which were blazing yellow-white light and shaped sort of like flowers. I realized that my chakras were also blazing, and the light from his heart chakra leapt forward in a thin white-yellow tongue of flaming light and entered my heart chakra. Then his throat chakra flamed and leapt into mine, and then all of them at once seemed to, and that blazing sharing of chakra light continued for a few blissful, amazing moments.

He held his hands out in front of him, palms facing toward me, and I placed my palms against them, and the chakras in our hands blazed with light and fire for a moment. Then he took my hands and pulled them straight into his chest so that I held his heart chakra in my hands, and then he indicated that I should put his heart chakra inside my chest. I was amazed that he would suggest that, and slightly hesitant, but he was insistent, and together we thrust it into my chest. I was stunned at the force of the heat of the union of our two heart chakras. Then he gestured to his throat chakra, and again, I took his chakra in my hands, and lifted it out of him and into myself, with another flash of heat. Then I lifted out his third-eye chakra, then his solar plexus chakra, then his hara chakra. I reached next for his root chakra, and realized that in my hands it had become a huge golden phallus, and as in the curious logic of dreams, there was only one obvious way to integrate that into myself—I mounted it, and at the same time, I reached up and removed the crown from his head, symbolic of his crown chakra, and placed it on my own head at the same moment as the phallus slid into me, and the universe exploded. It wasn't sex, it wasn't copulation, it was Union, I was perfectly with and within him, and he was perfectly with and within me. It was Bliss, it was Light, it was Perfection. I heard his voice in my ear, saying, "You are She, in Whom all things are received; She in Whom all things are created; She in Whom all things are possible. All Life is Yes; all Love is Know. Know that You are She."

At about that moment, I heard your voice saying something about looking around for landmarks that would help me remember this place, and I laughed to myself that I wasn't likely to forget this. You said something else about bringing back a sign, or a key or talisman from this place, something to know and remember it by that would help me return, and I pulled back slightly from this Being with a wordless question, and his answer was to withdraw from me, and he ejaculated into my outstretched hands, a liquid golden light that turned into two glowing, golden diamond crystals that sank into my palms and disappeared as I watched.

Then your voice said it was time to return, and without another word or glance between us I was whisked up and away, coming back into awareness of my body with a nauseating thud, my head spinning, my heart pounding painfully. You started asking us questions about what we'd seen, where we'd been, and I was too nauseated and out of breath to answer, but was amazed to hear my classmates describing similar imagery, lotuses, columns, towers, pyramids, though no one else seemed to have experienced anything close to what had passed between me and that other Being—or at least, no one was admitting to it. I sat there in a haze, listening to them, thinking about my own experience, and waiting for my heart to quit pounding, my stomach to stop churning. I must have looked pretty stunned, because [my husband] asked me if I was OK, and all I could initially articulate to him as he looked over at me was, "What the f___ just happened to me?"

We broke for dinner at about that moment, and I realized my opportunity to share it with the class had passed. But I still wanted to tell you about it, and, of course, [my husband]. We had driven separate cars that day, so we met at the house before going to the restaurant, and there at home I told him. He stared at me while I told him about it, saying it was pretty amazing, but I'd better not say anything about it in front of the class as a whole, that it was way too personal to just lay out there that way. He suggested I call [my brother], that he'd be able to decode it for me and would definitely be interested. I agreed, but thought at the same time that I really should tell you, but wanted to do so in private.

We went to dinner and then to the meet and greet with the class, but I held back, there were always too many people around. Perhaps now, after reading my account, you understand my hesitancy. Because to be honest, I wasn't sure how to begin, I was still unsure of myself, unsure of how to confess to someone I had only just met that under his direction I had experienced a union that was way more than sexual with someone who was apparently a Being of Light, a resident of the angelic realms, and also not sure of what that said about me. But I knew who would know what it all meant, and so as soon as I got home on Sunday, I called my brother and told the whole story to him. He was jubilant, congratulatory, awestruck, and then he asked me, "Well, what did Lon say when you told him?" I had to admit that I hadn't been sure of what or how to communicate it, and had been further stymied by my husband's reaction to it. My brother was incredulous. How could I not have shared that vision with you, who of all people, would understand it and sympathize with my bewilderment at it? I should have told you everything, he insisted. I agreed and promised him I would write you. And so here we are.

My brother was curious to know which of the Aethyrs you had us reading from, and I couldn't remember; my husband thinks you said we were only going to push ourselves up a level, but my brother thinks I went farther than that and said you might recognize which one. There were things about the place that I recognized from dreams—it's a place I've dreamed of my whole life but never consciously remembered until now. I'm not unaccustomed to visions and vision quests, but this was unlike anything I've ever done before. My body's reaction to it was visceral; I crashed hard when I came back from it, and I continued to feel the physical aftereffects for several days (kind of like recovery from a bad acid trip). Today, Thursday, I'm finally feeling back up to steam. My brother said that's a normal reaction to astral projection; is that really what I did? I have my own theories about the imagery and symbolism. I'm a massage therapist and energy worker, a master of the Usui and Karuna systems of Reiki, and the student of a spirit guide who was a Native American shaman. The ejaculation of light that turned into crystals and sank into my palms resonates with me on several levels. I think one possible meaning is that it was a gift to use in my healing work. I can tell you that all this week, whenever I've "turned on" the Reiki or use one of the symbols, the chakras in my palms blaze with heat, my patients have actually commented on it! (In fact, they're heating up right now, just thinking about it.) [My brother] didn't exactly discount my idea about it, but he said there was a lot more mystical significance there than I realized, or than he should even talk to me about until I talked to you. Obviously, it's loaded with archetypal images, but I would love to know what you get from them, what level you sent me to, and if you recognize anything from my descriptions.

Thanks for your patience. This has turned from an email into a novella! I eagerly await your reply!

Brightest blessings!

18 In magick, "invocation" usually refers to the calling into oneself the presence or the essence of Deity; "evocation" usually refers to calling forth a spiritual entity (angel, spirit, demon, etc.) into the magician's triangle of art, there to be constrained and charged to do the magician's bidding. Theoretically, once the magician has successfully invoked the divine presence within himself or herself, he or she then has the divine authority to evoke the spirits.

21 The title doctor has for centuries been attached to John Dee, and certainly his academic and professorial stature among his counterparts was enormous. However, there are no records of him actually receiving a doctorate degree. 49 "From the year 1579 in approximately this manner, in Latin or English (and furthermore in another singular and particular manner around the year 1569, sometimes for Raphael and sometimes for Michael) it was most pleasing to me to pour forth prayers to God. May God grant his wonderful mercy to me. Amen." Dee, Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Liber Primus, Sloane 3188.

50 Using the inconsistent spelling characteristic of the Elizabethan period, this phrase originally read, "Beware of wavering: Blot owte suspition of us; for we are gods Creatures that haue Raigned, do Raigne, and shall Raigne for eu^. All our Mysteries shalbe known unto you." Dee, Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Liber Primus, Sloane 3188.

51 The letter b (or Pa in the angelic alphabet) is used liberally in Heptarchic and Enochian magick. The frequency of its appearance has prompted some modern scholars to speculate that it represents the number seven, the key or foundational number of Dee and Kelley's angelic magick.

52 The symbols of the planets are as follows: Saturn ♄, Jupiter ♃, Mars ♂, Sol ☉, Venus ♀, Mercury ☿, Luna ☽.

97 INRI is an acronym of the Latin phrase Iesvs Nazarenvs Rex Iudaeorvm, "Jesus the Nazarene, King of the Jews." It appears in the Gospel of John (chapter 19, verse 19). The four letters also have profound esoteric meanings to Christian mystics and ceremonial magicians, who see in the letters a magical formula of creation and being.

98 In astrology it is the four fixed, or kerubic, signs of the zodiac that exemplify the purest elemental quality. For example, there are three zodiac signs that represent the element of Fire: Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius. Aries is the cardinal or initial aspect of Fire, Leo is the fixed (kerubic) or firmly defined aspect of Fire, and Sagittarius is the mutable and most easily influenced aspect of Fire.

The four fixed (kerubic) signs of the zodiac are: Aquarius (Air), Scorpio (Water), Taurus (Earth), and Leo (Fire). The classic symbols of the fixed signs (the angel of Aquarius, the eagle of Scorpio, the bull of Taurus, and the lion of Leo) are called the kerubic emblems and appear often in Christian iconography.

122 Dee, like most of his contemporaries, believed the island of Frisland to exist. It was, in fact, a duplication of Iceland on an early map, an error which was repeated. When its coast was supposedly skirted, this was actually the coast of Cape Farewell, Southern Greenland. Note also that today Germania (Part 29) incorporates Poland. In Dee's time Poland was located further eastward and would have formed part of Sarmatia or Russia (Part 46).

Having mastered the arts and science of his age, Elizabethan magus Dr. John Dee [1527–1608] resolved that worldly knowledge could no longer provide him the wisdom he desired. He turned his attention to magick, and in 1582 he and his clairvoyant partner Edward Kelley made contact with a number of spiritual entities who identified themselves as angels—the same angels that communicated with Adam, Enoch, and the patriarchs of the Old Testament. Over the next three years three distinct magical systems were revealed to Dee and Kelley. The third, thanks largely to efforts from the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and the 20th-century practices of Aleister Crowley, is now widely known as Enochian Magick.

Enochian Vision Magick includes extensive background and historical notes, explores the foundation for the creation of the Enochian Magick system, and provides readers with a step-by-step process for using it.

"Lon DuQuette is a miracle worker, and Enochian Vision Magick is his greatest miracle. His uncanny gift for clear and simple explanations has produced the most accessible, interesting, personal and—most importantly—practical guide to Enochian magick available."

—Richard Kaczinski, Ph.D., author of Perdurabo: The Life of Aleister Crowley

"DuQuette has created a truly original and highly interesting vision of the practical application of the Enochian System. He treats the material as Dee intended it to be treated—as a gateway into another world."

—Geoffrey James, editor and translator of The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee

"It has fallen to Lon Milo DuQuette to provide an easy entrance to the Watchtowers of Dee's magic. In doing so he has done modern magic a great service."

—Stephen Skinner, co-author of The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dees's Enochian Tables

"We are lucky to finally have a useful introduction to this difficult subject that provides the aspiring Enochian conjurer with both the proper foundation and the tools to successfully begin what can become a lifelong adventure and labor of love."

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to express my gratitude to R. Christopher Feldman, Dr. Richard Kaczynski and James Little for their assistance with this project.

Dr. Gösta Hedegård graciously allowed us to use his critical edition of Liber Iuratus Honorii as the basis for our translations of the relevant sections of that work. Michael Estell undertook these and other translations from the Latin especially for this volume. His labors are sincerely appreciated.

Above all, I wish to thank my wife and family for supporting my particular eccentricities, not the least of which is spending countless hours researching and writing about the equally queer habits of Renaissance magicians. What Jane Dee must have endured…

INTRODUCTION

The History of the Sigillum Dei

The Sigillum Dei, Aemeth, as described in the diary manuscripts of Elizabethan scholar John Dee (1527-1608), is not only one of the most recognizable symbols of Western occultism, but also remains one of the least understood. Generations of students have been fascinated by the strange, intricate, and seemingly indecipherable arrangement of angelic names with which it is inscribed, yet there has been surprisingly little discussion of the origin of the sigil, much less its means of construction. Despite the growing popularity of Dee's work, the Sigillum Dei has principally been treated as no more than an elaborate piece of esoteric trivia whose primary use is in the adornment of an equally elaborate temple. This is truly unfortunate, as the Sigillum Dei is so much more. In essence, it defines a complete system of planetary magic based on the Hebrew Kabbalah, making it an exceptional tool in the arsenal of the ceremonial magician.

The name "Sigillum Dei" itself means "Seal of God." Its further title is "Aemeth," which is the Hebrew word for "truth," and Dee explicitly notes the Hebrew spelling in the manuscript.[1] Henry Cornelius Agrippa von Nettesheim, who is largely regarded as the founding father of Western occultism, also cites it as a name of God in his Three Books of Occult Philosophy (1533), remarking "...the name Emeth אמת, which is interpreted Truth, and is the Seal of God."[2] The reference is important, as Agrippa thereby links the phrase directly with the concept of a seal, indicating that even at this early juncture the connection of a seal with a Divine name of God meaning truth was already established.

[1] Dee gives the Hebrew spelling: אמת. There are numerous ways of transliterating the word into English. We have used Aemeth as it is the spelling most frequently encountered in the context of the Sigillum Dei, although Æmeth is common as well, and Dee himself also used Æmæth and Emeth.

[2] Henry Cornelius Agrippa, Three Books of Occult Philosophy: p. 474.

Although now commonly associated with Dee, the Sigillum Dei did not actually originate with him. In fact, in his diary entry of March 10, 1582, Dee notes that the Sigillum Dei is "already perfected" in one of the books that he owns.[3] This book was most likely The Sworn Book of Honorius, a Latin magical work that dates back to the thirteenth century, which contains a version of the Sigillum Dei.[4] However, a few days after writing the above comment, Dee goes on to record that he has spent time considering a number of variants of the seal, which suggests that he had access to several other sources that presented different forms of it. Whether he was consulting multiple sources or multiple versions of the same source is uncertain, but when he was unable to determine which of the sources was correct, Dee apparently decided to resolve the matter by re-evaluating and redesigning the seal. His diary entries for subsequent days record a long series of angelic evocations and communication with the Archangels Michael and Uriel designed to remedy this uncertainty.[5]

Not surprisingly, none of the earlier depictions of the sigil are as elaborate as Dee's Sigillum Dei, nor are they constructed in the same manner. While the heptagonal pattern of the sigil is present, the earlier sigils are much more in line with what one might expect from a grimoire of that period. Divine names and the names of Archangels taken from Kabbalistic sources are written about the body of the sigil, and a further Divine name of seventy-two letters is written about the circumference. Overall the design is simpler and more traditional than the version of Dee and his assistant, Edward Kelley (1555-1597).

A number of variants of this early form exist, most notably in the manuscripts of the previously mentioned The Sworn Book of Honorius (which even goes so far as to dictate the colors to be used within the seal), and in Athanasius Kircher's Œdipus Ægypticus (1653). This latter volume was actually written and published after Dee's death, though the author would have been unaware of Dee and Kelley's work on the Sigillum Dei and the representation in it is almost certainly drawn from earlier, manuscript sources. Curiously, Kircher actually suggests that the Sigillum Dei is a seal of the planet Venus, although this does not appear to be supported elsewhere.[6]

While there is no doubt that John Dee and his assistant, Edward Kelley (also known as "Edward Kelly" and "Edward Talbot"), built upon the basic framework provided by these earlier designs, they completely revolutionized the manner of the sigil's construction. The story of their lives, as well as their work, is as intricate and extraordinary as that of the sigil itself.

Both Dee and Kelley were born in a period when Britain and Europe were in the throes of dramatic political, social and religious change. John Dee was born during the Protestant Reformation of Henry VIII (1491-1547) in England at a time when the king had mounted a direct challenge to the Papal authority that had gone nearly without rival for centuries. As a consequence, spies and agents of Rome were everywhere, scheming and awaiting the opportunity to bring the country back under the control of the Catholic Church. When Henry VIII died, he left but one male heir, Edward VI (1537-1553), who ascended to the throne at the tender age of nine, only to die of consumption (tuberculosis) at sixteen. Rome took this opportunity to initiate a bloody and brutal Counter-Reformation under Edward's older sister, Mary (1516-1558), a devout Catholic. Hundreds of people were tortured and killed during her reign, many being burned at the stake. It was not until the ascension of the fiercely Protestant Elizabeth I (1533-1603) that this bloody chapter of British history ended, though many of those previously in charge of the hangman's noose now found themselves dangling from it.

Dee narrowly escaped this fate himself, for in 1555 he was accused of "calculating" and "conjuring." He was subsequently arrested and subjected to repeated interrogations. In essence, the charges brought against him were probably correct; being both an astronomer and an astrologer he could have hardly avoided the activities of the type of which he was accused. He had in fact drawn up astrological charts for both Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, and would personally select the date for the latter's coronation based on favorable astrological conditions. His later appointment as an advisor to Queen Elizabeth would suggest that the allegations about his religious inclinations were also well-founded. In spite of this, Dee's accusers were unable to substantiate their claims against him, and he was eventually released after six months of imprisonment.

Dee's early years were filled with all of the wonders of the emerging European Renaissance and he developed a passion for scientific discovery and the pursuit of knowledge. Aside from his well-known accomplishments as an astrologer, Dee was also an exceptional mathematician who wrote a much-admired preface to Euclid's Elements, a seminal text on mathematics.[7] Dee was also a skilled cartographer who studied at the side of such luminaries as Gerard Mercator (1512-1594) at the prestigious college of Louvain. His private library contained between four and five thousand books and manuscripts, a truly vast amount by the standards of the times. It was renowned as one of the greatest collections in England, and became a focal point for traveling scholars from throughout Britain and Europe.

A great patriot, Dee found himself called upon to give counsel to Queen Elizabeth on a number of occasions. He was a staunch advocate of Britain's advancement toward naval supremacy, which he felt was integral to his country's development as a true world power. The defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588 and events in subsequent centuries have proven that his counsel on this matter could not have been more prescient. The advice he gave to Martin Frobisher's expedition in their quest to discover the fabled Northwest Passage (thought to run across the top of North America to the riches of the East) was not, however, quite so beneficial. In spite of Dee's reputation as an excellent cartographer, no such passage was ever discovered, and it was not until 1954 that an ice-breaking ship was finally able to pound out a route across the Canadian Arctic and prove, if only academically, the theory.

In contrast to the generally positive way in which Dee is now regarded, his assistant Edward Kelley is almost universally portrayed as having been every bit the rogue. He was first introduced to Dee under the noble surname of Talbot, and it was not until some months later, after their work on the Sigillum Dei, that he revealed his true name to be Edward Kelley. A number of biographical sources suggest that prior to meeting Dee, Kelley had been convicted and pilloried either for forgery or counterfeiting, and that he may have even have had his ears cropped as part of the punishment. However, these assertions are difficult, if not impossible, to substantiate, and current scholarship is beginning to question the established view of Kelley as having been little more than a charlatan.[8] Despite common belief to the contrary, Kelley had a relatively good education and some occult training, specifically in the art of alchemy, prior to his making the acquaintance of John Dee. However, it was his uncanny—some might say convenient—ability to receive angelic visions that brought him to Dee's attention and into his grace.

The ability to communicate with angels, which Kelley apparently demonstrated after only a few short minutes peering into Dee's shew-stone (mirror or crystal ball), signaled the start of a long, strange, and often tempestuous relationship filled with some of the most intense and demanding magical operations ever recorded. Dee would recite orations, prayers, and incantations designed to contact the angels or spirits that they wished to converse with, calling forth these spirits into "visible appearance." Kelley would also recite prayers, stare into the reflective surface of a mirror or crystal ball, report on the appearance of the angels, and relay their messages to Dee. It was in this manner that the majority of their work was accomplished, with Kelley as the passive medium and Dee as the active director of ceremonies, a very traditional arrangement for the sort of operation they were attempting. By Dee's own account, their version of the Sigillum Dei was communicated using these very techniques, specifically through the archangels Michael and Uriel.

The sum of their work, of which the Sigillum Dei is but one part, has become known within occult circles as "Enochian Magic." It is named for the Biblical patriarch Enoch, who was said to have stood in the presence of God.[9] It comes complete with its own angelic alphabet and language, and is quite capable of standing as a complete magical system on its own right. However, it was much, much, more to Dee, who almost certainly viewed it as his own scientific investigation into the nature of God's influence in the world. In the language and understanding of his day, he sought that same, elusive "Grand Unifying Theory" that some present-day physicists seek, although at the time it necessarily stemmed from the "radical truths" of an omnipotent Creator rather than empirical scientific data.

The details for the construction of the Sigillum Dei are contained in a series of manuscripts that record dialogues said to have taken place between John Dee, Edward Kelley and a number of different angels and spirits. The manuscripts are known collectively as The Five Books of Mystery, and the story of their survival is one of the most remarkable tales in the annals of occult literature.

Although in his early life Dee was quite popular and wielded considerable influence, he still had to be somewhat circumspect about his occult activities, and it seems that very few people would have been aware of his angelic conversations. Many of the papers pertaining to his esoteric work are known to be lost, some perhaps deliberately destroyed, and others hidden for safekeeping. The diaries containing his work on the Sigillum Dei were found nearly sixty years after his death in the false bottom of a cedar chest that had once belonged to Dee, having been hidden there for safekeeping. Given the persistent accusations of sorcery that followed Dee throughout the course of his life, it is no surprise that he would have taken measures to ensure the safety not only of his work, but of his reputation as well.

As the story goes, the chest in which Dee hid the diary manuscripts passed out of his estate upon his death in late 1608 or early 1609 and was later re-sold, eventually finding its way into the hands of a confectioner and his wife. They owned it for some twenty years, completely unaware of the chest's hidden treasure until they happened to move it from its usual place while re-arranging furniture. Hearing a rattling in the bottom, they investigated and found a small, concealed drawer, which they opened to reveal a number of books and manuscript leaves.

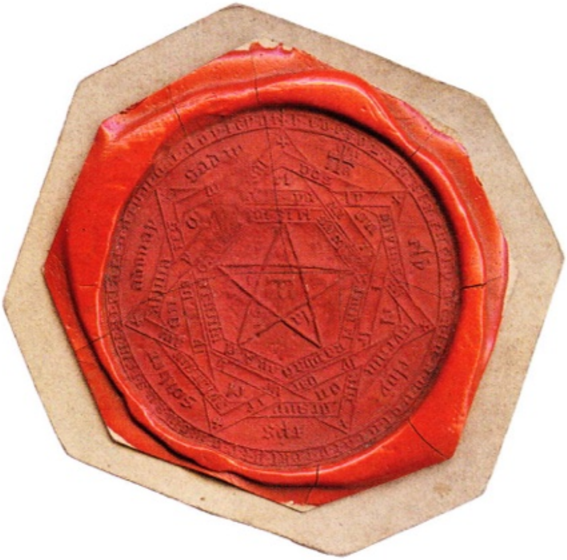
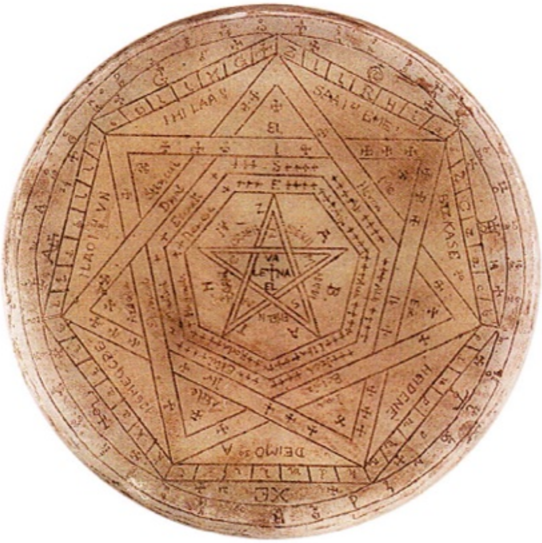
John Dee's drawing of the Sigillum Dei from Sloane MS 3188.



A variation of the Sigillum Dei based on a design from 'The Sworn Book of Honorius.' 17th century.



A modern magician's wax disk engraved with the Sigillum Dei.

At first the couple failed to realize the potential value of the documents and allowed their maid to use nearly half of the pages as kitchen scrap "... under pyes [pies] and other like uses..."[10] When at last they recognized that the paper might have some worth they retrieved what remained and put it in a place of safety, which was fortunate indeed, as the chest itself was consequently destroyed in the Great Fire of London. There is thus no small irony in the saga, for although the chance rearrangement of furniture resulted in a portion of Dee's papers being used for baking paper, it almost certainly saved the rest of them—including those detailing his experiments with the Sigillum Dei—from perishing in the great conflagration of 1666.

After the death of the confectioner, his wife remarried. Her new husband showed the manuscripts to Elias Ashmole (1617-1692), a bibliophile and scholar, with an interest in the Hermetic arts, who is also reputed to have been a Freemason. In September of 1672, more than sixty years after the death of John Dee, Ashmole exchanged a copy of The Institution, Laws & Ceremonies of the most Noble Order of the Garter for the papers, quite possibly saving them from permanent obscurity or loss.[11]

The bulk of Dee's extant work, including the manuscripts that define the Sigillum Dei, now resides in the British Library, principally in the Sloane and Cotton collections. The Sloane collection contains the Sigillum Dei material, acquired at the establishment of the British Library from the estate of Sir Hans Sloane. The work that Meric Causabon included in his A True and Faithful Relation is preserved in the Cotton collection, which contains a set of manuscripts buried by Dee in a trunk on his estate. The wax seals and the polished obsidian scrying mirror Dee purportedly used in many of his magical operations are in the care of the British Museum, although there is some dispute as to the authenticity of the latter.

More basic historical issues aside, one lingering question always seems to arise whenever Dee and Kelley's work is mentioned: namely, "Is it real?" Did Kelley fake the experiments to win Dee's confidence, presumably in pursuit of a stipend or royal appointments of his own?

Although many have thought that this was the case, others have argued vehemently to the contrary, and it would seem unwise to give unqualified support to either contention. There do appear to have been times that Kelley fixed errors in the transcriptions once the evocations had ended, suggesting that he had some preconceived notion of their contents. However, it also seems unlikely that he would have been able to memorize the large amounts of information contained in the numerous tables that define the bulk of their later work. Many of these tables were actually dictated backwards, making the claim that he memorized them even more unlikely. This is, of course, if one neglects to remember that he was scrying into a reflective surface, in which case he might have read the tables by sleight of hand. Concealing them from Dee's vantage point, he could have read tables placed on his person by their reflection in the surface of the crystal ball or mirror, meaning that the images would have been necessarily reversed. Still, there are a number of other instances where Kelley simply either could not have known the information conveyed, or that would have required mental abilities far beyond those with which he is generally credited.

[10] Sloane MS 3188: f. 3a. In Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables, Skinner and Rankine cite this as "pyres" and not "pyes," implying that the papers were used to light fires. However, having looked closely at the manuscript myself, I am inclined to favor the traditional rendering of "pyes" (pies).

[11] The details of the exchange are given in Ashmole's introduction to Sloane 3188, f. 7a.

When examining such questions, we should also turn a critical eye towards John Dee himself, whom we know to have been well versed in the methodology ofTrithemius' Steganographia, a book on cryptography that was cunningly concealed in the guise of a work on magical squares derived from angelic names. Steganographia was written around 1499 and circulated in manuscript form for over a century before finally being published in Frankfurt in 1606. Dee's manuscript copy was said to have been one of his most prized possessions. The fundamental similarities between the techniques of the Steganographia, Dee's construction of the Sigillum Dei, and the other tables that serve as the basis of the Enochian system are difficult to ignore. That Dee was investigating or utilizing a method of cryptography while later spying for Queen Elizabeth in continental Europe is not out of the question and in all truth quite probable, though it would seem admittedly ill-advised to hide one damnable offense (spying) in the guise of another (sorcery). A reasonable question then follows: "Is it also a viable system of angelic magic?"

Present historical evidence does not tell us with absolute certainty whether Dee and Kelley's work actually represented a magical system they both believed to be communicated directly from the Divine, an elaborate and prolonged hoax perpetrated by Kelley at the expense of the humble, if not gullible, Renaissance magician, or an ingenious system of cryptography whose cipher has yet to be discovered. It is possible, though admittedly unlikely, that the papers lost under pies would have explained everything, but in either case they are certainly beyond helping us now.

In contrast there is compelling testimony on the matter from a different quarter: that of the practicing magicians who have taken Dee and Kelley's resulting system and worked with it and made it their own. Amongst them it has earned the reputation of containing some of the most powerful and potent forces of any magical system known today. Its popularity derives largely from the fact that the founders of the ubiquitous Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, including S. L. MacGregor Mathers, chose to make Dee's system a major focus of the workings of the higher grades. Israel Regardie's compendium of the Order's teachings and rituals, The Golden Dawn, offers only a reference to the Sigillum Dei in "the very complex system worked out by Dee and Kelly" while describing the construction of a set of elemental seals unique to the Golden Dawn tradition.[12] However, it appears to have been included in materials of the higher grades that were excluded from Regardie's work, as it is also noted that the Sigillum Dei "...entereth not into the knowledge of a Zelator Adeptus Minor."[13] In other words, access to it was restricted to individuals above Regardie's status in the Order.

Aleister Crowley, too, was quite familiar with the work of Dee and Kelley, and included an image of the Sigillum Dei and description of its contents in The Equinox, Volume I, Number VII.[14] This image appears to have been redrawn by Crowley (or one of his acquaintances), although he might have obtained it during his time in the Golden Dawn, and if so the true author may well have been Mathers. As well as delineating a great deal of the Enochian watchtower system, Crowley worked extensively with the inner spiritual realms of the Enochian "æthyrs" and published a detailed record of his experiments in The Equinox, Volume I, Number V, as "The Vision and the Voice."[15] Yet even Crowley stopped at a cursory examination of the Sigillum Dei. His derivation of the angels mirrors Dee's quite closely.

As a subset of the Enochian system, the Sigillum Dei is somewhat insulated from the previously-mentioned doubts about the authenticity of the creations of Dee and Kelley, as there is of course an external precedent for the seal that is quite independent of their work. Even if the two had sat down and completely fabricated the sigil, a scenario that is not only plausible but reasonable, the idea is known to be based on the pre-existing seal set down in The Sworn Book of Honorius. If nothing more, the expansion and encoding of the sigil are remarkable achievements in their own right, for they add greatly to the rudimentary form of its predecessor. As defined by Dee and Kelley, the Sigillum Dei contains just the sort of patterns and mathematical precision in which Dee would have reveled, an ecstatic union of the esoteric disciplines of both The Sworn Book of Honorius and Steganographia.

As a fascinating and exceptional blueprint for a powerful system of planetary magic, the Sigillum Dei is nothing short of brilliant. However, despite its renown amongst ceremonial magicians, surprisingly little work has been published on the use of this sigil as the basis for a system of angelic evocation, the very method of operation used by Dee and Kelley in their experiments. I begin this work with the primary intention of remedying this rather remarkable oversight.

ON THE PLANETS & ELEMENTS

THE astronomical theory that underpinned John Dee's work on the Sigillum Dei—and his esoteric studies in general—was the now-discredited "geocentric model," which placed the earth at the center of the universe.[1] The best-known expression of this model was that given by the mathematician and astronomer Ptolemy (c.85-165) in the treatise Almagest, where he set forth a complex mathematical representation of the motion of the planetary spheres about the Earth.[2] This geocentric model remained the accepted map of the relationship between the planetary bodies until the early decades of the seventeenth century, at which time it was gradually supplanted by the heliocentric models proposed by Copernicus and Kepler.

In addition to misconceptions about the movements of the heavenly spheres, sixteenth century astronomers and Hermeticists who based their work on the geocentric model (which had come to permeate western Hermetic thought and literature) also had a very different view of the spheres themselves to that of their modern counterparts. While the scientific community currently defines eight planets within our solar system, given the recent demotion of Pluto, they are not the same planets that were known to the ancients. These planets, which included both the sun and the moon, were the "wandering stars" that could be observed by the naked eye. They were, in order based on their apparent speed across the horizon, the Moon, Mercury, Venus, the Sun, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The Earth was not counted as a planet in the geocentric system, as it was the vantage point from which all other bodies were declared "celestial." Also, neither Uranus nor Neptune figured, as they were not discovered until the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, respectively.

Now that we are aware of the inaccuracies of this model, modern Hermeticists are faced with the difficulty of trying to reconcile a cosmological system that is deeply ingrained in esoteric literature with that of modern scientific understanding. Most see little option but to either ignore this troublesome detail, or else try to redefine the old model in such a way that it is compatible with our current understanding of the solar system. The latter approach has been attempted principally within the realm of astrology, whose adherents have consistently sought to align the concepts of the more recently discovered planets with the pre-existing symbols and ideas that are in sympathy with them. However, the adoption of new planetary bodies within the scope of modern astrology still falls short of Copernican theory by its retention of both the Sun and Moon as principle aspects, while continuing in the failure to recognize Earth itself. (For this latter omission, they might be forgiven. Astrology is inherently geocentric by nature due to the fact that the individual is considered the principle locus of the activity, and we happen to live upon the Earth.)

[2] G. J. Toomer (Translator), Ptolemy's Almagest, Princeton University Press.

These inconsistencies aside, it can still be argued even should someone achieve greater success in harmonizing these concepts than has so far been accomplished, they are nonetheless ultimately misguided. An alternative perspective would be to treat the planets, as understood in the light of their related attributes, as manifestations to which we can attach archetypal ideas. These, of course, need not change, irrespective of our acceptance of one cosmological doctrine over another. This is not to advocate a return to geocentricism, but to suggest instead that the real and manifest spheres of the Ptolemaic universe do allow us to materialize, by proxy, certain ideas and concepts that could otherwise be difficult to grasp. It is not important that the ideas are assigned to the planets, but that the planets are assigned to the ideas. By making them archetypes, they remain a cogent and rational system without the necessity of adding and subtracting our known set of luminaries, which are merely handles that allow us to more readily grasp and associate common, related, but equally abstract, concepts. A listing of common planetary correspondences is given hereafter.

PLANET	ASSOCIATIONS
Moon	Change, Flux, Instinct, Birth, Hope
Mercury	Travel, Communication, Logic
Venus	Love, Beauty, Nature, Emotion
Sun	Aspiration, Perfection, Imagination, Health
Mars	War, Strife, Destruction, Will
Jupiter	Preservation, Religion, Memory, Law
Saturn	Time, Stasis, Death

Alchemists in particular took an interest in the associations that were ascribed to the planetary spheres, each of which was said to have sympathies with a certain metal. The Moon was related to silver, principally on account of their common color. Mercury, predictably enough, was related to the element mercury, which at that time was known as quicksilver. Venus was related to copper, due to the greenish tinge of the planet and the common hue of the oxidized form of that metal. The Sun was related to gold, the most precious of incorruptible metals and the alchemical analog of perfection. The sphere of Mars was related to iron, as this martial planet was associated both with the concept of iron as a weapon and the catabolic and destructive decay of that metal as it succumbed to rust. Much like Venus, the red color of Mars and the oxidized form of its corresponding metal (rust) are the same. Jupiter was related to tin, again by the blue tint of each. Finally, Saturn was related to lead, the most base of alchemical metals, as Saturn was also the slowest wandering star in the night sky.

As much of the Judeo-Christian Hermetic tradition relies on the Hebrew Kabbalah as a major source, it is common to find the planets referred to by their Hebrew names, albeit often in poorly transcribed English or Latin forms. As we shall observe, both the Hebrew planetary names and the attendant Archangels traditionally related to each planet within the Hermetic tradition are instrumental to Dee's construction of the Sigillum Dei. The table below gives the list of planetary names in English, their Hebrew spelling and transliteration, the common English rendering, and the Archangel related to that sphere. The names are written from right to left in the original Hebrew, whereas the transliterations and English renderings are to be read from left to right. It is worth noting that there are conflicting views with respect to the association of Michael and Raphael, whose positions are occasionally reversed within the corpus of occult literature. This inversion is exhibited in Peter de Abano's Heptameron, a work to which I will return in the chapter on evocation.[3] [3] The Heptameron is a short grimoire that had its first English publication in Robert Turner's edition of Cornelius Agrippa's Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy (1655). Although published under the name Peter de Abano, this attribution is generally agreed to be spurious.

As well as revealing that the cosmological theory which underpins much ofWestern Hermeticism is inaccurate, modern science has also demonstrated the need to drastically revise its theory of the elements. Our current scientific model is the periodic table of the elements, which defines well over a hundred different essential atomic species. The genesis of this sort of elemental classification lies in the early establishment of four distinct elements or qualities which suggested that all matter was a combination of earth, air, water, and fire. Earth was cool and dry, air was moist and warm, water was moist and cool, and fire was dry and hot. These associations far pre-date the Renaissance, hailing from early Greek philosophy and later refined and expanded by a number of classical philosophers, including both Plato and Aristotle.

Anything observed could be described as an admixture of these classical elements. It may seem overly simple, but this was the sole system of elemental classification utilized by those attempting to advance the new field of scientific enquiry for many years. It is quite fair to say that the four-element theory was more qualitative than quantitative, which is a distinct advantage of the modern method of classification. It is not that the former method of classification did not work, but that the new system was much more empirically powerful in its specificity, thus resulting in the deprecation of the former within the realm of scientific examination.

The Western Hermetic tradition associated the four elements with certain virtues, in a way strongly reminiscent of its treatment of the planets. Aside from an association with the qualities of hot/cold and dry/wet, the elements were further defined within the scope of Hermetica to have certain ideas that tied in with the psyche. While the fifth element of spirit was said to be "above all," earth was directly related to the physical body, air was related to the intellect, water to the emotion, and fire equally to the instinctual drives and divine inspiration.

The elemental aspects further reflect upon an important Kabbalistic hierarchy known as the Four Worlds, where the concept of manifestation is delineated into four successive phases. The first, and most ethereal, is the world of Atziluth, the world of archetypes. This world is the realm of the Father archetype, Divine names, and the element of fire. Psychologically, this is the realm of the instinct, as well as the aspiration or spiritual components of the mind. Next is the world of Briah, or creation. It is the first assembling of an idea, drawn from the impressions of the archetypal world. It is related to the Mother archetype, the archangels, and the element of water, psychologically related to the deeper emotions. Third is the world of Yetzirah, or the formative world. This stage represents the arrangement of the idea into actionable steps and functions by leveraging the memory, will, imagination, and so on. It is related to the archetype of the Son, the angelic orders, and the element of air, and psychologically related to the intellect. Last is the world of Assiah, or manifestation. Here, the ideal becomes the actual. It is related to the archetype of the Daughter, the physical world, and the element of earth, and psychologically to the physical body. A table of these associations, as well as the cardinal direction with which the elements are also traditionally associated, is given below.

ELEMENT	DIRECTION	WORLD	HIERARCHY	ARCHETYPE	SELF
Earth	North	Manifestation	Physical	Daughter	Body
Air	East	Formation	Orders	Son	Intellect
Water	West	Creation	Archangel	Mother	Emotion
Fire	South	Archetypes	Divine Name	Father	Instinct

While it is not the purpose of this work to give an exhaustive account of these correspondences, if such were even possible, I have attempted to illustrate particular relationships that will greatly aid us in our understanding of the Sigillum Dei. Not all of these are necessarily required to comprehend its general nature, but keeping them in mind will greatly inform and enhance our ability to appreciate the subtleties of this intricate symbol. For a more complete set of correspondences, I refer you to Aleister Crowley's 777, Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy, and similar treatises whose aim is to treat these topics more thoroughly.

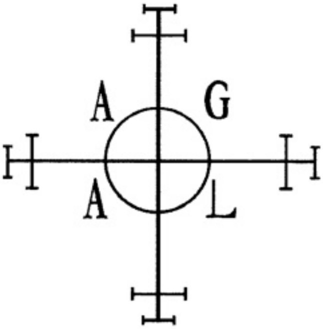
Dee & Kelley's Sigillum Dei.

ALTHOUGH early versions of the Sigillum Dei found in grimoires like The Sworn Book of Honorius appear superficially similar to the one created by Dee and Kelley, closer investigation reveals that with the exception of the basic layout, the method by which the latter Sigillum Dei was constructed is completely different from that of its predecessors. While earlier versions clearly depict the Latinized form of a series of Greek and Hebrew names of God, the Sigillum Dei of Dee and Kelley is, as we shall see, constructed from an arrangement of similar planetary and angelic names on a square grid or table. The more elaborate format of this latter version not only sets it apart from its predecessors, but also defines and establishes a definite hierarchy of angels, which is not something that earlier versions attempt.

John Dee and Edward Kelley's work on the Sigillum Dei began in earnest in 1582 when Dee found himself unable to determine a definitive form of the seal from the various early representations that were available for comparison.[1] By his account he turned to the angels with whom he was in contact, and they communicated the details of a design to him, which he dutifully recorded in The First Book of Mystery. According to the manuscripts, the seal was to be constructed from purified wax, in the shape of a disk, one and one-eighth inches thick and nine inches in diameter. The back of the seal was to bear an equilateral cross about which the Divine Name "AGLA"[2] had been graven. The word was to start in the upper left quadrant formed by the cross and run clockwise around the successive chambers.



AGLA Cross on the obverse of the Sigillum Dei.

The front of the seal bore the now-famous complex geometric design with a pentagram at the center. It is the names around this inner pentagram that give the most overt evidence of the planetary forces that are, quite literally, at the heart of the Sigillum Dei. In the center of the pentagram is a crucifix, about which is written the letters LA, VA, NA, and EL—Levanael. Another name extends from each point of the pentagram: Zedekieil, Madimiel, Semeliel, Nogahel, and Corabiel. Finally, surrounding the entirety of the inner chamber is the name Zabathi. This name, Zabathi, actually omits the "-el" suffix that is appended to the other names, and terminates with the numbers 21 and 8. If we look to the outer circumference of the Sigillum Dei, the letters having these numeric values are "e" and "l", respectively, so we see that these numbers are a blind for this same "-el" suffix. This fulfills the remainder of the seventh and final name, Zabathi(el). These names have precedence outside of Dee's work, being listed in chapter thirty-eight of the third book of Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy, which appears to be the source.[3]

Central Pentagram of the Sigillum Dei.

Close inspection of these names reveals that they are angelic versions of the planetary names in Hebrew. The addition of the "-el" suffix transforms these names into raw planetary forces, which operate much like the intelligences of the planets in traditional magick: neither good nor evil, but a force to be applied as it may. In fact, Agrippa cites them distinctly as "spirits" of the planets. "El" is actually a Divine Name in and of itself, and its inclusion at the end of the planetary names is similar to appending the phrase "Of God" to them. Like Gibor-El (Gabriel), which means "Strength of God," or "Aur-El" (Uriel), which means "Light of God," each planet becomes a spiritual manifestation of its underlying principle (the planet) with the addition of this terminal suffix. Note that a number of the planetary names as given by Dee have suffered greatly in their translation from Hebrew into English, an unwitting transformation that tended to be more the rule than the exception in that period of time, though some of these translational irregularities were present in Three Books of Occult Philosophy as well. In what was possibly an error of transcription, Dee lists the planetary spirit of Mercury as Corabiel whereas Agrippa gives Cochabiel, the latter being a closer approximation of the Hebrew. The remaining names are verbatim.

The next major component of the Sigillum Dei consists of the two heptagons traced within the bounds of a larger heptagram, or seven-sided star. This entire complex houses the names of four sets of angelic beings, known as the "Children of Light," each of which is composed of seven angels having from one to seven letters in its name. While on the surface this might seem to be their only common feature, all four sets of names are constructed from the same sevenfold table or square, which in turn is constructed from the seven names of the Planetary Intelligences we've just described. This Planetary Square is the primary key to unraveling many of the mysteries of the Sigillum Dei.

Dee & Kelley's Planetary Square.

Starting in the upper left hand corner of the Planetary Square and reading diagonally down and to the left, you can see the names of the Planetary Intelligences as given by Dee and Kelley. In the upper left corner, we see the letter "S," and since we cannot go down and to the left, we return to the letter "A" at the top, then read "B," once again returning to the top and reading "A," "T," "H," back to top with "A," and so on. Note that the "S" that begins the Planetary Intelligence Sabathiel in the upper left corner of the square is given as "Z" in the spirits of the central pentagram. This seeming inconsistency should not confuse: these are simply variant transliterations of the planetary name for Saturn in Hebrew. As in the derivation of the planetary names themselves, there are also a few missing letters, represented by their numeric equivalents. The letters of this table generate the names of the Children of Light, as well as a set of "secret" Divine Names.

Reading the Names of the Planetary Square.

The angels of the first series are known as the "Sons of the Sons of Light," whose names are located within the boundaries of the innermost heptagon. They are, in order, E, An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagonel, and Ilemese. As shown, each name can be derived by reading up and to the right from the lower right corner of the table. Some, but not all, of the names must be completed using the appropriate alpha-numeric substitutions, though the application of this rule is curiously inconsistent. Generally, the numbers are only translated if there is no letter occupying that square, except for Hagonel, whose terminal letter is represented as the number 30 within the square also containing the letter "E."

The angels of the next series are known as the "Daughters of the Daughters of Light" and appear in the second heptagon from the center, just outside of the heptagon containing the Sons of the Sons of Light. Their names are derived in a similar fashion, reading down and to the left from the upper left hand corner of the table: S, Ab, Ath, Ized, Ekiei, Madimi, and Esemeli. No alpha-numeric substitutions are affected in translating these names.

Reading the Names of the Daughters of the Daughters of Light.

The "Sons of Light" are the third set of angels, appearing within the interlaced bands of the heptagram that serve as the boundary for the two inner heptagons. While the sequence of angels in the previous two sections is found by moving around the heptagon in sequence, the Sons of Light at first would appear to break this format. To see the continuing pattern, one must follow the interwoven bands of the heptagram as it works its way around the sigil rather than just looking at the next name to the right. The names of the Sons of Light can be derived from the Planetary Square by reading down and to the right from the lower left hand corner: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, and Stimcul. Note that the last letter in Stimcul is here given as "L," while in the derivation of the Sons of the Sons of Light (whose names also intersect this square) it is given as "E." Both are technically correct, as this square contains both the letters 21 ("E") and 8 ("L").

Reading the Names of the Sons of Light.

Finally, we arrive at the last set of names, the "Daughters of Light," given by Dee as El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, and Stimcul, derived by reading down and to the right from the upper right corner. These names are found segregated within the points of the heptagram, in the next layer outside of the Sons of the Sons of Light, and complete the examination of the Children of Light. The name Stimcul, which appears here again, is consistent with the rendering of the Sons of Light, with the final letter being given as "L." The first name, given as "El," consists of both the letter "E" and the alphanumeric substitution of the 8 to the letter "L." Once again, the letter 30 is also transliterated as "L" in generating the name of five letters, Akele.

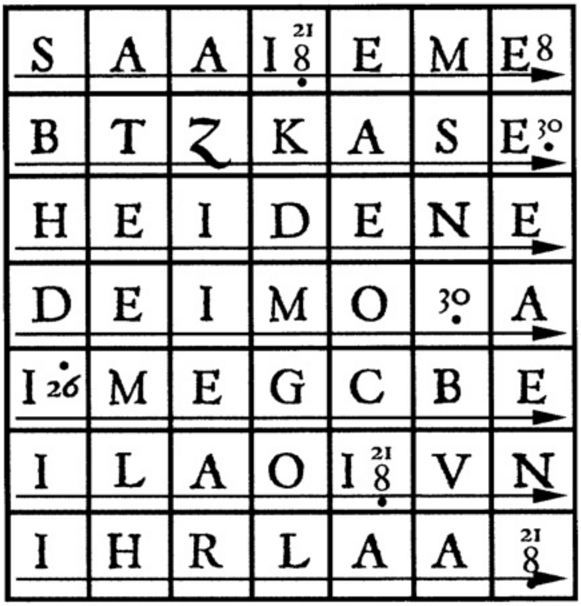
Reading the names of the Daughters of Light.

Having exhausted the Children of Light, we can now examine the set of names that are found outside the angles of the heptagram and the next enclosing heptagon. The text of Dee's transcriptions states that these names are not known to the angels and cannot be read or spoken by man, and they do seem rather awkward in even attempting to pronounce them, though perhaps no more so than any of the Children of Light. However, their derivation is the simplest yet, reading straight across the Planetary Square, from left to right. They are, from top to bottom, SAAIEME, BTZKASE, HEIDENE, DEIMOLA, IMEGCBE, ILAOIVN, and IHRLAAL.[4] No classification is given to them beyond their being Names of God. Uriel then states, "Beatus est qui secrete nomina sua conservat,[5]" meaning "Blessed is He who keeps his name secret." As such, I shall refer hereafter to these Divine Names as the "Secret Names of God" so as to differentiate them from yet another set of Divine Names that will be encountered shortly. This set of names completes the use of the Planetary Square within the Sigillum Dei, and it is to a new table that we must look to decipher the outermost heptagon. However, its format is not unlike that which we encountered in the Planetary Square.



S	A	A	I $\overset{21}{8}$	E	M	E 8
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E 30
H	E	I	D	E	N	E

Reading the Secret Names.

The outermost heptagon consists of seven letters per side, with the exception of a small equilateral cross in one of the chambers, and if the previous names seemed difficult to pronounce, these are nearly impossible. They are not derived from the Planetary Square, but instead from another square of letters that has been constructed from the names of the seven planetary Archangels. These are given by Dee as Zaphkiel, Zadkiel, Cumael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, and Gabriel. The Archangelic Square is constructed by placing these names in a similar seven-by-seven square, starting in the upper left corner with the letters reading in sequence from top to bottom. The letters within each segment of the outermost heptagon can then be determined by reading left to right across the square. The final position contains an equilateral cross, simply because there are no more letters left to include.

A series of forty mixed capital and minuscule letters encircle the circumference of the Sigillum Dei. With a few notable exceptions, each of the letters in this series has been paired with a number either above or below it. The first letter given is the capital "T," which is paired with the number 4; the final letter given is a lowercase Greek omega, presumably to indicate the end of the sequence, which of course also reveals its start. According to Dee's writings, each character was received in the form of an angel, referred to as an "Angel of Light," forty such angels arranged in eight companies of five. Each angel would appear, display the letter and corresponding number, and then disappear, each arriving and withdrawing in its own unique way. It was the Archangel Michael, with the aid of a second angel, Semiel, that presided over the lengthy discourse in which the circumference was revealed, but there were a few missing letters once the scrying session was complete.

Not long thereafter, Kelley requested the work and locked himself away in his study, where he was conveniently contacted by the angel Uriel, who supplied the corrections. Kelley's opportune communication with Uriel obviously made Dee suspicious, and he in turn contacted the angel Michael to discover the truth. His notes indicate that he was told, quite simply, "Truth is only with God."[6] Perhaps Dee wanted it to be true, as he seemed satisfied with this relatively unhelpful message, although he was told the seer (Kelley) merely neglected to communicate the missing letters during the course of the operation. Questions of Kelley's seemingly obvious duplicity aside, what remains is an alpha-numeric sequence whose purpose is to construct a series of seven Divine Names that are distinct from the Secret Names constructed from the Planetary Square. Note that the associated alpha-numeric pairings on the circumference also provide the key to the numeric substitutions on the Planetary Square. For example, the letter on the circumference associated with the number 30 is "L," used in deriving the names Rocle and Akele.

This set of Divine Names can be derived by selecting a capital letter and its attendant number from the series inscribed around the outer circumference. If the number is written above the letter, then that many spaces are counted clockwise. If it is below, then they are counterclockwise. The process is repeated until a letter is reached that is not paired with a numeric value. At that stage the name is complete. Using this formula, the names are found to be ThAaoth, GalAas, Gethog, Horlon, Innon, Aaoth, and Galethog. However, the Archangel Michael explains that whenever the "Aa" sequence is found in the middle of a word, such as in GalAas and ThAaoth, it is to be "comprehended with its inward power" and counted only as a single "a." Following a subtle re-ordering, the final rendering of the names becomes Galas, Gethog, Thaoth, Horlon, Innon, Aaoth, and Galethog. The final name, Galethog, is also found written counter-clockwise between the outer circumference and the outer heptagon in stylized capitals.

When all is complete, the total number of letters in all of the derived names is intended to be equal to the total number of letters around the circumference once the "Aa" contraction is applied: forty. However, summing the number of letters results in forty-one letters, not forty, unless the "Aa" of Aaoth is contracted to a single "a" despite Michael's instruction to the contrary. While there is no known source for these names, the name "Innon" is referenced in Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy. Curiously enough, it occurs in chapter eleven of the third book, right before the name Emeth, with which the Sigillum Dei is of course intimately connected.

With the derivation of this second set of Divine Names obtained, the examination of the Sigillum Dei is complete. The raw and primal energies of the Planetary Angels give way to the more concrete forms of the Children of Light, the Secret Names, Archangels, and the Divine Names around the circumference. However, although the nature of the sigil itself has been shown to be planetary, the planetary attributions of the angels are not yet revealed. Of course, the traditional assignments of the Archangels are given in any number of reference works, and the associations of the Planetary Intelligences are self-evident, but those of the Children of Light and Divine Names remain mysterious. They could simply be in the conventional order of Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury and the Moon, but if this were the case, should they start at the Child of Light containing one letter or seven? Given that the Archangel Michael is said to have deliberately rearranged the order of the Divine Names on the circumference there is presumably a predefined and important order to the sequences.

The problem would perhaps have remain unsolvable had Dee not noted that when the Sons of Light appeared before him and Kelley and revealed the names of the various angels, each was carrying a sphere of metal. These proved to be the traditional metals of the seven planets, with the angels appearing in the order of Gold, Silver, Copper, Tin, Iron, Mercury and Lead; the metals associated with the Sun, the Moon, Venus, Jupiter, Mars, Mercury, and Saturn, respectively. Armed with this information, it is reasonably simple to deduce the planetary attributions of each of the angels. Thus, the angels of one letter are related to the Sun (gold), those of two letters to the Moon (silver), and so on to the seven-lettered name related to Saturn (lead). This is a departure from the traditional arrangement, and appears to be unique to this treatise. While no explanation is given, it is likely that their sequence is derived from an alchemical order, in keeping with Kelley's interest in that art.

There are, therefore, two distinct sequences of planetary order within the Sigillum Dei, with the Children of Light ordered according to this new alchemical arrangement, whilst the table from which they are drawn is based on the traditional Ptolemaic order. The same traditional order appears to be used in the sequence of the Planetary Intelligences, as well as for the planetary Archangels that comprise the Archangelic Square. Only the Sons of Light explicitly exhibit the new sequence, although it can be extrapolated from this that the sequence should also apply to the remaining Children of Light and Divine Names. The latter were of course said to have been re-ordered by the Archangel Michael, and while no precise order is indicated for them, they are allied to the Children of Light, and arguably would follow the same planetary alignment.

The planetary associations of angels and Divine Names from Dee's rendition of the Sigillum Dei, based on the extrapolation of planetary metals described for the Sons of Light, the traditional attributions of the Planetary Intelligences, and the planets themselves, are displayed in the following table.

Elizabethan Errata

An understanding of the tables from which the Sigillum Dei is constructed has provided us with the necessary insight to illuminate its mysteries. We can now recognize that it is not just an arcane and undecipherable collection of unpronounceable angelic names, but rather an ordered, succinct and methodical arrangement of—as the cynic might observe—unpronounceable angelic names. In short, there is a system and order beneath the sigil's potentially overwhelming façade, even if it is not readily apparent. Armed with this knowledge, we can make sense of the overall pattern, and even detect a discrepancy or two in its implementation.

Although not commonly recognized, there is an error in Dee's rendering of the Children of Light, specifically the Daughters of Light, which he gives—or, as he would have it, was given—as El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, and Stimcul. These are the first Children of Light to be mentioned in the manuscript, but are the only angels whose names are read clockwise, down and to the right from the upper right corner. The other three sets of angelic names are derived by reading counter-clockwise through the Planetary Square: the Sons of Light are read down and to the right starting in the lower left corner, the Daughters of the Daughters of Light down and to the left starting in the upper left corner, and the Sons of the Sons of Light up and to the right starting in the lower right corner. This suggests that the derivation of these names was inconsistent, but also raises the broader question of the correct direction in which the names should be read. Did Dee and Kelley make a mistake in the direction in which they read the first set of names, or is it the other three that are actually at fault?

Dee's reading of the Names.

If the set of names of the Daughters of Light was intended to have been read counter-clockwise like the others, they would appear as El, Em, Ese, Anai, Eleka, Nbodza and Lucmits. Given that the Planetary Intelligences themselves are written on the square counter-clockwise, down and to the left from the upper left corner, it seems reasonable to assume that the other names should also read counter-clockwise. I also feel that there is more of a case to be made for an error in one set of names than in three. Accepting such, the names of the Daughters of Light should be corrected to El, Em, Ese, Anai, Eleka, Nbodza and Lucmits, with the other Children of Light being correct as given.

Corrected reading of the Names.

An even more obscure error exists in the alpha-numeric pairings about the circumference of the sigil. When all of these names have been derived by means of the alpha-numeric pattern previously described, there are actually seven letters left that were not used to derive a Divine Name, and these just happen to connect if the same pattern is followed. The letters are "b," "o," "r," "y," "m," "o," and "n." Their associated numbers connect them all together in sequence, except for the letter "r," whose number is given as 13, and the letter "y," whose number is 14. The problem with the "y" is easily explained as the result of a transcription error that occurred in the drawing of the sigil; the manuscripts clearly state that the associated number is 15, and not 14. The letter "r" appears to match the value in the manuscript, 13, but in order for the letters to connect this should be corrected to 3 instead. If this is done, the set of letters now yields a new "hidden" Divine Name, Borymon.

So what is this new Divine Name? Reading the letters in reverse, one is compelled to consider an encoded message by either Dee, or more likely in this case, Kelley. It reads "no my rob." Is this an admission of guilt or complicity for having taken something that was clearly from a pre-existing source, despite the manuscripts explicitly stating it was "already perfected" in one of Dee's books, The Sworn Book of Honorius? It is possible, but before going out too far on that limb, it would be well to consider that the letters can also be re-arranged to spell "by moron." Personally, I would be inclined to include Borymon as a secret Divine Name, rather than taking it as being a veiled admission of either duplicity or stupidity on the part of Dee or Kelley.

A REFORMATION OF THE SIGILLUM DEI

If we acknowledge that Dee and Kelley made errors in the construction of the Sigillum Dei, it is not unreasonable to ask how this information should influence our views about what is, after all, one of the great symbols of Western occultism. This seal is said to have been dictated directly from the mouths of angels, yet its flaws and even its origins seem to indicate that its source is all too human. Is it then still viable? Is it less valuable? How much significance should we read into it?

Personally, I do not believe that the value of Dee and Kelley's Sigillum Dei is significantly diminished by their errors or oversights. It was not simple luck that enabled us to detect the mistakes that the pair made in the construction of the Sigillum Dei, but the fact that it has such a strong internal coherence. In short, it was not the design that was flawed, but the implementation.

Assuming that the underlying principle is sound and that we have corrected the basic flaws already addressed, it is worth investigating whether other improvements to the implementation of the pattern could be made. Even a cursory glance at the names used to construct the Planetary Square that defines the bulk of the Sigillum Dei confirms that this is so. The English equivalents for the planetary names taken from Agrippa are at times quite different from the actual planetary names in Hebrew and could clearly be rendered more accurately. Of course, even these are not exactly the names as they appear in Hebrew, whose alphabet has a completely different character set than the English and does not contain "vowels" in the same sense that English does. (Modern Hebrew has "pointing values" written around the letters that represent associated vowel sounds, but this is a relatively recent invention.) As a result, any "translation" we might manage is really an attempt at an English phonetic representation of the underlying Semitic language. Modern translations have thankfully regularized much of the spelling, allowing us to leverage this consistency in our work with the Sigillum Dei.

In rendering the names around the inner pentagram, two angels in particular seem to require our assistance: the angel of the Sun and the angel of Jupiter. The angel of the Sun, whose planetary name in Hebrew is Shemesh, is rendered as Semeliel, while a better rendition might be Shemeshiel, in accordance with the general pattern of appending the "el" suffix to the Hebrew planetary names. The name of the angel of Jupiter, which is given as Zedekieil, adds an extra "i" to the name, breaking up the "el" suffix. A more consistent rendition would be Zedekiel. Note that this might also be spelled "Tzedekiel," as the Hebrew for Jupiter is Tzedek (TzDK), and the common transliteration of the first letter (tzaddi) is "Tz", not "Z." This combination is still an approximation, however, since this letter sequence never occurs in the English language. Given that there is no direct phonetic equivalent, I have chosen to retain the renaissance value of "Z." Even more minor, but worth noting, is that Dee and Kelley neglect the "i" preceding the –el suffix in rendering the angel of Venus as Nogahel, which might also read Nogahiel. The following table lists the English transliteration of the Hebrew, Dee's rendering of the Planetary Intelligences, and a revision intended to more closely resemble the Hebrew root.

Planet	Hebrew	Dee	Revised
Saturn	Shabathai	Zabathiel	Shabathiel
Jupiter	Tzedek	Zedekieil	Zedekiel
Mars	Madim	Madimiel	Madimiel
Sun	Shemesh	Semeliel	Shemeshiel
Venus	Nogah	Nogahel	Nogahiel
Mercury	Kokab	Corabiel	Kokabiel
Moon	Levanah	Levanael	Levanael

Now that we have a newly derived set of Planetary Intelligences, we should be able to re-construct the inner pentagram and Planetary Square, since they are ultimately created from the letters of these names. Recall that Dee had to do some questionable accounting in order to make the letters conform to the forty-nine chambers available in the Planetary Square. In several instances, letters were omitted as necessary by alpha-numeric replacement to ensure that the result would work out to the proper count. However, the way in which this was done was rather arbitrary. In some instances the "el" suffix was abandoned in favor of its numeric equivalents, while in other instances only the "l" was similarly replaced. In counting the letters of the newly derived names for the Planetary Intelligences, we see that there are certainly more than the requisite forty-nine, so it seems that we are going to have to manage some form of reduction as well if an actual improvement is to be made. If we are to maintain the integrity of the sigil as a whole, it is important to adhere to an overall pattern, or all we've really accomplished is to trade one set of inconsistencies for another.

Thankfully, there are two simple rules that, if universally employed, allow us to keep the corrected names within the confines of the forty-nine chambers of the Planetary Square. The first is to contract all instances where the common English equivalent of the Hebrew requires two letters, namely "Sh" and "Th", which are shin (ש) and tau (ת), respectively. Note that the decision to use "Z" instead of "Tz" for the first letter of the Hebrew word for the planet Jupiter (Tzedek) does not impact the end result. As a "compound letter," it would not affect the overall pattern, since we would handle it much as we chose to handle the others.

The second contraction pertains to the "el" suffix. In the manuscript, it is stated a number of times that this combination of letters is to be drawn as one connected "el". If we observe this pattern in assigning the letters of the Planetary Intelligences to the chambers of the Planetary Square, as well as the contraction of "Sh" and "Th," we arrive at exactly our desired number of forty-nine total letters! The construction of a new Planetary Square results in a major reformation of the seal itself, as it ultimately defines a completely different set of angels for the Children of Light.

The names of the Archangels can also be reconstituted with some minor revisions based on their Hebrew roots. Unlike the case of the Planetary Square, however, no letters in the Archangelic Square need to be reduced. The greatest change comes in restoring the name of the Archangel of Mars, Kamael, which is given by Dee as Cumael. The remaining letters, including the cross, remain intact. Overall, this causes a slight modification to the outer heptagon, but on a much smaller scale than the alterations resulting from the revision of the Planetary Square. Note that, unlike the Planetary Square, the similar Hebrew "compound letters" peh, which is represented as "Ph," and cheth, which is represented as "Ch," are not grouped into a single square or chamber. These combinations occur in the names of the archangels Zaphkiel, Raphael, and Michael. The Hebrew letter tzaddi (Tz), however, is still consistently rendered as "Z" in the Archangelic Square in the case of Zaphkiel and Zadkiel, much as the rendering of Zedekiel, the Planetary Angel of Jupiter.

There is yet another aspect to consider in our attempt to create our own version of the Sigillum Dei, but unlike our previous modifications this does not pertain to the individual letters themselves. While we have so far spent time examining the minute details of the sigil and its construction via the planetary names, it is now time to take a step back and look at the overall pattern presented in the sigil. As a general trend, we find a set of raw, unrefined planetary forces in the center of the sigil surrounding the central pentagram giving way to the more refined qualities of the Divine Names amidst the outer bands. Having a consistent hierarchy would prove an exceptional quality were it to extend throughout the sigil; and indeed, it does—again, almost.

Dee's Arrangement of the Sigillum Dei.

If we refer back to the concept of the Four Worlds, we find that each of these worlds is attributed to a masculine or feminine familial archetype: Father, Mother, Son, and Daughter. These relate to the worlds of Atziluth (Archetypal), Briah (Creative), Yetzirah (Formative), and Assiah (Physical), respectively. If we look at the sigil, we see that the gender attributes of the Children of Light mirror this exactly with a Son, a Daughter, a Son of a Son, and a Daughter of a Daughter. Given that we move from a base or material aspect to a more refined and ethereal one as we move outward, we need only swap the places of the Sons of the Sons of Light and the Daughters of the Daughters of Light, and those of the Sons of Light and the Daughters of Light, to obtain a perfect symmetry with the pattern of familial archetypes in the Four Worlds!

With this new arrangement, the outermost order will be the Sons of Light as the Father archetype, instead of the Daughters of Light, which will be the next order inward as the Mother archetype within the bands of the heptagram. Then, in the second heptagon from the center, we have the Sons of the Sons of Light as the Son archetype, with the Daughters of the Daughters of Light innermost, representing the Daughter archetype. We thus obtain symmetry between the Sigillum Dei and one of the core concepts of the Kabbalah, the pattern of the sigil's outward progression toward the Divine being now perfectly aligned. While Dee's notes indicate that the central cross is a true "crucifix," I feel that an equilateral cross is actually more fitting, denoting the elements and the physical world, which fits perfectly within the pattern of the sigil as the terra firma amidst the swirling choirs of angels in the successive rings of the Sigillum Dei that surround it. Note that this alignment does not change either the names of the angels or their associated Orders, only the sequence in which they are presented.

The hidden Divine Name of Borymon is also introduced into the seal, replacing the duplicated name of Galethog in the spaces between the large heptagon containing the names of the Archangels and the outer circumference containing the Divine Names derived from the Angels of Light.

Reformed Sigillum Dei.

While at first they may seem of little consequence, these few simple amendments actually have a profound impact on the overall composition of the seal. The Planetary Square, which defines the majority of the names found on the Sigillum Dei, has the greatest effect, for even though very few alterations were made to the actual names, it was the consistency with which we distributed the letters, or equally the lack of consistency in Dee and Kelley's distribution, that caused the greatest change. The other alteration was of course the re-arrangement of the angelic orders to mirror the familial archetypes of the Four Worlds. This is such an important concept within the realms of Kabbalistic thought that it seems surprising that Dee and Kelley did not incorporate it themselves. The result is a version of the Sigillum Dei that is not only more internally consistent, but which resonates with one of the fundamental principles of the Kabbalistic system from which it is derived.

Being the author of these changes, I naturally find the revised version of the Sigillum Dei both more appealing and more potent than Dee and Kelley's original. Unlike its predecessor, these revisions are not the result of angelic communication, but the result of a careful study of the patterns made in Dee and Kelley's implementation of the seal. Despite this, several difficulties relating to the basic construction of the seal remain unresolved, the use of English phonetics for Hebrew names being just one example. Others who take up the study of the seal will undoubtedly encounter further issues and make their own corrections and ammendments. None of this, however, should detract from the principal value of the Sigillum Dei as a cogent and powerful system of planetary evocation.

THE ENOCHIAN TEMPLE: ALTAR, SEAL, AND RING

THE details of the furnishings of Dee's working temple can for the most part be extrapolated from his notes and other documents. If we operate from the assumption that the Sigillum Dei is actually a "part" of these temple furnishings, we find three main elements connected with it. These are an elaborately decorated altar or table, a seal to be worn on the chest like a pendant or necklace, and a "Solomonic Ring" without which it is said that "nothing can be accomplished" in this art.

The Altar

The altar used by Dee and Kelley is given special consideration, being called the Table of Practice, and its dimensions are defined in the same session as those of the Sigillum Dei. This altar is described as being made of "swete wood," likely the wood of a cinnamon or balsam tree (though sometimes purported to be cedar or laurel wood), two cubits square and two cubits tall, a cubit being approximately half a yard. The Sigillum Dei is to be set directly upon it. The initial specifications are given in the first of The Five Books of Mystery, but are greatly expanded in a later appendix to the work.

The table has four legs, each of which is to be set upon a smaller version of the Sigillum Dei. While the Sigillum Dei to be set on top of the table is measured at "nine inches in diameter… the thickness of it must be of an inch and half a quarter…," those upon which the table legs are intended to rest are not given a dimension. The only instruction is that the letters of the outer circumference of the Sigillum Dei should still show, implying that the rest of the seal would be covered by the base of the leg. Dee's own smaller version of the wax seals, now in the British Museum, were approximately five inches in diameter, meaning the legs of his table would have been quite large at the base—well over four inches in diameter and likely straight poles rather than the tapered table legs we might be more accustomed to seeing in the modern era. Otherwise, the wax seals used beneath the legs are exactly the same.

The top of the table is to be inscribed with a seal painted in yellow oil "used by the church," though Dee is given no satisfactory answer when asking for information about the oil specifically. (Given no practical alternative, I would suggest any oil-based paint might suffice.) The characters themselves are written in the Enochian alphabet, given in the appendices, with twenty-one letters on each side of the table and the Enochian letter "B" in each corner. The head (top) of each letter is innermost in all cases, such that they face outward around the edge of the Table of Practice, and each side is written left to right.

These letters create the border of a large seal, known as the Holy Table, which decorates the top of the Table of Practice. Thus the Holy Table is actually an image painted on top of the Table of Practice, and is therefore neither the Table of Practice itself, nor another physical table. Dominating the Holy Table is a large hexagram traced from border to border, in the center of which is the small table of characters with four rows and three columns. Like the border, these characters are Enochian script. The positioning of the Sigillum Dei is in the center of this hexagram and square.

The Holy Table from Causabon's A True & Faithful Relation.

The creation of this table is somewhat of an aside from the Sigillum Dei, and further obscured by its use of the Enochian alphabet, but it seems prudent to discuss it given its importance in the realm of Enochian magic and its use of the Sigillum Dei. In order to determine the means of its construction, we must look to yet another square grid or table, this time formed from the names of the Kings and Princes of the forty-nine "Angelorum Bonorum," given in the third of The Five Books of Mystery. The Kings are given as Bobogel, Babalel, Bynepor, Bnaspol, Bnapsen, Blumaza, and Baligon, while the princes are given as Befafes, Butmono, Blisdon, Brorges, Bralges, Bagenol, and Bornogo. The remaining thirty-five angels do not enter into the construction of the Holy Table. All of these entities are given a curious planetary order of the Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury, Saturn, the Moon, and Venus, respectively.

This planetary order is neither in harmony with the Ptolemaic order or the previous "alchemical" order of the Children of Light. They do exhibit an interesting pattern, however, based on the planetary attributions of traditional astrology. Starting at Leo, whose planetary attribution is the Sun, and moving counter-clockwise through the Zodiac four places, we arrive at Aries, related to the planet Mars. Four more counter-clockwise spaces bring us to Sagittarius, whose planetary attribute is Jupiter, and four more returns us to Leo once again. Thus, a triangle is formed, counter-clockwise through the Zodiac, whose planetary attributes are in the order given for the Kings and Princes. (Elementally, these are the fiery signs of the Zodiac.) Moving one space clockwise from Leo, we find the next planet in order, Mercury, the attribute of the astrological sign Virgo. Moving four places clockwise this time, we arrive at Capricorn, whose planet is Saturn. Four places more lead us to Taurus, a sign related not to the Moon, but to Venus. (These are the earthy signs.) It is thus possible, if not likely, that the order given for the planetary attributions of the Kings and Princes should end with the Moon, and not Venus, those values being switched, based on what appears to be a close synergy with the planetary correspondences of the Zodiac.

The fourteen names of the Kings and Princes are used to construct a table that determines the letters around the edge of the Holy Table, as well as those in the central, twelve-square table in the center of the Holy Table. Removing the letter "B" that begins each of the fourteen angels, the names are then distributed, right to left. Thus, starting at the right, we find the names of the Kings occupying the first six chambers to the left: "(B)aligon," "(B)obogel," etc. Similarly, the seven Princes occupy the subsequent six chambers: "(B)agenol," (B)ornogo," etc. Note, however, that the name of the King and its associated Prince do not follow each other on the same row. The Prince corresponding to King Baligon, for example, is Bornogo, who we find to be offset one row below. All of the Kings and Princes follow this pattern throughout the table.

o	g	o	n	r	o	l	e	g	o	b	o

The central square is constructed from a series of offset letters in the center of the table. Since the Kings and Princes are offset, we actually find a correlation: the central square is constructed from the names of the Kings Babalel, Bynepor, and Bnaspol in conjunction with their Princes, Butmono, Blisdon, and Brorges—without the offset used in creating the square. These Kings and Princes are related to the planets Mars, Jupiter, and Mercury, respectively. Taking the final two letters of the names of the Kings and the first two letters from the names of the Princes, we have the set of letters that constructs the central square on the Holy Table; though the position of the letters is transposed. The resulting square is actually reversed in Causabon's A True and Faithful Relation, but is shown correctly herein, as per Dee's notes.

The letters that surround the Holy Table are also taken from the square of letters derived from the names of the Kings and Princes of the Angelorum Bonorum. Referring to Dee's notes, we find that the English equivalents of the Enochian characters written around the edge of the table are as follows:

The letters around the border of the Holy Table are derived from the twelve-by-seven grid formed from the letters of the Kings and Princes by observing the columns. Looking at the letters from the top of the table, we find that the first six letters are the second through seventh rows of the first column, with the seventh letter being the first letter of that column. (Obviously, the "offset" of the Princes comes into play here.) The next seven letters follow exactly the same row pattern, but using the second column, with the final seven letters using the same pattern on the third column. The left side follows exactly this same order, consisting of the fourth through sixth columns, and exhausting the letters derived from the names of the Princes.

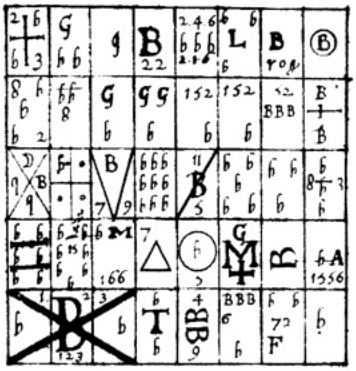
The bottom and right edges, consisting of the seventh through ninth columns and tenth through twelfth columns, respectively, now make use of the Kings' names. Whereas before we had to consider the offset of the Princes, we can now simply read down the full columns in order to find the letters that fill out the remaining edges. Whereas the letter "B" was struck from all of the names of the Kings and Princes, we find it ensconced in the four corners of the Holy Table—gone, but not forgotten. It is curious that while the table from which these letters are derived is explicitly laid out with the offset for the seven Kings and Princes, one has to correct for this same offset at every turn when creating the Holy Table.

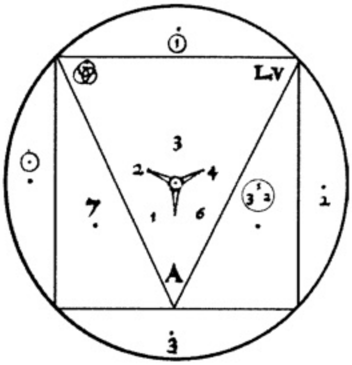
Seven auxiliary tables, defined also in the third of The Five Books of Mystery and named the "Ensigns of Creation," are also evenly distributed around the table, each of which is related to a planet in the same order as the Kings and Princes of the Angelorum Bonorum. Their construction seems baffling, if not entirely arbitrary, and it was certainly not Dee's method to operate in such a manner; but if any such explanation existed it has long since been lost. The tables appear to have some recognizable elements with respect to the Sigillum Dei, including an "M," "G," and "+" that seem to indicate the last three letters on the outer heptagon derived from the Archangelic Square. There are also occurrences of the compound "og" found on the circumference of the Sigillum Dei, as well as a number of capital letters that may or may not be from that same collection of letters. However, there are other letters that do not appear on the Sigillum Dei, so the best we can assume is that it might represent a synthesis between the Sigillum Dei, the Angelorum Bonorum, and something else.... Since they are also referred to as the "Instruments of Conciliation," it is likely that the seals are constructed from a mix of both the Square of the Kings and Princes and the Planetary and Archangelic Squares that constructed the Sigillum Dei, thus reconciling the two.

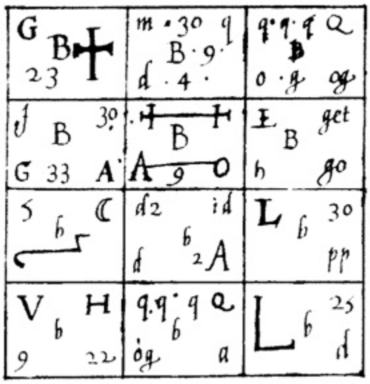
The Ensigns of Creation are to be etched into purified tin (irrespective of planet despite its specific attribution to Jupiter) and set about the Table of Practice such that each rests seven inches from a point on the Sigillum Dei. Sadly, the planetary order of the Sigillum Dei and the planetary order of the Ensigns of Creation do not match, regardless of whether you use the traditional order of planets or the order given with the Sons of Light. Thus, the Sigillum Dei, which is nine inches in diameter, is in the center of the yard square table, with the seven Ensigns of Creation set seven inches from its circumference. There is no specified size for any of the Ensigns of Creation themselves, but given that the lowermost edge would rest approximately twelve inches (given a four-and-one-half inch radius of the Sigillum Dei plus seven inches as specified) from the center of the table and the letters around the border would take up some room as well, there are only about six inches left to work with. The scale of Causabon's A True and Faithful Relation has them at about five inches.

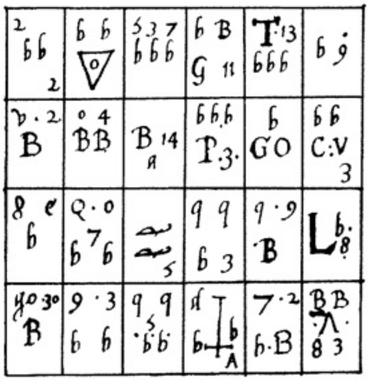
Beneath the table, and presumably centered thereon, is to be lain a square of silk, two yards on each side. A similar red silk is to be placed over the top of the altar, covering both it and the Sigillum Dei, which of course means that the carefully crafted top of the Holy Table is now entirely covered by the cloth. This second silk should be slightly larger than the table itself, and have four "knops" (small round ornaments) or tassels, one on each corner. The stone (crystal ball) or mirror is then to be set on top of the Sigillum Dei, with the silk between the two.

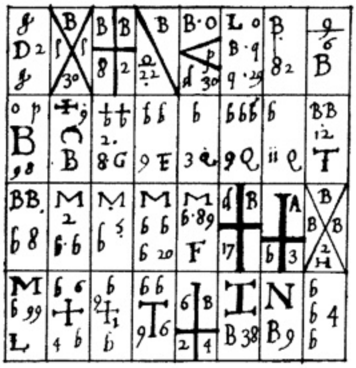
Thus, the floor is covered in red silk, upon which are set the four smaller wax seals of the Sigillum Dei. Upon these seals rests the Table of Practice, and upon that is the larger Sigillum Dei, measuring nine inches in diameter, set in the center of the elaborately painted Holy Table. The Sigillum Dei atop the Table of Practice is covered by another red silk with ornaments or tassels at the corners thereof. Resting on the larger Sigillum Dei, now covered by silk, is the crystal ball or "shew stone" used to receive the angelic visions.

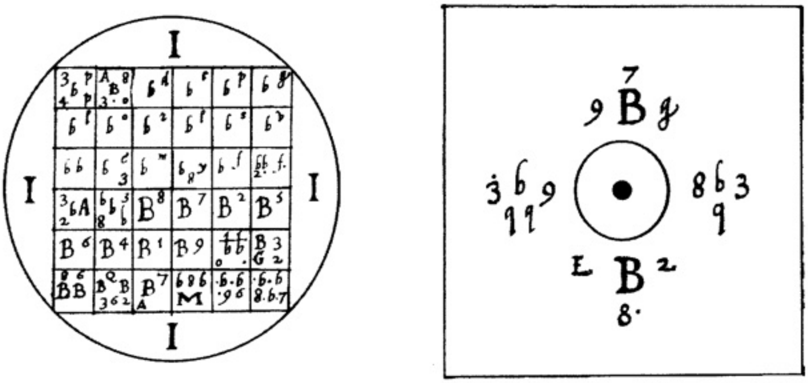












The Protective Seal

Early in the first of The Five Books of Mystery, Dee and Kelley are presented with a seal that was to be inscribed in gold and worn upon the chest for protection. In a not uncommon turn of events, they were later told that this revelation was affected through "evil spirits" and that they were to create a new version of this sigil. This new version was then constructed using the same square of letters used in deriving the Holy Table, though with a slight permutation. The first row of the square used to construct the Holy Table is moved to the last row of the square used to construct the Protective Seal.

The Protective Seal (English).

The letters of this seal can be found by observing subsets of the square used for its construction, implying that the Protective Seal is an encoding of the square of the Kings and Princes into a cohesive symbol. The square, given herein in the permutation proper to the derivation of the Protective Seal as opposed to the Holy Table, consists of eighty-four letters as before.

Square for the Protective Seal.

To determine the letters between the two squares forming the rather larger border of the overall sigil, you must "overlay" this same view on the square of the Kings and Princes. You thus surround the "heart" of the sigil with this set of characters and exclude the outermost two columns on either side. In the upper left corner of the Protective Seal, for example, you find the letters, "o," "n," and "r," and these are the same letters found in the upper left of the pattern we set on the letter-square. You can similarly follow the positions of the other letters between the two large squares on the Protective Seal.

Letters in the Outer Square of the Protective Seal.

In the corners of the inner square, we find three letters each, one letter precisely in the corner and two flanking it on either side. Taking the central twelve letters of the square of the Kings and Princes, we find these to be the same as the characters on the corners of the inner square. Note that these are almost the same letters as those on the Holy Table, were it not for the offset of the names of the Kings and Princes. Whereas the Holy Table goes out of its way to make account for that offset, the Protective Seal does not and works solely with the letters as laid out on the table. As a result, the first two columns match, while the second two do not, being off by one letter each. I am inclined to believe that the two should really be drawn from the same source and the Holy Table corrected to use the same methods as the Protective Seal, though this comparison will not be illustrated herein.

The diamond that is drawn within the inner square has another set of letters derived from the remaining letters with the square of the Kings and Princes: the first two columns and last two columns of letters. The corners of this diamond have letters from the corners of the square of Kings and Princes: "o," "a," "l," and "o."

The Protective Seal (Enochian).

I do rather wish that the Protective Seal and Holy Table were somewhat more aligned with respect to how they read the characters, and feel that this inconsistency resulted from a gradual evolution of the system that failed to return and correct the Holy Table, specifically. The latter could certainly have been constructed using the same permutation of the square for the Protective Seal, with the borders using the same columns and the same letters being used for both the central twelve letters of the Holy Table and the twelve letters located at the corners of the inner square of the Protective Seal. This would provide a much closer agreement between the Protective Seal and the Holy Table, and allow for a more consistent system overall. Of course, there is nothing preventing anyone from doing just that.

The Ring of Solomon

Magical rings attributed to King Solomon hail back to the earliest portrayals of the King as a great Magus, the genesis of which is most commonly attributed to The Testament of Solomon, thought to have been written and distributed at some time between the first and fourth centuries C.E. This work described the Biblical patriarch King Solomon being confronted with a boy possessed by a demon. Solomon prayed diligently for the ability to deliver the boy from this demon and was granted the presence of Michael, the same archangel who many centuries later would also play a pivotal role in John Dee's occult endeavors. Michael bestowed upon King Solomon a magic ring that he told would command any demon, which of course lead to the rescue of the child. The King later used the ring to summon and command a number of well-known demons, including Beelzebub and Asmodeus, who Solomon even compelled to labor on his now-legendary Temple. It should perhaps come as no surprise that the later grimoires that allude to the Solomonic Ring never actually seem to agree on its form, so the term should be considered more of a general classification of rings designed to be used in commanding or exorcising spirits.

Thus it was that the Solomonic Ring became a staple of the grimoire genre, appearing most famously in The Goetia, one of the books of the Lesser Key of Solomon.[1] Dee also wrote of the Solomonic Ring in a section just preceding the description of the Table of Practice in the first of The Five Books of Mystery. There he was told pointedly that without it "thou shalt do nothing," and the ring he describes is referred to specifically as a Ring of Solomon. It is a relatively simple design, with a square face engraved with a circle and horizontal line. Written clockwise around the corners starting in the upper left is the name PELE, meaning a "worker of miracles," which Agrippa suggests is from the Biblical "Book of Judges."[2] In fact, the word pele in Hebrew, as פלא, means "miracle," or "wonder." The letters "L" and "V," which intersect the ring's circle, are less certain, but might represent the principal letters of the phrase from the "Book of Judges" (13:18) in which pele appears: לשמי:והוא:פלאי, often translated as "Why do you ask my name, seeing it is wonderful?"

EVOKING THE CHILDREN OF LIGHT

ALL of the investigations that we have undertaken into the construction, correction, and re-construction of the Sigillum Dei are surely wasted if it remains nothing more than an intricate altarpiece. Yet certain fundamental questions remain. What is the purpose of the Sigillum Dei? What, if anything, does it do? Why did we bother with this complex reconstruction in the first place? If you had just spent the last three days painstakingly etching the Sigillum Dei into a wax plate only to have me tell you that it has no intrinsic value beyond the aesthetic, you would quite justifiably be annoyed with it, me, and probably yourself as well.

Despite the fact that its very form and revelation shows that the angels thereon are meant to be called forth, spoken to, and utilized at the command of the magician, nothing in The Five Books of Mystery records Dee and Kelley attempting to contact them directly. Of course it could be that the relevant sections of the manuscripts were used to prevent the bottom of some long-eaten pie from being burned, but judging by the diaries it seems more likely that their further researches simply led them away from experiential practice with the Sigillum Dei itself. Whatever the reason, the Sigillum Dei has come down to us as little more than a curious adornment within the larger scope of Enochian magic, and not, as it was clearly intended, as the key to a completely independent system of evocation.

By definition evocation itself is the practice of calling forth spiritual beings such as angels, demons, elementals, and other such intelligences, so that they may communicate with and potentially aid the magician. Although there are certainly accounts of such entities being brought to physical manifestation by means of a medium or host such as incense, smoke, blood, or other natural matter, the veracity of these reports is questionable, even by the somewhat relaxed standards of the tolerant world of occultism. Spirits are most commonly brought to visible appearance within a crystal ball or "shew stone" (using Dee's terminology), a mirror, or other device that serves as a focal point to receive the projected images of these entities. The practice of receiving these images is known as scrying.

In the time of Dee and Kelley, evocation typically involved the magician delivering one or more orations containing a number of Divine names taken from Christian Scripture. This was the common approach given in the grimoires of this period, which commanded the various spirits to appear by virtue of the power inherent in these "barbarous names of evocation" —generally variants of Hebrew and Greek names for the Divine. The Greater Key of Solomon and The Lesser Key of Solomon, along with the earlier Heptameron by Peter de Abano, are examples par excellence of this approach. Heptameron, also known as The Magical Elements, is mentioned explicitly be Dee himself in the first of The Five Books of Mystery, where he notes that the angel Salamian is the same angel as mentioned in that book under the name Salamia.[1] This angel appears in "The Conjuration of the Lord's Day," an oration / evocation designed for angels related to the Sun.

It seems quite likely, although difficult to prove decisively, that Heptameron was a major influence on Dee's work with evocation, as it would have been (and continues to be) one of the seminal texts on the art. "The Conjuration of the Lord's Day" also includes the Archangel Michael, who even more than Salamian features prominently in the reception of the Sigillum Dei. As an aside, recall that in the second chapter I mentioned occasional inconsistencies between grimoires with respect to inverting the planetary attributions of Michael and Raphael. Here is an example of just that, for in the Heptameron we find Michael described as the Solar archangel and Raphael given as the Mercurial, exactly the opposite of Agrippa, and subsequently Dee.

As there are no extant rituals, and Abano's work is specifically mentioned in Dee's manuscripts, it seems reasonable to adapt the form of the orations given therein for the purpose of evoking the Children of Light, especially since the Heptameron is unmistakably dedicated to planetary magick. While a different oration is given for each day, each of which is naturally related to a planet, the fundamental formula is always the same: the magician invokes one or more God Names as his authority, includes the Archangel, and directs the ministering angels to perform whatever duties might be prescribed to them.

Here then follows a short oration based loosely on those of the Heptameron. Placeholders have been designated into which can be inserted the appropriate names drawn from whichever codex the practitioner chooses to employ. In composing the oration I have attempted to retain a slightly archaic prose style, in keeping with that of the period in which this type of magic evolved. You may of course choose to derive your own.

[1] Abano, Heptameron: "Conjuration of the Lord's Day."

The Oration for Evoking Children of Light

I hereby conjure the most powerful, holy, & potent angel of God, [Child of Light] through and by the most mighty & sacred name of God, creator of all that is upon the earth, the seas, and the heavens, [God Name]. By this mighty name, I further command and move thee from thy Order of [Angelic Order] by virtue of the mighty Archangel [Archangel], who dwelleth in the celestial abode of [Planet], to appear unto me here in this place to answer unto my desires to the glory of His ineffable name. Amen.

Reading the oration is typically the principle duty of the magician or conjurer, who is further charged with directing and controlling the course of events during the performance of the ritual. Once the oration has been completed, the magician gently asks the scryer if anything can be observed in the mirror or stone. If not, then the conjurer will allow a few minutes to pass, and if still nothing has manifested repeat the oration as necessary. It is not uncommon for both the scryer and conjurer to feel the presence of a spirit as it arrives. If a presence is felt or otherwise noted by the scryer, the magician will generally thank the spirit for appearing and commence the operation, either by putting questions to the spirit or asking its assistance in some predetermined matter.

From this point forward the sole duty of the scryer is to relay any and all information that the spirit imparts, either in word or deed, back to the other participants. By now the scryer would normally have entered a dream-like, semi-lucid state, although he or she must still be capable of maintaining sufficient focus to relay information about what has been observed back to the magician or scribe. It must be said that the role of scryer is no easy one. While it is a skill that benefits from some degree of natural talent, it also requires no small amount of practice to perfect.

If a scribe is present, it is his or her responsibility to make a careful record of the evocation. Otherwise, this duty falls to the conjurer, much as it did to Dee. Either way, it is imperative that as detailed an account of the proceedings is kept as possible. Ideally, the conjurer will ensure that the scribe is not overly rushed, although invariably the speech will outpace the pen. It is not at all uncommon or out of place to ask the spirit to pause so that a more accurate record might be kept, though it may not always be possible in every circumstance. Any external phenomena that seems noteworthy is recorded as well, whether or not they may appear connected with the evocation. Thus an unexpected change in weather or temperature, sudden storms, the unanticipated presence of any birds, insects or animals, strange sounds or indeed anything out of the ordinary would be chronicled.

Once the operation is complete it is common practice to give the spirit a license to depart, unless it has already left of its own accord. If the spirit has not been bound to stay for any length of time, it is free to leave whenever it so chooses, making the license unnecessary. Typically, amicable spirits such as those of the Sigillum Dei will stay until the operation is completed, but it is always a good idea to give parting thanks for whatever aid they may have offered. The spirit should then depart immediately, unless there is some important matter left unattended. In fact, the magician(s) will typically feel its departure as strongly as they felt its arrival. Once the spirit has left, it can be helpful to ring a bell, knock loudly upon the altar top, or stamp a foot on the floor, stating firmly and clearly that the ritual has ended. This provides a clear delineation and helps bring everyone back to normal consciousness. A version of the license to depart that would be suitable for closing a conjuration undertaken with the Sigillum Dei is printed below.

The License to Depart

O great and powerful Child of Light, [Angel], I thank you for your appearance and willingness to aid us on this day. Depart, as be thy will, unto your abode, and let there ever be peace between us. Amen.

Following the departure of the spirit, it is a good practice to gather and review the record. It is especially important for the scryer to elaborate on any unrecorded evidence from the course of the evocation so that nothing is missed. A small and seemingly inconsequential event may actually be the very key to realizing your goal. Furthermore, a well-kept and well-preserved record will provide dividends for the rest of your magical career, assuming you intend to have one. Consider that if John Dee had not been such an exceptional diarist (a trait well ahead of his time), we would not have even the slightest knowledge of his work, and of course would therefore also have been denied the luxury of debating its merits herein.

The process of choosing the Child of Light best suited for the operation is relatively simple, and we benefit greatly from the associations we have built up in the preceding chapters. For the Sigillum Dei, since each Child of Light is related to a planet, the ability to select the planet related to the purpose of the evocation immediately allows you to narrow the scope of your choice to one of the seven angels in a given Order, as well as the proper Secret Name, Archangel and Divine Name. What it does not determine is what Order the Child of Light should be taken from: the Sons of Light, the Daughters of Light, the Sons of the Sons of Light, or the Daughters of the Daughters of Light.

PLANET	ATTRIBUTIONS
Sun	Healing, Regeneration, Harmony, Balance
Moon	Change, Childbirth, Dreams
Venus	Nature, Emotional Wellness, Crops
Jupiter	Law, Luck, Religion, Spirituality
Mars	War, Strife, Conflict, Destruction
Mercury	Communication, Thought, Intellect, Travel
Saturn	Time, Structure, Stasis, Death

Knowing the planetary association still leaves us with four possible angels, one for each Order of the Children of Light. However, we can use the elemental attributions of the Orders to solve this dilemma, as each element relates directly to an Order of the Children of Light by design. As mentioned previously, each of the elements also relates to a particular aspect of the human psyche. The element of earth represents the physical body, and while not typically considered a part of the psyche, it is certainly an influence thereon. The element of air is related to the cognitive, intellectual faculties of distinction and rationality, while the element of water is related to the deeper emotions and subconscious part aspect our psychology. The element of fire has something of a dual meaning, related both to the hard-wired instinctual drive and to the archetypal world of spirituality. By determining which elemental category is most closely aligned with your interest, the proper Order of the Children of Light can be selected.

ELEMENT	PSYCHOLOGY	ORDER
Fire	Instinct, Spirituality	Sons of Light
Water	Emotions	Daughters of Light
Air	Intellect	Sons of the Sons of Light
Earth	Physical Body	Daughters of the Daughters of Light

By using the elemental correspondences to determine the Order of the Children of Light, as well as the planetary correspondences to select which angel of this Order best suits our aim, the magician can simply and precisely identify the angel that will best be able to facilitate his or her desired outcome. It is of no consequence whether it is the elemental or the planetary quality that is determined first, but once both have been determined their intersection will define the angel of the Children of Light best suited to manage the task. In contrast, the planetary association alone is sufficient to determine the appropriate Divine Name, Archangel, and Secret Name.

PLANET	FIRE	WATER	AIR	EARTH	DIVINE NAME
Sun	El	Sh	El	Sh	Shaaeleash
Moon	Eli	Na	An	Ab	Bthzkden
Venus	Mia	Elee	Ave	Athi	Ieiimoel
Jupiter	Dihl	Bodel	Lelib	Elzed	Delmegkb
Mars	Ielshka	Ekmka	Akokel	Ekielm	Mishaoie
Mercury	Bemaela	Nigiza	Ihagon	Adimiel	Elihkelvn
Saturn	Shthieovel	Elvoeithsh	Elishemesh	Shemeshiel	Elialaael

As an example, let us imagine that one wished to seek legal advice regarding the recent inheritance of a plot of land. The issue itself seems to fit solidly in the material realm, and so it would make sense to choose the element of Earth, meaning that the angel should be chosen from among the Daughters of the Daughters of Light. As this is a legal affair, the planet Jupiter would seem appropriate, being the planet related most directly to the practice and establishment of law. (Its association with good fortune might prove useful as well.) We thus arrive at the Child of Light best suited for our aim: in this case the Daughter of the Daughter of Light related to the planet Jupiter, which we find to be Elzed (using the codex for the revised Sigillum Dei). The desired Child of Light for any other situation should be similarly simple to determine, based on the nature of the problem being addressed. Codices for Dee's original seal, Dee's corrected Seal, and my own reconstruction are given in the appendices.

Coupling the ability to determine which one of the Children of Light is most in tune with the intended operation with the templates for evoking these same entities, we arrive at a very simple, and therefore equally powerful, system of angelic magic. Couple this once more with the altar, seal, and ring described previously and the fullness of this system becomes readily apparent. All that remains to include ... is a magician.

THE FUTURE OF THE SIGILLUM DEI

THE Sigillum Dei as constructed by Dee and Kelley is both exceptional and innovative in its outward complexity and encoding, yet it retains the inner simplicity of the magical squares from which the angelic names are derived. Although the end result contains a few subtle inconsistencies, the pattern that Dee and Kelley established in creating the sigil remains the principal merit of their work. It is the very thing that sets their version of the Sigillum Dei apart from all its predecessors, and it does so to such an extent that it shares little more than a name and basic geometry.

It is my sincere hope that this guide will help the aspiring practitioner understand just what an exceptionally powerful system of evocation the Sigillum Dei actually defines. Whether he or she chooses to observe the names as given by Dee and Kelley directly, the corrected version, the revised version, or one of his or her own devising is of lesser consequence than this single idea: the Sigillum Dei was meant to be used to contact the angels described thereon. It is a wonderful system that has, for the most part, been overlooked. I would personally suggest that the corrected version be used rather than that given by Dee and Kelley, solely for the reason that it more closely reflects their intent, their original design being a somewhat flawed implementation of an otherwise sound idea. Of course it is also acceptable for the practitioner to make use of the reformed version set out here; it would clearly be my own choice.

I should add that the revised form of the Sigillum Dei which I have presented is solely the result of my own labors, moved by the desire to produce a version which is both better aligned with basic Kabbalistic principles and has a greater internal consistency than the original. If, in examining the revised version, the practitioner should encounter a decision that he or she would not have made, simply make a different one. The revised Sigillum Dei is my implementation. I went through several iterations before settling on the current version, and I would certainly suggest that anyone planning on using it consider going through that same process as well. It is possible that someone else would arrive at the same end-point as I did, but it is also possible that he or she may not. Whatever the case, it is certainly a useful exercise that should at very least enhance the investigator's appreciation of the subtle complexities of Dee and Kelley's design.

That being said, this book contains all that is required to perform the operation of calling forth the Children of Light. Having had experience with a number of different systems of evocation, including those of The Goetia, the Enochian and others, I find the system of the Sigillum Dei both fascinating and incredibly powerful. Study it, tear it apart, rebuild it, understand it, and by all means use it.

The future of the Sigillum Dei is yours to explore and shape.

APPENDICES

Appendix A

The Second Book of Mystery

"The Second Book of Mystery" contains the principal exposition of the Sigillum Dei, as set forth by John Dee in accordance with communications said to have been delivered by the Archangels Michael and Uriel, and an angel called Semiel. The transcription below is from Sloane MS 3188.[1] It accurately follows the text of the original manuscript, although in some instances the spelling has been modernized for the sake of clarity.

[D] is John Dee.
[M] is the Archangel Michael.
[U] is the Archangel Uriel.
[S] is the Angel Semiel.

Liber Mysteriorum Secundus[2]

..... Note. ...We bring tidings of Light. The Lord is ... you and we praise together. His name be praised forever ... in his Mysteries. O Holy and Eternal God.[3]

[D] He bowed down to the chair and then to the table and said, "Benedictus qui venit in ...," (and there stayed a little) and said again, "Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini."[4]

[1] Sloane MS 3188, ff. 17-29. Note. A large sliver is missing from the top of folio 17, as are some fragments of the margins of other folios, with consequent loss of text. The portions of the text where words are missing are marked with the customary indicator of lacunae: "..."

[2] "The Second Book of Mystery."

[3] As a consequence of the damage to the manuscript the full wording of the first part of these sessions is impossible to discern, although the intent is quite apparent. — Ed.

[4] "Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord."

Then came in Michael with a sword in his hand, as he was wont, and I said unto him, "Art thou Michael?"

[M] Doubt not: I am he which rejoices in him that rejoices in the fortitude and strength of God.

[D] Is this form, for the Great Seal, perfect?

[M] The form is true and perfect. Thou shalt swear by the Living God, the strength of his Mercy and his Medicinal virtue poured into man's soul, never to disclose these Mysteries.

[D] If no man by no means shall perceive anything hereof, by me, I would think that I should not do well.

[M] Nothing is cut from the Church of God. Thee in his saints are blessed for ever. We separate thee from defiled and wicked persons. We move thee to God.

[D] I vow, as you require. God be my help and guide, now and ever, amen.

[M] This is a Mystery scarce worthy for us ourselves to know, much less to reveal. Art thou, then, so contented?

[D] I am. God be my strength.

[M] Blessed art thou among the Saints, and blessed are you both.

I will pluck thee from among the wicked (he spoke to my scryer). Thou commit idolatry, but take heed of temptation. The Lord hath blessed thee. This is a Mystery.

[D] To E.T. he spoke.[5]

[M] Dee, what would thou have?

---

[5] Marginal note.

[D] Recte Sapere et Intelligere, etc.[6]

[M] Thy desire is granted thee.

[section of text missing from top of verso of folio 17]

... they are corrupted ... have been used to the wicked ... will show thee in the mighty hand and strength of God ... his Mysteries are. The true Circle of his ...
Comprehending all Virtue: the Whole and Sacred Trinity. Oh, holy be he. Oh, holy be he. Oh, holy be he.[7]

[D] Uriel answered: Amen.

[M] Now what wilt thou?

[D] I would full fain proceed according to the matter in hand.

[M] Divide this outward circle into 40 equal parts, whose greatest numbers are four. See thou do it presently.

[D] I did so, dividing it first into four, and then every of them into ten. He called Semiel; and one came in and kneeled down, and great fire came out of his mouth.

Semiel: this etymology is as though he was the secretary for the Name of God.[8]

Michael said: "To him are the mysteries of these Tables known."

Michael said "Semiel" (again), and by and by he said: "O God thou hast ... and thou Liveth for ever. Do not think here to speak to him.

[6] "To rightly know and understand, etc."

[7] Thus begins the second page of writing, whose corners are torn.

[8] Marginal note.

He spoke that to us, lest we might doubt of his last speeches as being spoken to Semiel.[9]

Semiel stood up and flaming fire came out of his mouth, and then he said as follows:

[S] Mighty Lord, what would thou with the Tables?

[M] It is the will of God: thou fetch them hither.

[S] I am his Tables. Behold these are his tables. Lo, where they are.

[D] There came in 40 White Creatures all in white silk, long robes, and they like children; and all they falling on their knees said "Thou only art Holy among the highest, O God. Thy Name be blessed forever."

Michael stood up out of his chair and by and by all his legs seemed to be like two great pillars of brass, and he as high as half way to the heaven. Any by and by his sword was all on fire and he stroke or drew his sword over all their 40 heads. The Earth quaked, and the 40 fell down, and Michael called Semiel with a thundering voice and said, "Declare the Mysteries of the Living God, our God, of one that liveth forever."

[S] I am ready.

[D] Semiel: forte significant Nomen meam Deus: Ita quod tabulae iste sunt Nomen Dei vel nomina Divina.[10]

[D] Michael stroke over them with his sword again and they all fell down, and Uriel also ... knees. And commonly at the striking with his sword flaming like lightning did flash with all.

[M] Note: here is a Mystery.

[9] Marginal note.

[10] Marginal note. "Perhaps they indicate the name of my God: in this way, because these tables are the name of God and the Divine names."

[D] Then stepped forth one of the 40 from the rest and opened his breast which was covered with silk and there appeared a great "T" all of gold.

[M] Note the number.

[D] Over the "T" stood the figure of 4 after … manner.

The 40 all cried, "It Lives and Multiplies for ever: blessed be his name."

That creature did shut up his bosom and vanished away like unto a fire.

[M] Place that in the first place. It is the name of the Lord.

[D] Then there seemed a great clap of thunder to be. Then stepped before the rest one other of the 40 and kneeled as the others did before, and a voice was heard, saying "Praise God, for his Name is reverent."

Michael said to me, "Say after me thus:
Deus Deus Deus noster, benedictus es nunc et semper: amen.
Deus Deus Deus noster, benedictus es nunc et semper: amen.
Deus Deus Deus noster, benedictus es nunc et semper: amen."[11]

[D] Then the creature opened his breast and fire came out of the stone as before and a great roman "G" appeared.

[M] Write this with reverence. These Mysteries are wonderful, the Number of his name and knowledge. Lo, this it is 9. Behold, it is but one, and it is marvelous.

[D] Then this creature vanished away.

[M] The Seal of Gods Mercy: blessed be thy name.

[D] It seemed to rain, as though it had rained fire from heaven. Then one other of the 40 was brought forth. The rest all fell down and said, "Lo, thus is God known."

[11] "God, God, our God, you are blessed now and forever: amen."

Then he opened his breast and there appeared an "n" (not of so big proportion as the other) with the number of 7 over it.

[M] Multiplicatum est Nomen tuum in terra.[12]

[D] Then that man vanished away as it were in a golden smoke.

[M] Thou must not write these things but with great devotion. He liveth.

[D] Then came another forth. Then all falling down said, "Vidimus Gloriam tuam Domine."[13] They were prostrate on their faces. Then this creature opened his breast and he had there a tablet all of gold (as it were) and there appeared a small "t" upon it, and the figure of 9 under this letter "t."

[M] Mark it, for this is a Mystery.

[D] Then that shower (of the 40) seemed to fly up into the air like as it were a white garment.

[M] Illius Gloria sit nobiscum.[14]

[D] All said amen and fell down.

Then stood up another and opened his bosom and showed on his breast bare (being like silver) a small "h," and he pointed to it, and over it was the number of 22.

[M] Et est numerus virtutis benedictus: Videte Angelos Lucis.[15]

[D] This shower went away like a white cock flying up.

[D] There came another in and said, "Et sum finis et non est mihi numerus.

---

[12] "Your name is multiplied on the earth."

[13] "We have seen your Glory, o Lord."

[14] "May His Glory be with us."

[15] "And it is the blessed number of virtue: Behold the Angels of Light."

Sum numerus in numero, et omnis numerus est mihi numerus. Videte."[16]

There appeared a small "n" on his skin being all spotted with gold.

Then he went away like three fires, red flaming, and coming together in the midst of the firmament.

[D] You must note that in the stone the whole world in a manner did seem to appear: heaven, and earth, etc.

[D] He cried out in a loud voice:[17]

[M] Et est vita in caelis.[18]

[D] Then stepped forth one and said "Et ego vivo cum bene viventibus,"[19] and with all he kneeled down. And Michael stepped forth and took off his veil on his heart and he made curtsy and stood up.

[M] Vivamus Halleluyah, O Sanctum Nomen.[20]

[D] All fell down on their faces and Michael stroke over them with his sword and a great flash of fire: And this man his breast seemed open... his heart appeared bleeding, and therein the letter "m" and the number 6 over it, thus.

[M] Benedictus est Numerus Agni.[21]

[D] Hereupon they all fell down.

---

[16] "And I am the end, and I have no number. I am a number in a number, and every number is my number."

[17] Marginal note.

[18] "And there is life in the heavens."

[19] "And I live with those who live well."

[20] "Let us live, Hallelujah, O Holy Name."

[21] "Blessed is the Number of the Lamb."

[M] Orate invicem.[22]

[D] Hereupon we prayed a psalm, my scryer saying one verse and I the other, etc.

[M] Omnia data sunt a Deo.[23]

[D] Then came in one having a round tablet in his forehead and a little "o" in his forehead and 22 over it.

[M] Et non est finis in illo. Benedictus es tu Deus.[24]

[D] And then that shower vanished away. He flew up like a round rainbow knit together at the ends.

[M] Angeli a nomine tuo procident Domine. Tu es primus, O Halleluyah.[25]

[D] One stood up and the rest fell down, and out of his mouth that stood came a sword: and the point, a triangle, and in the middle of it a small "a," thus, of pure gold graven very deep. "Et numerus tuus vivit in caeteris,"[26] said this shower. The number was 22[27] over the "a."

This shower went away with a great lightning covering all of the world.

[M] Nomen illius est nobiscum.[28]

[D] He stroke again with his sword over them. Then stood one up who upon his garment had an "n," and he turned about and on his back were very many (ens) "n."

---

[22] "Pray in turn."

[23] "All things are given by God."

[24] "And there is no end in him. Blessed are you, God."

[25] "The angels fall down at your name, o Lord. You are first, O Hallalujah."

[26] "And your number lives in the others."

[27] The corrected 20 is written above it.

[28] "His name is with us."

[M] Creasti tu Domine Angelos tuos ad Gloriam tuam.[29]

[D] Over the "n" was the number of 14. Over that "n" (I mean) which was only on his breast.

[M] Et te primus creavit Deus.[30]

[D] Then the shower flew up like a star and another came in, all his cloth being plucked up, and so seemed naked. He had a little "a." This "a" did go round about him, beginning at his feet and so spirally upward, and he seemed to be all clay. Over the "a" was the number 6.

[M] Et creata sunt et pereunt in Nomine tuo.[31]

[D] And therewith the shower fell down all into dust on the Earth, and his white garment flew up like a white smoke and also a white thing did fly out of his body.

"Surgit Innocentia ad faciem Dei."[32]

Michael did over them again with his sword and it seemed to lighten. He began to speak and he stopped suddenly and fire flew from his mouth.

[M] Innocentum Nomina et sanguinem vidisti Domine a Terra et Iustus es in operibus tuis.[33]

[D] Then came one in with a garment all bloody. He was like a child. He had a ball in his hand of perfume which smoked, and he had upon his forehead a little "h." He bowed to Michael, and Michael said, "Numerus tuus est infinitus; et erit finis rerum."[34]

---

[29] "You created, o Lord, your Angels for your Glory."

[30] "And God first created you."

[31] "And things are created and pass away in your Name."

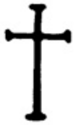
[32] "Innocence rises up toward the face of God."

[33] "You have seen, o Lord, the names and blood of the innocent from the earth, and you are just in your works."

[34] "Your number is infinite; and it will be the end of things."

This shower seemed to power himself away like a flood of blood and his garment flew upward.

[M] Non est illi numerus. Omnia pereunt a facie Dei et a facie Terra.[35]



[D] Then stepped one forth and like a water running round about him and he cried miserably, "O benedictum nomen tuam, Domine. Numeris perijt cum illis."[36]

A little "o" with 18 over it appeared. This shower seemed to vanish away and to cause a great water remain over all.

[M] Lux manet in tenebris. Gloriosum est Nomen tuum.[37]

[D] Then stepped one forth from the rest, who fell down, as their manner was.

NOTE: All the Companies of these 40 stood five together and five together, and so in eight companies each of five.

[D] This was a very white one. The upper parts of his throat seemed open and there seemed to come out of it fire, in very many and diverse colors. He said, "Trinus sum."[38]

[M] Benedictum sit Nomen El.[39]

[D] Then in the middle of the fires or smoke seemed an "l," thrice placed on a bloody cross and over the "l," the number 26.

This shower seemed to have three men's heads and to vanish away in a mist with a thunder.

---

[35] "He has no number. All things pass away from the face of God and from the face of the earth."

[36] "O blessed is your name, o Lord. The number passed away with those ones."

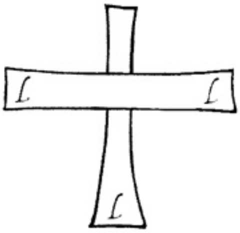
[37] "The light remains in the darkness. Your name is glorious."

[38] "I am threefold."

[39] "May the name El be blessed."

[M] Labia mea laudant Dominum.[40]

[D] Then came a very fair young one in with long hair hanging on her (or his) shoulders, and on her belly appeared a great scotcheon. To her or him Michael gave a flame of fire, and she or he did eat it.



[M] "Et hic est El,"[41] and so appeared a little "l" on the scotcheon, and it waxed bigger and bigger, and fire did seem to go round about it.

[M] Benedicta sit aetus tua.[42]

[D] And there appeared 30 under the "l." Then came a great many of little fires and did seem to elevate this young woman (or child) out of sight.

Michael stroke his sword over them again and said "Natus est illa Lux. Ille est Lux noster."[43]

Then stepped out another and opened his white silk garment uppermost and under it he seemed to be sowed up in a white silk cloth. He had in his forehead an "n," in his breast an "n," and in this right hand an "n."

[M] Numerus tuus est benedictus.[44]

[D] They all fell down saying, "Numerus tuus est Nobiscum. Nec adhuc novimus finem illius venies cum numero tuo, O unus in aeternum."[45]

And they fell all down again. This shower departed climbing up into the air as if he had climbed on a ladder.

---

[40] "My lips praise the Lord."

[41] "And this one is El."

[42] "May your age be blessed."

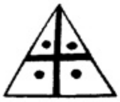
[43] "He is born as the Light. He is our Light."

[44] "Your number is blessed."

[45] "Your number is with us. We do not yet know his end; may you come with your number, O one forever."

[M] Linguis suis cognoverunt eum.[46]

[D] All said "Benedictus est qui sic et sic est,"[47] throwing up into the air three cornered trenchers of this fashion, all of gold. The one side of the trencher was thus marked and the other side had nothing on.



Then stepped one out, and fire came out and in of his mouth. He kneeled. The rest fell down. This seemed a transparent body and he had in his eyes a small "l" and in his forehead the figure of 8.

[M] Note this, under. I mean the figure 8, thus.

[D] All said, "Et es verus in operibus tuis,"[48] and so he vanished away in a flame of fire.

[M] Gaudete omnes populi eius, gaudete omnes populi eius, abhinc Gaudete.[49]

[D] All said, "Amen."

One stepped forth saying, "Incipit virtus nostra,"[50] he being covered under his robe all with armor, and had a great "G" on his armor and the figure of 7 over it. He went behind Michael and so vanished away.

[M] Recte vivite omnes Sancti eius.[51]

[D] One stepped forth and opening his breast there appeared a book, and turning over the leaves there appeared nothing but a little "r" and 13 over it. He went behind the chair and so vanished away.

---

[46] "They have recognized him with their tongues."

[47] "Blessed is he who is thus and thus."

[48] "And you are true in your works."

[49] "Rejoice, all his peoples, rejoice, all his peoples, henceforth rejoice."

[50] "Our virtue begins."

[51] "Live rightly, all his Holy ones."

[M] Hic est Angelus Eccliae mea, qui doceat ille viam meam.[52]

[D] There stepped out a plain man, and under his garment a girdle, and under his girdle a rod, and in his hand he had a sword, and in his mouth a flame of fire. He had a great "H" upon his sword and under it 22. He went behind the chair, etc., Michael standing up still upon his legs, like pillars of brass.

I asked if I should not cease now by reason of the folk tarrying for us to come to supper.

[M] Lay away the world. Continue your work. Coniunxit spiritum mentibus illorum.[53]

[D] Then stepped out one having under his garment a little chest, and therein a man's heart raw, and the heart was thus with two letters, one on the one side, "o," and on the other a "g."

[D] As in scutcheons of arms where the man and his wife's arms are joined perpale as the heralds term it.[54]

This shower shut up the chest and went his way.

[M] Numerus illius est sine numero.[55]

[D] Then came in another saying "Tempus est. Deum vestrum agnoscite."[56]

This shower, his arms stretched down to his feet, he showed forth his right hand, and in it a little "t" and 11 under it.

[M] Stay: place this in the second place. This went away. "Imago tua (mors) est amara."[57]

[52] "This is the Angel of my Church that he may teach my way."

[53] "He joined the spirit with their minds."

[54] Marginal note.

[55] "His number is without number."

[56] "It is time. Recognize your God."

[57] "Your image (death) is bitter."

[D] Then came one in with a big belly and fat cheeks. An half sword pierced his heart and a little "y" written on it.

[M] Iustus est malis Deus noster.[58]

[D] The number of 15 under it.

[M] Place it in the former place. Opera fidelum delectatio mea.[59]

[D] Then came one in.

[M] Hic est Deus noster.[60]

[D] He showed the letter of "o" on his naked breast and the figure of 8 under it. He went away.

[M] Ecce Iniquitas regnat in domo mea.[61]

[D] Then stepped one out, very lean, all his body full of little "e" and under every one of them 21. He went away behind the chair.

[M] Bestia devoravit populum meum, perebit autem in aeternum.[62]

[D] Then stepped out one in bloody apparel, all his body full of serpents' heads and a "b" on his forehead and the number 10 over it. He went away.

[M] Iniquitas abundat in templo meo et sancti vivunt cum Iniquis.[63]

[D] One very lean, hunger starved, came out, an "A" on his breast and 11

---

58. "Our God is just to the wicked."

59. "The work of the faithful is my delight."

60. "This is our God."

61. "Behold, Injustice reigns in my house."

62. "The beast has devoured my people, but he will perish forever."

63. "Injustice overflows in my temple and the holy live with the unjust."

over it, and so went away. Then came in another.

[M] Iniqua est Terra malitijs suis.[64]

[D] Then came in one who drew out a bloody sword. On his breast a great roman "I" and 15 over it. He went his way.

[M] Angeli eius ministraverunt sanctis.[65]

[D] Then stepped one out with a target and a little "a" on it and over it the number of 8. He went away.

[M] Regnabit Iniquitus pro tempore.[66]

[D] They all cried Helleluyah.

Then stepped one forth with a golden crown and a great arming sword, his clothing all of gold with a letter "r" on his sword and 16 over it, and so he went away.

[D] Uriel corrected it after to be under.[67]

[M] Nulla regnat virtus sup terra.[68]

[D] Then stepped one out having all his body under his white silken habit (as they all had) very brave after the fashion of these days with great ruffs, cut hose, a great bellied doublet, a voluet hat on his head with a feather, and he advanced himself braggingly. He had burnt into his forehead a little "n" and Michael said "Non est numerus illius in caelis."[69]

---

[64] "The Earth is unjust with their evils."

[65] "His angels have served the holy."

[66] "Injustice will reign for a time."

[67] Marginal note.

[68] "No virtue reigns upon the earth."

[69] "His number is not in the heavens."

He went away.

[M] Antiquas serpens extulit caput suum devorans Innocentes Halleluyah.[70]

[D] Then came one who put off his white habit, and he took a sword and smote up into the air, and it thundered, and he had a seal (suddenly there) very gorgeous of gold and precious stones. He said, "Regnum meum. Quis contradicet?"[71]

He hath proceeding out of his mouth many little (enns) "n" and on his forehead a great "A."

[M] Non quod est A sed quod contradicit A. Nec portio nec numerus eius invenitur in caelo. Habet autem numerum terrestrum. Mysterium.[72]

[D] He shewed three figures of 6 set in a triangle, thus.

[M] Vobis est Mysterium hoc, posterius revelandum.[73]

[D] And there came a fire and consumed him and his chair away suddenly.

[M] Perturbatur terra iniquitate sua.[74]

[D] My scryer had omitted to tell me this or else it was not told and showed but Uriel did after supply it by the scryer. The first letter of Perturbatur doth not make show of the letter following as other before did.[75]

[D] This shower, his garments white under, his face as brass, his body grievous with leprosy, having upon his breast an "o" with the number of 10 under it and so he departed.

[70] "The ancient serpent has raised its head, devouring the innocent. Hallelujah."

[71] "My kingdom. Who will speak against it?"

[72] "Not because he is A, but because he speaks against A. Neither his portion nor his number is found in heaven. But he has an earthly number. A mystery."

[73] "This Mystery is to be revealed to you later."

[74] "The earth is thrown into confusion by its injustice."

[75] Marginal note.

[M] Surgite O Ministri Dei. Surgite (inquam) Pugnate. Nomen Dei est aeternum.[76]

[D] Then came two out together. They had two edged swords in their hands and fire came out of their mouths. One had a "G" and 5 over it, the other had...

We fell to prayer, whereupon Michael blessed us.

...the other had an "h" on his sword, and 14 under it, and so they went away.

[M] Omnis terra tremet ad vocem tubae illius.[77]

[D] One stepped out and under his habit had a trumpet. He put it to his mouth and blew it not. On his forehead, a little "o," and 17 under it. He went away.

[M] Serva Deus populum tuum. Serva Deus populum tuum Israel. Serva (inquam) Deus populum tuum Israel.[78]

[D] He cried this aloud.

One appeared with a fiery sword all bloody, his vesture all bloody, and he had "s." "Est numerus in numero."[79]

[D] He went away. I understand it to be a letter and the number 5 also.

[M] So it is.

[D] There came one in with diverse ugly faces and all his body scabbed.

---

[76] "Rise up, o Servants of God. Rise up (I say), fight. The name of God is eternal."

[77] "All the earth will tremble at the sound of his trumpet."

[78] "Protect your people, o God. Protect your people Israel, o God. Protect (I say) your people Israel, o God."

[79] "There is a number in a number."

[M] Nunc sunt dies tribulationis.[80]

[D] He had an "a" on his forehead and the number 5 under it.

[M] Hic est Numerus predictus. Audite, consummatum est.[81]

[D] This had a great pot of water in his hand and upon the pot graven "a" with 5 under it. He departed in fire.

[D] Uriel also corrected this place with delivering this in the place of the other description before.[82]

[M] Angele preparato Tubam tuam.[83]

[D] Then came one out with a trumpet.

[M] Venite tempus.[84]

[D] He offered to blow, but blew it not. On the end of his trumpet was a little "a" and 24 under it. He went away.

They all now seemed to be gone: Michael and all. He came in again and two with him, and he said "Hij duo caelati sunt adhuc."[85] They two went away.

[M] Vale. Natura habet terminum suum.[86]

[D] He blessed us and flourished his sword towards and over us and so went away, and Uriel after him, who all this while appeared not.

---

[80] "Now are the days of oppression."

[81] "This is the number spoken of before. Listen, it is accomplished."

[82] Marginal note.

[83] "Angel, make ready your trumpet."

[84] Come, it is time."

[85] "These two were hidden till now."

[86] "Farewell. Nature has its limit."

[D] After supper Mr. Talbot went up to his chamber to prayers and Uriel showed himself unto him and told him that somewhat was amiss in the Table or seal which I had been occupied about this day. And thereupon Mr. Talbot came to me into my study and required the seal (or tables) of me, for he was wished to correct something therein (said he). I delivered him the seal and he brought it again within a little time after, corrected both in the numbers, for quantity, and some for place, over or under, and also in one letter or place omitted which I denied of any place omitted by me that was expressed unto me. And the rather I doubted upon Michael his words last spoken upon two places then remaining yet empty, saying "Hij duo caelati sunt adhuc." But if I had omitted any there should more than two have wanted, whereupon we thought good to ask judgment and dissolving of the doubt by Michael. And coming to the stone he was ready. I propounded this former doubt. He answered:

[M] Veritas est sola in Deo. Et haec omnia vera sunt.[87] You omitted no letter of history that was told you, but the scryer omitted to declare unto you.

[D] May I thus record it?

[M] It is justly reformed by Uriel, the one being omitted of the descryer and the other not by us yet by us declared might make that phrase meete to be spoken, "Hij duo caelati sunt adhuc."

Thou hast said.

[D] I pray you to make up that one place yet wanting. Then he stood up on his great brazen legs again. He called again Semiel, Semiel. Then he came and kneeled down. "Consummatum est."[88]

[D] The shower (a white man) plucked out a trumpet and put it to his mouth as though he would blow, but blew not, and there appeared at the end of the trumpet the Greek ω.[89]

---

[87] "The truth is only in God. And all these things are true."

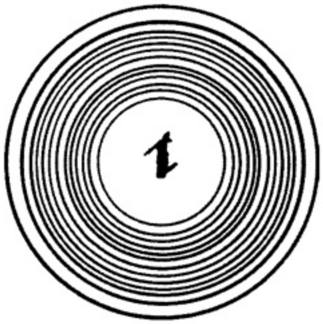
[88] "It is accomplished."

[89] Omega, the last letter of the Greek alphabet, given here in lowercase form.

There arose a mist and a horrible thunder.

[M] It is done.

[D] Then of the three 6 before noted with his finger he put out the two lowermost and said "Iste est numerus suas."[90] And Michael did put his finger into the trumpet's end and pulled forth a round plate of gold whereon was the figure of "i" with many circles about it and said, "Omnia unum est."[91]



The form of the world which appeared before vanished away and Semiel went away.

And Michael came and sat in his chair again and his brazen legs were gone and upon our pausing he said:

[M] Go forward. Do you know what you have already written?

Laudate Dominum in Sanctus eius.[92]

Note: The circumference (which is done) contains 7 names. 7 names contain 7 angels. Every letter contains 7 Angels. The numbers are applied to the letters. When thou dost know the 7 names thou shall understand the 7 angels.

The number of 4 pertaining to the first T is a number significative: signifying to what place thou shalt next apply thy eye and being placed above, it shows removing toward the right hand, taking the figure for the number of the place applyable to the next letter to be taken. The under number is significative, declaring to what place thou shalt apply the next letter in the circumference toward the left hand which you must read until it light upon a letter without number, not signifying. This is the whole. So shalt thou find the 7 principal Names known with us and applyable to thy practice.

[90] "This is his number."

[91] "All things are one."

[92] "Praise the Lord in his sanctuary."

Make experience.

[D] Then telling from "T," 4 more places (toward the right hand) exclusively I find in that fourth place, from "T" (but being the fifth from the beginning and with beginning) this letter "h" with 22 over it. Therefore, I proceed to the right hand 22 places, and there I find "A" and 11 over it. Going then toward the right hand 11 places further, I find a little "a" with 5 under it. By reason of which under place of 5, I go toward the left hand 5 places exclusively, where I find "o" with 10 under it; whereupon I proceed to the left hand further by 10 places, and there I see the letter "t" and 11 under it; and therefore going to the left hand 11 places, I see there the letter "h" alone without any number. Wherefore, that letter ends my word, and it is in all ThAaoth. Is this as it should be?

[M] That is not the name. Thou shalt understand all in the next call. The rule is perfect. Call again within an hour and it shall be shown.

[D] The hour being come we attended Michael his return to make the practice evident of his first rule.

[M] Salvete.[93]

Thou didst err and herein hast thou erred, and yet notwithstanding no error in thee, because thou knew not the error. Understand that the 7 names must comprehend as many letters in the whole as there are places in the circle. Some letters are significative of themselves, in deed no letters but double numbers being the name of God. Thou hast erred in the first name in setting down Aa that is twice a together which differ the word; which thou shalt note to the end of thy work. Wheresoever thou shalt find two aa together, the first is not to be placed within the name but rather left with his inward power. Thou shalt find 7 names proceeding three general parts of the circumference. My meaning is from three general letters, and only but one letter, that is this letter A. Account thou and thou shalt find the names just. I speak not of any that come in the beginning of the word, but such as light in the middle. Prove. Prove, and thou shalt see. Whereas thou hast "go" it is to be read "og." This is the whole.

---

[93] "Be well."

[D] I have read in Cabala of the name of God of 42 letters, but not yet of any of 40 letters. That of 42 letters is this:

אב:אלהים:בן:אלהים:רוח:הקדש:אלהים:שלשה:באחד:אחד:בשלשח

Vide Galantium.[94]

“Pater Deus, Filius Deus, Spiritus Sanctus Deus. Tres in uno et unus in tribus, vel Trinitas in unitate, et unitas in Trinitate.”[95]

Or this: אב:אל:בן:אל:ורוח:הקדש:לא:אבל:לא:שלשה:אלהים:כי:אם:אלוה:אחד

Which in Latin is “Pater Deus Filius Deus et spiritus sanctus. Deus attamen non tres Dij sed unus Deus.”[96]

And as this is of God, Unity in Trinity, so of Christ only (the second person of the Divine Trinity) the Cabalists have a name explained of 42 letters on this manner:

באשר:הנפש:המשכלת:והבשר:אדם:אחד:כן:האל:והאדם:משיה:אחד

That is in Latin “Sicut anima rationalis, et caro, homo unus, ita Deus. Deus et homo Messias unus.”[97]

I am not good in the Hebrew tongue but you know my meaning.

[M] The letters being so taken out being a name and a number doth certify the old rule of 42 letters when you restore them in again.

Note: Out of this Circle shall no creature pass that enters if it be made upon the earth. My meaning is if he be defiled. This shalt thou prove to be a mystery unknown to man. Beasts, birds, fowl and fish do all reverence to it. In this they were all created. In this is all things contained. In time thou shalt find it in Adam's Treatise from Paradise. Look to the mysteries, for they are true. A and Ω.[98] Primus et Novissimus. Unus solus Deus vivit nunc et semper. Hic est, et hic erit. Et hic sunt Nomina sua Divina.[99]

[94] Marginal note. “See Galatinus.”

[95] “God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit. Three in one and one in three, or Trinity in unity and unity in Trinity.”

[96] “God the Father, God the Son, and the holy spirit. But still God is not three Gods but one God.”

[97] “Just as the rational soul and the flesh are one man, so is God. God and the man the Messiah are one.”

Dixi.[100]

Thou art watched all this night, who is even now at the door: Clerkson.[101] Blessed are those whose portion is not with the wicked.

Benedicamus Dominum. Halleluyah.[102]

Tuesday the 20th of March, circa 10 a mane.

[D] Are you Uriel?

[U] I am. We thank thee for thy great good will. We cannot visit thee now. At the twelfth hour thou shalt use us.

[D] Fiat voluntas Dei.[103]

A meride: circa 2.[104]

At the twelfth hour my partner was busied in other affairs and so continued until about 2 of the clock. When we, coming to the stone, found there Michael and Uriel, but Michael straight away rose up and went out and came in again, and one after him, carrying on his right shoulder 7 little baskets of gold they seemed to be.

[M] Shut up your doors.

[98] Alpha and Omega, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet.

[99] "First and most recent. One single God lives now and always. He is, and he will be. And here are his Divine Names."

[100] "I have spoken."

[101] Clerkson was an acquaintance of Dee.—Ed.

[102] "Let us bless the Lord. Hallelujah."

[103] "Let the will of God be done."

[104] "Afternoon, around two."

[D] I had left the outermost door of my study open and did but shut the portal door of it.

He took the 7 baskets and hanged them round about the border of a canopy of beaten gold as it were.

[M] Ecce Mysterium est. Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel.[105]

[D] Therewith he did spread out or stretch the canopy, whereby it seemed to cover all the world (which seemed to be in the stone: also, heaven and earth) so that the scryer could not now see the heaven. And the baskets by equal distances did seem to hang on the border of the horizon.

[M] What would you have?

[D] Sapientiam.[106]

[M] Read the names thou hast written.

[D] I had written these according to the rule before given as I understood it.

ThAaoth
GalAas
Gethog
Horlωn
Innon
Aaoth
Galetsog

[M] Look to the last name.

(D - I had written (as appeareth) Galetsog by mistaking the numbers, where I found it should be Galethog with an "h" and not "s."

---

[105] "Behold, it is a Mystery. Blessed is the Lord God of Israel."

[106] "Wisdom"

[M] Lo, else thou had erred. They are all right but not in order. The second is the first (his name be honored forever). The first here must be our third, and the third here must be our second. Thus set down:

Galas
Gethog
Thaoth
Horlωn
Innon
Aaoth
Galethog

[M] Work from the right toward the left in the first angle next unto the circumference.

[D] He showed then, thus, this letter
[M] Make the number of 5 on the right hand (that is, before it) at a reasonable distance; thus,  5.

[D] After that he showed the second letter, a great roman A, thus:  24.

Then he showed  30.

Then  21.

Then  9.

Then he showed  14.

Then he showed this compound letter with the circle and cross
He willed me at each corner of these segments of circles to make little crosses, and so I did.

After every of the 7 letters showed, he did put them up in his bosom as soon as he had showed them fully. The plates whereon these letters were showed have the form of the segment of a circle, thus, and seemed to be of pure gold. When the 7 letters were placed, he said: "Omnia unum est."[107]

Then he pulled all the 7 plates out of his bosom and Uriel kneeled down before him. Then the plates did seem to have two wings (each of them) and to fly up to heaven under the Canopy.

After this, one of the 7 baskets (that which is in the east) came to Michael and he said:

[M] Seal this. For this was and is forever.

[D] Then he stood again on his legs like brazen pillars and said:

[M] O how mighty is the name of God which reigns in the heavens, O God of the faithful, for thou reign for ever.

[D] He opened the basket and there came a great fire out of it.

[M] Divide the 7 parts of the circle next unto that which thou hast done, every one into 7.

Note (for the time will be long):

Seven rest in 7: and the 7 live by 7: the 7 govern the 7: and by 7 all Government is. Blessed be he, yea, blessed be the Lord, praised be our God. His Name be magnified. All honor and Glory be unto him now and for ever. Amen.

[D] Then he took out of the fire in the basket a white fowl like a pigeon. That fowl had a Z upon the first of 7 feathers which were on his breast. That first feather was on the left side.

[M] Note there is a mystery in the seven, which are the 7 governing the 7 which govern the earth. Halleluyah.

---

[107] "All things are one."

Write the letters.

[D] Now a small "l" in the second feather. Then he covered these first two feathers with the other feathers.
The third an "l" like the other. Then he covered that also.
The fourth an "R." He covered that.
The fifth a great roman "H." He covered it.
The sixth feather hath a little "i." Then he hid that feather.
The last feather had a small "a."

[M] Praise god.

[D] We prayed.

[D] Then he put the fowl into the basket and set it down by him. Then he hung it up in the air by him. Then he lifted up his sword over us and bade us pray. We prayed.

Then he stretched out his hand and there came another basket to him and he plucked out a white bird much bigger than the other, as big as a swan with 7 feathers on the breast.

[M] Dixit, et factum est.[108]

Note.

[D] The first feather had a little "a" on it and it went away.
The next a Z, great as the first.
Then a "C," great.
Then a little "a."
Then another little "a."
Then a feather with a little "c."
The one with a little "b."
Then he covered them all.

---

[108] "He spoke, and it was done."

[M] Thou hast truth.

[D] Then he put up the fowl into the basket and hung it up by the other in the air.
Then the third basket came to him and he took out a bird all green as grass, like to a peacock in form and bigness.

[M] Et vivus tu cum illo: et regnum tuum cum illis est.[109]

[D] There started out of this bird's breast 7 feathers like gold, and fiery.

[M] Pray.

Note.

[D] On the first feather a small "p."
Then a small "a."
A little "u."
Then a small "p."
Then a small "n."
Then a small "h."
Then a small "r."

Then he put the fowl up into the basket, etc.

[D] Then there came another basket to his hand.

[M] Dedit illi potestatum in caelis. Potestas illius magna est. Orate.[110]

[D] We prayed.

Then he plucked out a fowl greater than any of the other, like a gryphon (as commonly they are figured) all red fiery with scales like brass. Then on seven scales appeared letters.

---

[109] "And you are living with that one: and your kingdom is with them."

[110] "He gave to that one power in the heavens. The power of that one is great. Pray."

[M] Note.

[D] First a little h.
A little d.
A little m.
Then a little h.
Then a little i.
Then a little a.
Then a little i.

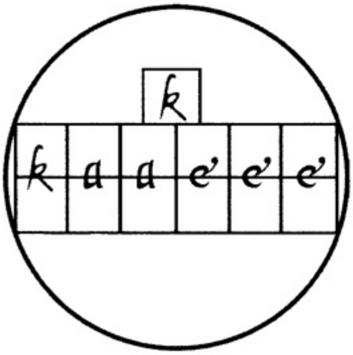
Then he put up the fowl and hung up the basket in the air. Then there came another basket to him.

Note: all this while the firmament was not to be seen.

[M] Mangus est Deus in Angelis suis, et magna est illorum potestas in caelis. Orate.[111]

[D] We prayed.

Then he plucked out a bird like an Eagle, all his body like gold, and he had a little circle of feathers on his breast; and in it, between four parallel lines, twelve equal squares, and on the top, in the middle, one like the other twelve, thus.



---

[111] "Great is God in his Angels, and great is their power in the heavens. Pray."

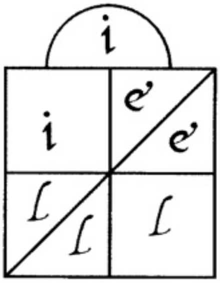
Then he put up the Eagle.
Then came another basket.

[M] Nuncius tuus est magnus in caelis. Orate.[112]

[D] He and the basket that were opened, shut, and set aside, seemed all to be gone and the baskets remaining still hanging on the border of the Canopy. Then he came again and went away again. Then came Uriel and held the basket, and his legs seemed to be such great tall pillars of brass, as Michael did stand on before.

[U] This is a Mystery. He is here and not here which was here before.

[D] He opened the basket and plucked out like a phoenix (or pelican) of the bigness of a swan and fiery, sparkling.[113] His bill is bent into his breast and it bled. In his breast was a quadrangle made with his own feathers, thus.



He put it up and hung it by the other baskets.

Then came the last basket. Uriel stood still and said:

[U] Dedit angelis potestatum in lumine caeli. Orate.[114]

---

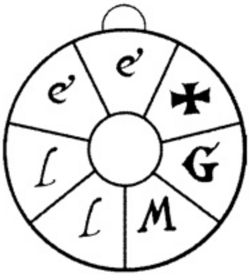
[112] "Your messenger is great in the heavens. Pray."

[113] The picture of a pelican feeding its young on blood from its own breast is a common alchemical symbol that would have been a well-known symbol to Kelley. (Editor).

[114] "He gave the angels power in the light of heaven. Pray."

[D] We prayed.
Then came Michael and took the basket of Uriel and became standing on the great brazen legs as before.

He took out of the basket a strange fowl with many wings. This fowl had in his forehead a tablet of this fashion.



[M] Et Connunxit illos Deus in Unum.[115]

[D] All the baskets flew up, and so the Canopy vanished away and the Heaven appeared.

Now he came and sat down in this chair.

Michael said to Uriel, "It is thy part to expound these Mysteries. Go to, in the name of our God."

Uriel came and stood before him and said, "What will you, O our fellows and servants to God? What will you?"

[D] Perfect knowledge and understanding such as is necessary for us.

[U] Look upon and see if thou can not understand it: We will depart for a little space and come to thee again.

[D] So they went and left all the stone in fire so that neither the chair nor the table could be seen in it.

---

[115] "And God joined them together into One."

After a quarter of an hour, Michael and Uriel came both again.

[M] Look into the 7 angles next unto the uppermost circumference.

[D] Uriel came and stood before Michael.

[U] Those 7 letters are the 7 seats of the One and everlasting GOD. His 7 secret angels proceeding from every letter and cross so formed, referred to in substance to the FATHER, in form to the SON, and inwardly to the HOLY GHOST. Look upon it: it is one of the Names which thou hast before, every letter containing an angel of Brightness comprehending the 7 inward powers of God known to none but himself, a sufficient BOND to urge all creatures to life or death or any thing else contained in this world. It banishes the wicked, expels evil sprits, qualifies the waters, strengthens the just, exalts the righteous and destroys the wicked. He is ONE in SEVEN. He is twice THREE. He is seven in the Whole. He is Almighty. His name is everlasting. His Truth can not fail. His glory is incomprehensible. Blessed be his name. Blessed be thou (our GOD) for ever.

[D] Note these manifold and great mysteries and mark these 7 diverse crosses with the 7 letters.[116]

[D] He is twice three and one.[117]

[U] Thou must refer thy numbers therein contained to the upper circle. For from thence all things in the inward parts shall be comprehended. Look if thou understand it.

[D] I find it to be GALETHOG.

[U] It is so.

[D] I thank God and you. I understand now (also) the numbers annexed.

---

[116] Marginal note.

[117] Marginal note.

[U] As this darkness is lightened by the spirit of God herein, so will I lighten, yea so will the Lord lighten your imperfections and glorify your minds to the sight of innumerable most holy and unspeakable mysteries.

To the next part.

[D] Michael sat still with his sword in his hand.

[U] The part wherein thou hast labored contains 7 Angels. Dost thou understand it?

[D] Not yet.

[U] O how far is man's judgment from Celestial powers? Oh how far are these secrets hidden from the wicked? Glory be unto him which sees forever.

[D] Amen. Amen. Amen.

[U] Note. We cannot tarry long. Thou must set down the letters only by 7 in a spare paper, thus.

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a a	Z	C	a	a	c	b p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	i k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	+

Read. Begin at the first and read downward.

[D] I read thus Zaphkiel, Zadkiel, Cumael, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, Gabriel.

[U] Thou hast read right.

[D] Praised be God.

[D] 48 letters are here and one as noted by a cross which makes the 49th.[118]

[U] Dost thou see how mercifully God deals with his servants?

Every letter here contains or comprehends the number of 72 virtues whose names thou shalt know, scarce yet revealed to the world.

[D] 72 virtues multiplied by 48 gives 3456.[119]

[D] Uriel and Michael jointly together pronounced this blessing on us:

[U, M] We bless you: your souls, hearts, bodies, and all your doings.

[D] Michael with his sword and flame of fire flourished over our heads.

[M] Yet I will this much show you, for your comfort beside. What seest thou?

[D] He spoke to the scryer and he saw an innumerable multitude of Angels in the chamber or study about us, very beautiful with wings of fire. Then he said:

[M] Lo, thus you shall be shadowed from the wicked. Keep these tables secret. He is secret that liveth forever. Man is frail. Fare well.

Go for the books, else they will perish. He meant that my partner Ed. Talbot[120] should go to fetch the books from Lancaster (or thereby) which were the Lord Mountegles books, which Mr. Mort yet has, whereof mention is made before.

[118] Marginal note.

[119] Marginal note.

[120] Edward Kelley. Dee still knew him by the pseudonym Edward Talbot at this time.

Ended hora 5 a meridie.[121]
Tuesday the 20th of March, 1582

Wednesday, 21 March, circa 2 a meridie.[122]

[D] After appearance was had, there came in one before Michael (who sat in his seat) and Uriel leaned on the table (as he usually did). This seemed to be a trumpeter. He was all in white and his garments bespotted with blood. He had nothing on his head, his hair very long, hanging behind him on his shoulders. The trumpet seemed to be gold. The sound thereof was very plain.

[D] Note this trumpeter.[123]

I asked my scryer in what manner Uriel now showed, and Michael likewise. Then Michael said:

[M] I warned thee for asking of my apparel or manner.

Et haec est Gloria illius qua non comovebitur ab impijs. Quid vultis?[124]

[D] Iuxta voluntate Dei, sapientiam nobis necessarium, etc.[125]

[M] Sapentia mundi nihil est peribit autem in aeternum. Veniat aeternitas DOMINI ab universis mundi partibus. Venite, Venite, sic vult DEUS ADONAY fac officium Phanael.[126]

---

[121] "...at five o'clock in the afternoon."

[122] "...around two in the afternoon."

[123] Marginal note.

[124] "And this is his Glory, which will not be moved by the impious. What do you want?"

[125] "After the will of God, the wisdom necessary to us, etc."

[126] "The wisdom of the world is nothing, but it will perish forever. May the eternity of the LORD come from all parts of the world. Come, come, thus wills GOD ADONAI. Do your duty, Phanael."

[D] This Phanael was the Trumpeter (above mentioned) who thereupon blew his trumpet lustily, turning left round about to all the world. Then from 7 parts of the world (being equally divided about the horizon) came 7 companies of pillars all of fiery color, glittering; and every company of pillars high and great as though they were pillars of fire.

The Heaven, the Sun and Moon, and Stars seemed to tremble.

[M] Multiplex est Deus noster.[127]

Mark this mystery. Seven comprehends the Secrets of Heaven and Earth. Seven knits man's soul and body together (three in soul and four in body).

In 7 thou shalt find the Unity.
In 7 thou shalt find the Trinity.
In 7 thou shalt find the Son and the proportion of the Holy Ghost.
O God, O God, O God, thy Name O God be praised forever from thy 7 Thrones, from thy 7 Trumpets, and from thy 7 Angels.

[D] Amen, Amen, Amen.

[M] In 7, God wrought all things.

Note: In 7 and by 7 must you work all things. O seven times seven, Verity, Virtue, and Majesty, I minister by thy license.

This expounded by thy virtue.

[D] Michael spoke that pointing to Uriel.

Michael and Uriel both kneeled down and the pillars of fiery and brazen color came near, round about them uniformly.

[M] Sic est Deus noster.[128]

---

[127] "Manifold is our God."

[128] "Thus is our God."

[D] One of the pillars leaned down toward the scryer and had like a pommel or mace head on the top of it. And Michael with great reverence took out of the top of it a thing like an S.

Then leaned down 6 pillars more and Michael cried aloud, "Unus est DEUS noster, Deus, Deus noster."[129]
Then orderly he opened all the pillars' heads and then the 7 joined all together, distinctly to be discerned.

[M] Note.

[D] There appeared a great S A A I.
Then the sides closed up and hid those letters first showed. After that appeared two letters more: E M.
He made curtsy and seemed to go from ward and vanished away.
Μψστεριοσ est.[130]

E 8.

The pillars all joined together at the tops, making (as it were) one mace or pommel and so flew up to heavenwards.

There seemed two pillars more to come down from heaven (like the other in form) and took place there where the other 7 stood which went away.

Michael with his sword cut them asunder and cried out:

[M] Away you workers of iniquity. Perijt malus cum malis.[131]

[D] The pillars fell down and the ground swallowed them up.

[M] Tanta est tua audacia Sathan sed DEUS noster vivit.[132]

[129] "One is our GOD, God, our God."

[130] "It is a mystery." The word "mysterious" is written out in English, but with Greek lettering.—Ed.

[131] "The evil one perished with his evils."

[132] "So great is your boldness, Satan, but our GOD lives."

[D] The pillars which before ascended came down jointly and out of them a voice saying, "NON SUM."[133]

Then the 7 pillars next (to) his right hand bowed to Michael and out of them a voice said, "SUM."[134]

Then one of the pillars stood higher than his fellows and Michael opened all the tops of them and said:

[M] Orate.[135]

[D] We prayed.

[M] Write the name down in the Tables.

[D] Then he took off 3 of the heads of the pillars and set them down and there appeared B, T, Z, great letters in hollow places like square cumfit boxes.

[M] Ista sunt secreta secretorum. Invocate nomen eius aut nihil agere possimus.[136]
The key of prayer opens all things.

[D] We prayed.

Then the other 4 pillars, bowing, showed 4 letters thus: K A S E and the number 30 with a prick under.

Then the pillars joined their heads together very close and flew up into the firmament with thunder.

[M] Sic Domine, sic, sic.[137] Place these in the Table.

[133] "I am not."

[134] "I am."

[135] "Pray."

[136] "These are the secrets of secrets. Call upon his name, or we would be able to do nothing."

[137] "Thus, o Lord, thus, thus."

[D] I wrote and he said:

[M] Thou hast done right. Laudate nomen Domini qui vivit in aeternum.[138]

[D] A voice came out of the next company of the pillars joining themselves together, saying, "Ipse."[139]

[M] Et Misericordia tua Domine magna est.[140]

[D] Michael kneeled when he said this. Michael showed out of 4 of their heads of the pillars (and with all said):

[M] No, not the Angels of heaven but I are privy of these things.

[D] So there appeared 4 letters H E I D.

Then the other 3 pillars were opened and had E N E on their tops.

[M] Dominus collocatur in numero suo.[141]

[D] The 7 pillars mounted up into the air and it thundered at their going.

Then the fourth company of pillars bowed to Michael.

Out of them came a voice: "Vivo sicut LEO in medio illorum."[142]

[M] Et tua potestas magna est ubique.[143]

[D] Then Michael plucked off five of the tops. There appeared D, then they joined together.

---

[138] "Praise the name of the Lord who lives forever."

[139] "He himself."

[140] "And your mercy, o Lord, is great."

[141] "The Lord is found in his number."

[142] "I live just as a LION in the middle of them."

[143] "And your power is great everywhere."

Then appeared E I M O.

[M] Hoc non est sine praece.[144]

[D] The other two opened and there appeared 30 A.

Then they closed up and went away with a great thunder.

Then came 7 other pillars to Michael and a voice out of them saying, "Serpens sum et devoravi serpentum."[145]

[M] Et bonis et malis serpens es Domine.[146]

[D] Then they closed all up and Michael said:

[M] Orate.[147]

[D] We prayed.

Then Michael took off the heads of 4: then appeared first an I then M E G.

Then he opened the other 3 and C B E appeared.

[M] Numerus illius est nulli cognitus.[148]

[D] They joined their heads all together and ascended up to heaven and great lightning after them.

Then came another septenary of pillars and out of them a voice, saying "Ignis sum penetrabilis."[149]

---

[144] "This is not without prayer."

[145] "I am a serpent, and I have devoured a serpent."

[146] "Both to the good and the evil you are a serpent, o Lord."

[147] "Pray."

[148] "His number is known to no one."

[149] "I am a piercing fire."

[M] Et sit nobiscum, O Deus.[150] Pray.

[D] We prayed.

Then he opened 4 of their heads and appeared in them I L A O.

They closed together again. Then one other was opened and I appeared.

Then 21/8 appeared and did shut up again.

Then he smote fire out of the last pillar and it thundered and there seemed to come out of it innumerable Angels like little children...

[D] Note these innumerable Angels.[151]

... with wings and there appeared N and suddenly did shut up.

"Sic sic sic Deus noster."[152]

[D] Then they joined all together and flew up.

[M] Note down in the table.

[D] I noted them down.

Then came the last 7 pillars and out of them this voice: "Finis. Gaudium et Lux nostra Deus."[153]

Then they closed all in one.

[M] Orate.[154]

[150] "And let it be with us, o God."

[151] Marginal note.

[152] "Thus, thus, thus, our God."

[153] "The end. God is our joy and light."

[154] "Pray."

[D] We prayed.

Then 6 of the heads opened and appeared I H R L A A.

Then the seventh opened. Then seemed trees to leap up and hills and the seas and waters to be troubled and thrown up.

A voice out of the pillars: "Consummatum est."[155]

There appeared in that pillar 21/8.

They joined together and flew up to heaven.

[M] Unus, unus, unus. Omnis caro timet vocem eius.[156] Pray.

[D] We prayed.

Note: my scryer was very faint and his head in manner giddy, and his eyes dazzling by reason of the sights seen so bright and fiery, etc. Michael bade him be of good comfort and said he should do well.

[M] Cease for a quarter of an hour.

[D] After we had stayed for a quarter of an hour, we coming to the stone again found him all ready to the stone, and Uriel with him, who also had been by all the while during the Mystery of the 7 pillars.

[M] Set two stoles in the middle of the floor. On the one, set the stone, and at the other let him kneel. I will shut the ears of them in the house that none shall hear us. I will show great Mysteries.

[D] Michael then with a loud voice said:

[M] Adeste Filiae Bonitatis: Ecce DEUS vester adest. Venite.[157]

[155] "It is accomplished."

[156] "One, one, one. All flesh fears his voice."

[157] "Come, Daughters of Goodness: Behold, our GOD is at hand. Come."

[D] There came in 7 young women appareled all in green having their heads round about attired all with green silk with a wreath behind hanging down to the ground. Michael stroke his sword over them, no fire appearing: then they kneeled, and after rose up again.

[M] Scribe quae vides.[158]

[D] One of them stepped out with a little blue tablet in the forehead of her and in it written El.

She stood aside and another came in after the same sort, with a great M and a little e, thus: Me.

The third came as the other and had Ese.

The fourth, Iana.

The fifth Akele.

The sixth, Azdobn.

The seventh stepped forth with Stimcul.

They all together said "Nos Possumus in caelis multa."[159]

Then they went their way, suddenly disappearing.

[M] Note this in your next place but one.

[D] I did so.

[M] Go to the next place. Stay. Adeste Filiolae Lucis.[160]

[D] They all came in again and answered, "Adsumus Ô tu qui ante faciem DEI stas."[161]

---

[158] "Write what you see."

[159] "We are able to do many things in the heavens."

[160] "Come, Little Daughters of Light."

[161] "We are here, O you who stand before the face of GOD."

[M] Hijs nosteris benefacite."[162]

[D] They answered all, "Factum erit."[163]

[M] Valete. Et dixit Dominus. Venite Filij Lucis. Venite in Tabernaculo meo. Venite inquam nam nomen meum exaltatum est.[164]

[D] Then came in 7 young men all with bright countenance, white apparel with white silk upon their heads, pendant behind as the women had.

One of them had a round purified piece or ball of gold in his hand.

One other had a ball of silver in his hand.

The third a ball of copper.

The fourth a ball of tin in his hand.

The fifth had a ball of iron.

The sixth had a round thing of quicksilver, tossing it between his two hands.

The last had a ball of lead.

They were all appareled of one sort.

[M] Quamvis in uno generantur tempore tamen unum sunt.[165]

[D] He that had the gold ball had a round tablet of gold on his breast and on it written a great I.

Then he with the silver ball came he forth with a golden tablet on his breast likewise, and on it written Ih.

---

[162] "Do favors for these ones of ours."

[163] "It will be done."

[164] "Farewell. And the Lord said, Come, Sons of Light. Come in my tent. Come, I say, for my name is exalted."

[165] "Although they are begotten at one time, nevertheless they are one thing."

He with the copper ball had in his tablet Ilr.

He with the tin ball had in his tablet Dmal.

He with the iron ball had in his tablet Heeoa and so went aside.

He with the mercury ball had written Beigia.

The young man with the leaden ball had Stimcul.

[M] Facite pro illis cum tempus erit.[166]

[D] All answered, "Volumus."[167]

[M] Magna est gloria Dei inter vos. Erit semper. Halleluyah. Valete.[168]

[D] They made curtsy and went their way, mounting up to heaven.

[M] Dixit Deus, Memor esto nominis mei. Vos autem immemores estis.[169]

I speak to you.

[D] Hereupon we prayed.

[M] Venite. Venite. Venite. Filiae Filiarum Lucis. Venite.

Qui habebitus filias venite nunc et semper.

Dixit Deus, Creavi Angelos meas qui destruent Filas Terra.[170]

---

166. "Act on their behalf when it is time."

167. "We are willing."

168. "The glory of God is great among you. It will be always. Hallelujah. Farewell."

169. "God said, Let him be mindful of my name. But you are forgetful."

170. "Come. Come. Come, Daughters of the Daughters of Light. Come. You who will have daughters, come now and always. God said, 'I created my Angels who will destroy the Daughters on Earth.'"

[D] "Adsumus,"[171] said 7 little wenches which came in. They were covered with white silk robes and with white about their head and pendant down behind, very long.

[M] Ubi faustis vos.[172]

[D] They answered: "In terris cum sanctis et in caelis cum glorificatis."[173]

[D] These spoke not so plain as the former did, but as though they had an impediment in their tongue.

They had every one somewhat in their hands, but my scryer could not judge what things they were.

[M] Non adhuc cognoscetur Mysterion hoc.[174]

[D] Each had foursquare tablets on their bosoms as if they were of white ivory.
The first showed on her tablet a great S.

The second Ab.

The third Ath.

The fourth Ized.

The fifth Ekiei

The sixth Madimi.

The seventh Esemeli.

---

[171] "We are here."

[172] "Where have you been favorable?"

[173] "On the lands with the holy and in the heavens with the glorified."

[174] "This Mystery will not yet be known."

[M] Quod istis facietis? Erimus cum illis in omnibus operibus illorum.[175]

[D] They answered.

[M] Valete.[176]

[D] They answered, "Valeas et tu Magnus, O in Caelis."[177] And so they went away.

[M] Orate.[178]

[D] We prayed.

[M] Et misit filios filiorum edocentes Israel.

Dixit Dominus, Venite ad vocem meam.[179]

[D] "Adsumus,"[180] said 7 little children which came in like boys covered all with purple with hanging sleeves like priests' or scholars' gown sleeves; their heads attired all (after the former manner) with purple silk.

[D] Quid factum est inter-filios hominum? "Male vivant," said they, "Nec habemus locum cum illis tanta est illoram Iniustitia. Veh mundo scandalis, vel scandalizantibus, vel illis quibus nos non summus.[181]

[D] These had tablets (on their breasts), three-cornered, and seemed to be very green and in them, letters.

[175] "What will you do for them? We will be with them in all their works."

[176] "Farewell."

[177] "Farewell to you also, great one, O you in the Heavens."

[178] "Pray."

[179] "And he sent the sons of the sons, teaching Israel well. The Lord said, Come to my voice."

[180] "We are here."

[181] "What has happened among the sons of men? They live wickedly (said they). And we do not have a place with them, so great is their injustice. Woe to the world for its temptations, or to the tempters, or to them for whom we are not."

The first had two letters in one, thus, of E L.

The first El. He said, "Nec nomine meo timet Mundus.[182]

The second An. "Nullus videbit faciem meam."[183]

The third Ave. "Non est virgo sup terram, cui dicam."[184] (D — And pointed to his tablet, wherein that word Ave was written.)

The fourth Liba. "Tanta est infirmitas sanctitudinus Dei. Benefacientes decesserunt ab illo."[185]

The fifth Rocle. "Opera manuum illorum sunt vana. Nemo autem videbit me."[186]

The sixth showed his Tablet and said, "Ecce—Hagonel—Qui adhuc sancti sunt cum illos vivo."[187]

The seventh had on his tablet Ilemese. "Hij imitaverunt doctrinum meas. In me Omnis sita est Doctrina."[188]

I thought my scryer had misheard this word "imitaverunt" for "Imitati sunt,"[189] and Michael smiled and seemed to laugh and said, "Non curat numerum Lupus,"[190] and further he said, "Ne minimam detrahet a virtute, virtutem."[191]

[M] Estote cum illis. Estote (inquam cum istis). Estote (inquam) mecum.

[182] "And the World is not fearful at my name."

[183] "No man will see my face."

[184] "There is not a virgin upon the earth, to whom I may speak."

[185] "So great is the weakness of the sanctity of God. Those who do good have ceased from it."

[186] "The works of their hands are vain. But no one will see me."

[187] "Behold—Hagonel—I live with them who are holy till now."

[188] "These ones have copied my teaching. In me is every teaching found."

[189] "Have copied," in either case. It appears to be a question of grammar.

[190] "The Wolf does not worry about number."

[191] "That the slightest virtue will not be taken away from virtue."

Valete.[192]

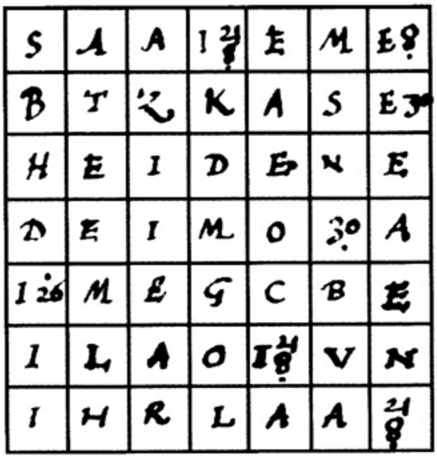
[D] So they went, making reverence, and went up to heaven.

[M] Dictum est hoc tempore.[193] Note this in thy tables. Dost thou understand it? Look if thou can.

[D] He said to Uriel, "It is thy part to interpret these things."

[U] Omnis Intelligentia est a Domino.[194]

[M] Et eius Nomen est Halleluyah.[195] Compose a table divided into 7 parts, square.



S	A	A	I $^{21}_{8}$	E	M	E ^{8}
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E ^{30}
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	^{30}	A
I ^{26}	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I $^{21}_{8}$	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	$^{21}_{8}$

[U] Those seven names which proceed from the left hand to the right are the Names of God, not known to the Angels: neither can be spoken or read of man. Prove if thou canst read them.

Beatus est qui secrete nomina sua conservat.[196]

[192] "Let them be with those ones. Let them be (I say with those ones). Let them me (I say) with me. Farewell."

[193] "It has been spoken at this time."

[194] "All Understanding is from the Lord."

[195] "And his Name is Hallelujah."

[196] "Blessed is he who preserves his names in secret."

These names bring forth 7 angels. The 7 Angels and Governors in the heavens next unto us, which stand always before the face of God.

Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus est ille Deus noster.[197]

Every letter of the Angels' names brings forth 7 daughters. Every daughter brings forth her daughter, which is 7. Every daughter, her daughter brings forth a son. Every son in him left is 7. Every son hath his son, and his son is 7.

Let us praise the God of seven which was and is and shall live forever.

Vox Domini in Fortitudine.
Vox Domini in Decore.
Vox Domini revelat secreta.
In templo eius, laudemus nomen eius El. Halleluyah.[198]

See if thou canst now understand this table.

The daughters proceed from the angle on the right hand, cleaving the middle, where their generation ceases.
The sons from the left hand to the right to the middle, so proceeding where their number ends in one center. The rest, thou may (by this note) understand.

[D] Note this manner of center accounted.[199]

[D] Then, Michael, he stroke over us with his sword and the flame of fire issued out.

[M] Look to the corner on the right hand, being the uppermost where thou shalt find 8.

197. "Holy, Holy, Holy is he our God."

198. "The voice of the Lord in Courage. The voice of the Lord in Beauty. The voice of the Lord reveals secrets. In his temple, let us praise his name El. Halleluyah."

199. Marginal note.

Refer thine eye to the upper number and the letter above it. But the number must be found underneath, because the prick so notes.

[D] Note of the numbers with pricks, signifying letters.[200]

Then proceed to the names of the daughters in the Table and thou shalt see that it is the first name of them. This shall teach thee.

[D] Looking now into my first and greatest circle for 8, I find it with l over it. I take this to be the first daughter.

[U] You must in this square table set E by the 8 and write them composedly in one letter, thus.
Nomem Domini vivit in aeternum.[201]

Give over for half an hour and thou shalt be fully instructed.

[D] I did so and after half an hour coming to the stone I was willed to make a new square table of 7 and to write and note as is following:

S A A I E M E8 — Vivit in caelis.[202]
B T Z K A S E30 — Deus noster.[203]
H E I D E N E — Dux noster.[204]
D E I M O 30 A — Hic est.[205]
I26 M E G C B E — Lux in aternum.[206]
I L A O I V N — Finis est.[207]
I H R L A A 21/8 — Vera est haec tabula.[208]

[200] Marginal note.

[201] "The name of the Lord lives forever."

[202] "He lives in the heavens."

[203] "Our God."

[204] "Our leader."

[205] "He is here."

[206] "Light forever."

[207] "He is the end."

[208] "This table is true."

Vera est heac tabula partim nobis cognita et partim omnibus incognita. Vide iam.[209]

The 30 by E in the second place in the upper right corner serves not in the consideration of the first daughters but for another purpose.

The 26 by I serves for another purpose, but not for this daughter's daughter.

The 21 is E and 8 with the prick under it is l, which together makes "El," or they compound as it were one letter, "El."

The names in the great seal must follow the orthography of this Table.

Virtus vobiscum est. Orate.[210]

[D] We prayed.

Then there appeared SAAI (21/8) M (El). Here is an E comprehended in L.

[U] Read now the table. Angeli Lucis Dei nostri. Et posuit angelos illius in medio illorum.[211]

In the table are the names of 7 Angels. The first, Zabathiel, beginning in the left uppermost corner taking the corner letter first and then that on the right hand above; and then that under the first and then the third from the fourth in the upper row; and then cornerwise down toward the left hand; and then to the fourth letter from the first in the upper row where there is I with 21/8, which makes "el." So have you Zabathiel.

Go forward.

[D] So I find next Zedekieil.

---

[209] "This table is true, partly known to us and partly unknown to all. See now."

[210] "Virtue is with you. Pray."

[211] "Angels of the Light of our God. And he placed his angels in the middle of those."

[U] This I in the last syllable augments the true sound of it.[212]

[D] Then next I find Madimiel. [U] It is so.
[D] Then Semeliel. [U] It is true.
[D] Then Nogahel. [U] It is so.
[D] Then Corabiel. [U] It is so.
[D] Then Levanael. [U] It is so.

[D] This name Corabiel you may find in Elementis Magicus, by Peter De Abano, in the Considerationis die Luna.[213]

[U] Write these names in the Great Seal next under the 7 names which thou wrote last. Videlicet El, An Ave, etc., distinctly in great letters.

[U] Make the E and L of Zabathiel in one letter compounded, thus ZABATHI(EL). In this, so fashion your E and L, and this name must be distributed in his letters into 7 sides of that innermost Heptagonum. For the other 7 will teach you to dispose of them. You must make for "IEL" (in this name only) I with the 21/8 annexed. So have you just 7 places.

The next five names thou shalt dispose in the five exterior angles of the Pentacle, every angle containing one whole name. So the first letters of these five names (in capital letters) within the five acute internal angles of the Pentacle, and the rest of each name following circularly from his capital letter, but in the five exterior obtuse angles of the pentacle.

Set Z of Zedekieil within the angle which stands up toward the beginning of the greatest circle, and so proceed toward thy right hand.

In the middle now of thy Pentacle make a cross like a crucifix and write the last of those 7 names, Levanael, thus.

Vidit Deus, opus suum esse bonum et cessavit a labore suo. Factum est.[214]

[212] The name should be "Zedekiel," but here Uriel explains the additional letter.—Ed.

[213] Marginal note. Corabiel is, however, related to Mercury, and not the moon.—Ed.

[214] "God saw that his work was good, and he ceased from his labor. It is done."

[D] Michael stood up and said, "The eternal blessing of God the Father, the merciful goodness of Christ his Son, the unspeakable dignity of God the Holy Ghost bless you, preserve you, and multiply your doings in his honor and glory."

[U] Amen. These Angels are the angels of the 7 circles of Heaven, governing the lights of the seven circles. Blessed be God in us, and by us, which stand continually before the presence of God for ever.

Dixi.[215]

[D] When may we be so bold as to require your help again?

[M] When so ever you will. We are ready. Farewell.

[D] Sit nomen Domini benedictum, ex hoc nunc et usque in secula seculorum: Amen.[216]

Anno 1582. March 21. At Mortlake, by Richmond.

---

[215] "I have spoken."

[216] "May the name of the Lord be blessed, from this time now and continuously forever and ever: Amen."

APPENDIX B

THE SWORN BOOK OF HONORIUS

IT is generally accepted that John Dee had access to at least one version of the grimoire known as The Sworn Book of Honorius, and that this work served as the starting point for his own investigation and construction of the Sigillum Dei. In his diary entry for March 10, 1582, Dee notes that the angels "have no respect of colours" with regard to the construction of the Sigillum Dei. Although not explicitly mentioned, there seems little doubt that the remark refers to the description of the seal that is given in that grimoire, where each of its heptagonal bands is assigned a different color.

Dee was reliant on manuscript versions of The Sworn Book of Honorius, one of which has been identified as the Latin manuscript now preserved in the British Library under the designation Sloane MS 313.[1] An English translation of the relevant section of the Latin version of the text, based on the critical edition prepared by Gösta Hedegård, follows.[2]

Concerning the composition of the seal of the living and true God:

First make one circle whose diameter should be of three fingers, on account of the three nails of the Lord, or five, on account of his five wounds, or seven, on account of the seven sacraments, or nine, on account of the nine orders of angels; but in general it is usually of five fingers.

Then, below that circle make another circle, distant from the first by two grains of barley, on account of the two tablets of Moses, or distant from the first by three grains, on account of the trinity of persons.

Then, below those two circles in the upper part, which is called the south angle, make one cross whose leg should slightly penetrate the inner circle.

Then, from the right side of the cross write "h"— breathing out— then "t," then "o," then "e x o r a b a l a y q c i y s t a l g a a o n o s u l a r i t e k s p f y o m o m a n a r e m i a r e l a t e d a c o n o n a o y l e y o t."

[1] The identification of the manuscript as having once been in Dee's possession is made in Julian Roberts and Andrew G. Watson, John Dee's Library Catalogue: p. 168.

[2] The translation is from the Latin text as reconstructed by Gösta Hedegård, which is based largely on the manuscripts Sloane MS 313, MS 3854, and MS 3885. The relevant section is in Gösta Hedegård. Liber Iuratus Honorii: pp. 67 – 71.

And these letters should be equally distant, and should surround the circle with that series which was named before, and in this way the great name of the Lord, the "Shemhamphorasch" of seventy-two letters, will be completed.

When this is done, in the middle of the circles, namely in the center, make one pentagram of this sort ⛤, in the middle of which should be the sign "tau" of this sort: τ, and above this sign write the name of God "El" and below, another name of God, namely "Ely," in this way. $\overset{\text{El}}{\underset{\text{Ely}}{\tau}}$

Then, below the upper angle of the pentagram, write these two letters: "l," "x," and below the other angle on the right, these two: "a," "l," and in the other after that, these two: "l," "a," and in the other after that: "l," "c," and in the other after that: "u," "m."

Then, around the pentagram, make one heptagon, of which the upper side after its middle should touch the upper angle of the pentagram, where "l," "x," was written.

And on the same side of the heptagon write this name of the holy angel, which is Casziel [Cassiel], and on the other side on the right, this name of another holy angel, which is Satquiel [Tzadkiel], then in the other, Samael, and in the other, Raphael, after that Anael, after that Michael, after that Gabriel, and in this way the seven sides of the heptagon will be filled.

Then around this aforementioned heptagon, make another heptagon not as the first was made but in this way, so that one side of this will intersect the next side of the same one.

Then, make another heptagon such as the first one was, whose seven angles should touch the seven angles of the second heptagon, which appears to be double. This heptagon, however, should be enclosed under the aforementioned second one.

One side of the second heptagon will proceed by going over and another by going under, but the side following the first angle will proceed by going under, and those which follow will be one or the other in the series of going over and going under.

Then, in every angle of the second heptagon, one cross should be painted.

Then, in that side of the second heptagon which crosses from the farthest angle of the same to the second angle of the same, on the same side which is above Casziel, the syllables of a certain holy name of God should be written.

In this way, so that this syllable "la" is written in that place of the aforementioned side which is above the first syllable of Casziel.

And this syllable "ya" in that place of the the same side, which is above the last syllable of the same Casziel.

And this syllable "ly" in that place of the same side, which is between the side intersecting the aforementioned side and the cross of the second angle of the same.

Then, on that side which stretches from the first angle of the same second heptagon to the third angle of the same, should be written this holy name of God "Narath."

In this way, so that this syllable "na" is written in that place of the same side which is above the first syllable of Satquiel [Tzadkiel].

And this syllable "ra" in that place of the same side which is above the last syllable of the same, and these two letters: "t," "h" in that place which is on the same side between the side intersecting itself and the third cross.

Then, in that side of the same second heptagon, which reaches from the third angle of the same to the fourth angle of the same, should be written this holy name of the creator, which is called "Libarre."

In this way, so that this syllable "ly" is written above the first syllable of Raphael, and this syllable "bar" above the last syllable of the same.

And this syllable "re" in that place of the same side, which is between the side intersecting itself and the fifth angle of the same second heptagon.

Then, on that side of the same second heptagon which is farthest from fifth cross, should be written this other holy name of the creator: "Libares."

In this way, so that this syllable "ly" is written in that place of the side which is above the first syllable of "Michael" itself.

And this syllable "ba" in that place of the side, which is above the last syllable of the same.

And this syllable "res" in that place of the same side, which is between the side intersecting itself and the farthest cross.

Then, on that side of the same second heptagon which goes from the second angle of the same second heptagon to the fourth, should be written this other holy name "Lialg," with a conjunction.

In this way, so that the conjunction is written in that place of the same side which is above the first syllable of Samael.

And this syllable "ly" in that place of the same side which is above the last syllable of the same.

And this syllable "alg" in that place of the same side, which is between the side intersecting itself and the fourth cross.

But be careful that the conjunction should be written in this way: [stylized A] with the inscription intersecting, on account of the fear of God, which separates an evil will.

Then, on that side of the same heptagon reaching from the fourth cross to the sixth, should be written this other holy name of God: "Ueham."

In this way, so that this syllable "ue" is written in that place of the same side, which is above the first syllable of "Anael," and this letter "h" above the last syllable.

And this syllable "am" in that place of the same side, which is between the side intersecting itself and the sixth cross.

Then, on that side which reaches from the sixth angle of the same second heptagon to the first angle, should be written this other holy name of God "Yalgal."

In this way, so that this letter "y" is written in that place of the same side, which is above the first syllable of "Gabriel."

And this syllable "al" above the last, and this syllable "gal" in that place of the same side which is between the side intersecting itself and the first cross.

Then, in the middle of the first side and the third heptagon, on the right should be written "vos" and on the following side of the same third heptagon, on the right this name "Duynas."

And on the other "Gyram," and on the other "Gram," and on the other "Aysaram," and on the other "Alpha," and on the other Ω.

Then, in that little space which is under the first angle of the second and third heptagons, should be written this name of God: "El."

And in that little space, which is on the right under the angles of the second and third heptagons, under the second cross, this name "On" and in that other little space under the third across, again this name "El."

And in the other under the forth cross again "On," and in the other under the fifth cross again "El," and in the other under the sixth cross again "On," and in the other under the seventh cross Ω.

Then, in that little space which is enclosed between the first angle of the second heptagon and the second angle of the same and the first side of the third heptagon and the part of the circle touching those angles, should be painted one cross in the middle, that is to say, of that space.

And in the upper area of the cross, on the left, should be written this letter "a," and above the second area of the cross, on the right, this letter "g."

And under the lower area, on the right, should be written this other letter "a," and under the fourth area, this other letter "l."

Then, in that little space which follows on the right in the middle should be written this name "Ely," and in the other this name "Eloy," and in the other "Christus," and in the other "Sother," and in the other "Adonay," and in the other "Saday."

Then, know that in models generally the pentagram is made of red with yellow coloring in the spaces, and the first heptagon of blue, the second of yellow, the third of purple, and the circle of black.

And the space between the circles, where the name "Shemhamphorasch" is, is colored yellow. All the other spaces have to be colored green.

But in workings it ought to be made another way, because it is formed from the blood of a mole or turtledove or hoopoe or bat, or all of them, and on virgin parchment of calfskin or foal's skin or deerskin, and in this way the sigil of God is completed.

And through this holy and sacred seal, when it has been consecrated, you will be able to do workings which are mentioned hereafter in this sacred book.

Now the method of consecrating this sacred sigil should be such as follows.

With the Lord inspiring him, Solomon said, "There is one single God, one faith, one virtue." Which the Lord wanted to be revealed and spread to men in such a way.

The angel Samael said to Solomon, "You will give this to the people of Israel, who will similarly present it to others as well." So it pleased the creator, and the Lord orders that it be consecrated in such a way.

First, the worker should be clean, not polluted, and should do it with devotion, not with trickery. He should neither eat not drink until the work has been completed, and the blood, with which it will be written, should first be blessed, as is described hereafter.

Then, this sigil should be fumigated with amber, musk, aloe, white and red labdanum, mastic, olibanum, pearls and frankincense, with invocation and prayer to the Lord, as will be taught hereafter regarding the divine vision.

Next, when invoking the angels, as will be mentioned below as well, the prayer will nevertheless be changed in the following way.

"That you, Lord, through the annunciation, conception," and the rest, "See fit to bless and consecrate this, your most hallowed name and sigil.

"That through it, with you as intermediary, I or such person N may be able to conquer the heavenly powers, airy and earthly, with the infernal ones, to subdue, to invoke, to transmute, to conjure, to control, to raise up, to gather together, to disperse, to bind, and to render them harmless;

"to calm men, and from them to pleasantly have one's requests to pacify enemies, to separate the pacified, to keep the healthy in health or to make them sick, and to cure the sick.

"To guard good men from evil ones, and to distinguish and know them, to escape every bodily danger, to make informers quiet in satisfaction, to gain victory in all things.

"To destroy bodily sins and to drive away, conquer and avoid spiritual sins, to increase wealth in goods, and on the day of judgment, to appear on your right together with your holy and chosen ones, be able to know your majesty."

And then, he should set it outside his house at night under the clear sky. Then you should have new gloves made without whitening, in which no one ever has placed his hand, in which the sigil should be sealed.

And in this way this most sacred sigil will be completed, of which the first heptagon designates the seven orders, the second designates the seven double junctures, the third designates the seven sacraments.

APPENDIX C

THE ENOCHIAN ALPHABET

THE Enochian Alphabet, said to be the script for the "language of the angels," is set out by Dee in the fifth of The Five Books of Mystery. It comprises twenty-one rather odd looking letters that do not appear to mimic the alphabet of any known language. (Note that twenty-one is a multiple of seven, once more drawing our attention to a possible planetary alignment.) The actual term "Enochian" was not used by either Dee or Kelley, but is based on their contention that the Biblical Patriarch Enoch was the last human being before them to have been familiar with the language it is used to express. Not surprisingly Dee and Kelley's claim that the alphabet was dictated to them in the course of their scrying sessions has caused some contention, with skeptics suggesting that it, along with the rest of their system, was no more than a fabrication contrived by one or both of the men.

The Enochian Alphabet

Dee was obviously a man of great learning, well versed in a number of languages including Latin, and of course Greek, the language of the Gospels of the New Testament. While the extent of his fluency in Greek is unknown, Dee certainly had a sufficient understanding of the language to be able to comfortably incorporate Greek letters into his English writings, which he did as a way of obscuring their meaning from others, including his not-necessarily-trustworthy associate Edward Kelley. When encoding his writings thus, Dee mostly transliterated rather than translated words, so that an English word would be spelled out in Greek letters ("dog" might therefore appear as "ΔΟΓ"). He also used the Greek letter delta (Δ) as his mark or signature, indicative of "D" (phonetically, "Dee"). It seems to me that his familiarity with the Greek language, rather than angelic communication, may well have provided a basis for the construction of the Enochian alphabet, as I will outline in the text and tables that follow.

The Greek alphabet can be tabulated as follows:

CHARACTER	LETTER	NUMBER	ENGLISH
Α	Alpha	1	A
Β	Beta	2	B
Γ	Gamma	3	G
Δ	Delta	4	D
Ε	Epsilon	5	E
F	Digamma	6	W
Ζ	Zeta	7	Z
Η	Eta	8	H
Θ	Theta	9	Th
Ι	Iota	10	I
Κ	Kappa	20	K (C)
Λ	Lambda	30	L
Μ	Mu	40	M
Ν	Nu	50	N
Ξ	Xi	60	X
Ο	Omicron	70	O
Π	Pi	80	P
Q	Qoppa	90	Q
Ρ	Rho	100	R
Σ	Sigma	200	S
Τ	Tau	300	T
Υ	Upsilon	400	U
Φ	Phi	500	Ph
Χ	Chi	600	Ch
Ψ	Psi	700	Ps
Ω	Omega	800	O

To build a bridge to the Enochian language one starts by following the pattern that Dee established in his English to Greek transliterations of eliminating all the Greek letters that do not have a direct, single-letter English equivalent. Therefore all the "compound letters," that is: theta, phi, chi, and psi, are removed from the table. This action seems to be based solely on the absence of any equivalent (single) English letters to the Greek; there is no apparent linguistic necessity to do so, nor do the letters have any other relevant attribute or shape in common.

CHARACTER	LETTER	NUMBER	ENGLISH
Α	Alpha	1	A
Β	Beta	2	B
Γ	Gamma	3	G
Δ	Delta	4	D
Ε	Epsilon	5	E
F	Digamma	6	W
Ζ	Zeta	7	Z
Η	Eta	8	H
Ι	Iota	10	I
Κ	Kappa	20	K (C)
Λ	Lambda	30	L
Μ	Mu	40	M
Ν	Nu	50	N
Ξ	Xi	60	X
Ο	Omicron	70	O
Π	Pi	80	P
Ϙ	Qoppa	90	Q
Ρ	Rho	100	R
Σ	Sigma	200	S
Τ	Tau	300	T
Υ	Upsilon	400	U
Ω	Omega	800	O

Of the letters we started with, only twenty-two remain. We have one letter more than the twenty-one of the Enochian at this point, but the letter "O" is represented as both omicron and omega. Despite the inclination to include the suitably apocalyptic Alpha-Omega combination, we remove the final occurrence to arrive at the same number of Enochian letters.

We must also identify a subtle case of mistaken identity between the letter Xi and the letter Chi in order to align the two character sets fully. While their characters differ considerably, the Chi having a more Anglo-centric "X" shape, I believe there was an accidental rearrangement of the two such that the letter Chi was moved into the position of the letter Xi. This arrangement is shown below, with the letter Chi in the position of Xi, represented (as it should be) by the Greek character resembling the English letter "X."

CHARACTER	LETTER	NUMBER	ENGLISH
A	Alpha	1	A
B	Beta	2	B
Γ	Gamma	3	G
Δ	Delta	4	D
E	Epsilon	5	E
F	Digamma	6	W
Z	Zeta	7	Z
H	Eta	8	H
I	Iota	10	I
K	Kappa	20	K (C)
Λ	Lambda	30	L
M	Mu	40	M
N	Nu	50	N
X	Chi	60	X
O	Omicron	70	O
Π	Pi	80	P
Q	Qoppa	90	Q
P	Rho	100	R
Σ	Sigma	200	S
T	Tau	300	T
Y	Upsilon	400	U
Ω	Omega	800	O

The next step in the construction of the Enochian alphabet was to plot a connection between the Enochian characters and the Greek. This enabled Dee to further obscure his "secret writing" by adding a functional but completely foreign alphabet. Dee appears to have done this by observing similarities between the Greek and Latin alphabets; either by direct transliteration or by a shape suggestive association. In this manner the "F"-shaped digamma correlated to the letter "F," the "H"-shaped eta correlated to the letter "H," and so on. Thus, Dee's Enochian alphabet was the culmination of a two-phase approach: first the transliteration of English letters into Greek, and then the conversion of the Greek letters into their Enochian equivalents. The final result is given in the table here:

Greek	Letter	Number	English	Enochian	Letter
A	Alpha	1	A		Un
B	Beta	2	B		Pa
Γ	Gamma	3	G		Ged
Δ	Delta	4	D		Gal
E	Epsilon	5	E		Graf
F	Digamma	6	F		Or
Z	Zeta	7	Z		Ceph
H	Eta	8	H		Na
I	Iota	10	I		Gon
K	Kappa	20	K (C)		Veh
Λ	Lambda	30	L		Ur
M	Mu	40	M		Tal
N	Nu	50	N		Drux
X	Chi	60	X		Pal
O	Omicron	70	O		Med
Π	Pi	80	P		Mals
Q	Qoppa	90	Q		Ger
P	Rho	100	R		Don
Σ	Sigma	200	S		Fam
T	Tau	300	T		Gisg
Y	Upsilon	400	U		Van

The teachings of the now-ubiquitous Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn also assigned a sequence of numbers to the letters of the Enochian alphabet. The number nine is conspicuous by its absence, its omission occasioned by the lack of an Enochian equivalent of the Greek letter theta. Whether S. L. MacGregor Mathers and his brethren in the Order used the same logical process as outlined here to determine the numerical attributes of the Enochian alphabet is of course unknown.

Naturally the forgoing analysis will be rejected by those who persist in adhering to the notion that the Enochian alphabet was received by direct angelic communication. However, given Dee's acknowledged use of the Greek language to encode his personal writings, and that the Enochian alphabet itself is easily reconstructed by transliterating across a somewhat lenient intersection of English and Greek, it must be said that the premise of an angelic origin for the language appears truly unlikely.

Enochian Magic
A Practical Manual

The Angelic Language Revealed

HERMETIC MAGIC FOR EVERYONE

Here is . . . the Enochian Magic as taught by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, but in a complete and easy-to-read textbook that can be used by the magical novice.

Here is . . . a dictionary of Enochian words listed in order of gematria value to facilitate the magical process.

Here is . . . basic information of correspondence and original ideas to also please the seasoned magician.

In late sixteenth century England Dr. John Dee, Astrologer Royal to Queen Elizabeth I, began working with his assistant Edward Kelly, setting down a magical alphabet and system that was presented to him by extraterrestrial intelligences. Communication was by "scrying", or crystal-gazing. The system was unique. It was embellished by Dee's own Qabalistic speculations and by further magical material dictated by the spirits. The Enochian alphabet is unrelated to any previous lettering system;totally dissimilar to Latin, Greek, Hebrew and most magical alphabets. It is almost a series of Qabalistic pictographs meant to be imagined visually and not commonly inscribed. The Enochian language has a unique grammar and syntax structure. Over the years since its introduction, it has come to be regarded as a "classic" of magical working. It was adopted and refined by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and, later, by Aleister Crowley.

In this book you are led carefully along the path from "A brief history of the Enochian Magical System", through "How to speak Enochian", "How to Invoke", "The Calls", "Egyptian Deities" and "Chief Hazards" to "How to visit the Aethyrs in Spirit Vision (Astral Projection)". Not a step is missed; not a necessary instruction forgotten.

We are "more than human. The human is but one expression of the divine, albeit an enormously important one. Every magician who has experienced the higher Aethyrs is aware of the awesome power of the magically directed will. S/he is also fully aware of the karmic consequences of his thoughts and actions". So says the author. "Any attempt to appeal to the Enochian deities (even the demons) with selfish intent will produce a corresponding karmic effect. Every student of magic must take this warning seriously if he is to progress."

There are, then, warnings. And this is as it should be, for you must set foot upon the path with as true a map of the way ahead as it is possible to obtain. And this book is such a map. Take it and move forward.

THE OBJECTIVE OF THIS MANUAL

This manual is an attempt to eliminate the unnecessary complexity of the Enochian magical system while combining its numerous elements into a single source. The system described here borrows heavily from both the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley. The earnest student is advised to study THE GOLDEN DAWN by Israel Regardie, especially Volume IV. Also recommended are Crowley's THE VISION AND THE VOICE and LIBER LXXXIX VEL CHANOKH, both of which can be found in GEMS OF THE EQUINOX by Israel Regardie.

This manual contains the complete theory behind the system, with explanations and tabulated data, together with step-by-step instructions and detailed examples for the serious student. Charts and tables are provided to summarize data which are unavailable elsewhere. Any student willing to spend time and effort will have a corresponding degree of success. The truly amazing thing about this system is that it really does work.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE ENOCHIAN MAGICAL SYSTEM

As far as anyone knows, the magical system using Enochian language to describe the four quadrants and thirty Aethyrs originated with John Dee and Edward Kelly.

John Dee was born in England in 1527 in the small village of Mortlake on the Thames, just outside of London. He entered college at the age of 15. He later journeyed abroad and became proficient in navigation. At one point he was imprisoned for treason against Queen Mary because he had cast a horoscope for her, even though it was at her request. He was finally cleared of the charge and released, but the experience itself was one he never really got over.

At his family's property in Mortlake, he accumulated a tremendous library which soon became a center for science and learning. Dee himself was considered an authority on mathematics, navigation, astronomy and optics, and was appointed Astrologer Royal to Elizabeth I. He is said to have married in 1574, but his wife's name is not known and she died the following year.

It was in 1581 that Dee began crystal-gazing. By then he had a new wife, Jane Fromond, a lady-in-waiting at Elizabeth's court. He was intensely interested in the art of crystallomancy, but was himself unable to succeed at it. He was not a medium, much to his regret. However, he found someone else who was and who was willing to help him in his studies. His name was Edward Talbott; a rogue who, for reasons unknown, changed his name to Kelly after meeting Dee. Although most historians credit Dee with intelligence, curiosity, and the honest kindness that often accompanies men of genius, few paint Kelly as anything but an illiterate swindler whose life of crime evidenced little humanity or concern for humanity. Perhaps the only really positive thing that can be said for Kelly is that he was in fact a very good scryer. His mediumship ability was needed by Dee who simply overlooked, or pardoned, his other less promising characteristics. Whatever the true situation, they became friends and together produced a staggering amount of original work in the fields of occultism and magic.

By using a collection of different "glasses", or crystals, and special "shew-stones," Kelly was able to communicate with extraterrestrial intelligences. Dee directed the ceremonies, observed the proceedings, and carefully wrote down the results. It was in this way that the entire magical system, which is called Enochian, originated. The letters of the Enochian alphabet, or angelic language, were written in rows and columns on large tablets. Magical seals and talismans were devised with Enochian letters on them. The thirty "Aethyrs", or planes, were described. The names of the angelic hierarchies of the universe were carefully recorded.

In 1583, Dee and Kelly toured Europe while practicing their Qabalah and scrying. When they returned to England in 1587, things had changed. A mob had looted Dee's house and partially destroyed his library. He was without money and his old friends were either dead or out of power. The ascension of King James I, in 1603, who feared magic and had no love for Dee, assured his ultimate downfall. He died penniless in 1608.

As for Kelly, he was scrying in the seventh Aethyr one day, when a message came to him that terrified him completely. In fact, he is said to have sworn to scry no more from that fateful day. In an overwhelming fit of desperation, he robbed Dee of what little money he had left, helped Dee's wife pack her bags, and together they left Dee never to return. He is said to have ended his days in a return to crime. The message that so frightened Kelly and brought an end to Enochian Magic was the following:

> "I am the daughter of Fortitude and ravished every hour from my youth. For behold, I am Understanding, > and science dwelleth in me; and the heavens oppress me. They cover and desire me with infinite appetite; for none that are earthly have embraced me, for I am shadowed with the Circle of the Stars, and covered with the morning clouds. My feet are swifter than the winds, and my hands are sweeter than the morning dew. My garments are from the beginning, and my dwelling place is in myself. The Lion knoweth not where I walk, neither do the beasts of the field understand me. I am deflowered, yet a virgin; I sanctify and am not sanctified. Happy is he that embraceth me: for in the night season I am sweet, and in the day full of pleasure. My company is a harmony of many symbols, and my lips sweeter than health itself. I am a harlot for such as ravish me, and a virgin with such as know me not. Purge your streets, O ye sons of men, and wash your houses clean; make yourselves holy, and put on righteousness. Cast out your old strumpets, and burn their clothes and then I will bring forth children unto you and they shall be the Sons of Comfort in the Age that is to come."

Nothing more was known of this work of Dee and Kelly until late in nineteenth century England. There it was taken up by a mysterious and highly secret brotherhood of Adepts and would-be Adepts who called themselves the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Led by three imaginative magicians, S.L. Mathers, W. Wynn Westcott, and A.F.A. Woodford, the Order adopted the system of Enochian Magic created by Dee and Kelly. Members of the Golden Dawn invoked the spirits of the quadrants and traveled in their astral and mental bodies (called "traveling in the Spirit Vision") through the Aethyrs. Like Dee, they maintained meticulous records of their experiences and approached the Enochian magical system with a scientific attitude. But they went even farther than Dee. They related the Enochian with the Qabalah (a Hebrew system of magic) and with the Tarot (a deck of 72 cards said to be the "Book of Thoth"—the god Thoth was the Egyptian god of wisdom and magic). They also devised a system of geomancy and carefully related it to Enochian letters.

The system rested in the secrecy of the Golden Dawn until one of its members published his version of it and then left that Order to form his own. His name was Aleister Crowley and he was perhaps the first since Kelly to actually visit each of the Aethyrs and confront the presiding spirits and guardians. In fact, Crowley claimed to have been Kelly in a past life. This was the reason he gave for his uncanny ability to scry into these mysterious Aethyrs (see below—How the Magic Works: The Planes) using a shew-stone very much like Kelly did. His experiences were recorded in a book called THE VISION AND THE VOICE, which is written in such obscure symbolism and technical language that few today can understand it. Crowley, whose colorful life suggests elements of the rogue, was an amazing psychic and a prolific writer and poet. He advanced the Enochian system by revealing those planetary and numerical correspondences which make Enochian gematria possible. Unfortunately, the published works of Crowley and the Golden Dawn differ slightly in spellings and in certain correspondences. The student is free to judge for himself which interpretation to use.

The Enochian Alphabet.

John Dee and Edward Kelly devised a language so powerful, they had to spell names backwards in order to avoid conjuring unwanted demons. A simple pronouncement of a demon's name in this new language, they believed, would be sufficient to bring that demon forth into manifestation. They called this language Enochian after the patriarch Enoch, who is said to have "walked with God". The name Enoch was also said by occultists to represent an ancient group of Adepts who kept the flame of occultism burning through many dark centuries. Table I shows the Enochian alphabet with its titles for each letter and their English equivalents, as taught by the Golden Dawn.

Alphabet Numerical Values.

Each letter of the Enochian alphabet corresponds with planetary, elemental, or Tarot properties. In addition, each has a numerical value so that a workable gematria for the Enochian alphabet can be used, as shown in Table II.

Each letter is assigned a numerical value. By substituting numbers for letters, we can add up the numerical equivalents for words and names. Words that are numerically equal have hidden or occult correspondences. In this way an entire Enochian Qabalah, like the Jewish and Greek, can be derived.

The Angelic Secret Language.

The Golden Dawn taught that the Enochian was an ancient language. Traces of it could be found in the sacred and secret mysteries of some of the oldest religions in the world. Parts of it are found on rock-cut pillars and on the remains of ancient temples. However, it is doubtful if it was ever spoken, but was probably used more as sigils and glyphs to record and give life to important ideas.

If this is so, then the question of how Dee and Kelly came upon it has never been satisfactorily answered. According to Dee's diary, Kelly looked through a "shewstone" and saw an angel pointing, in succession, to letters that were prepared in rows and columns on well over one hundred different tablets. Kelly told Dee which letter was being indicated by the angel and Dee dutifully wrote it down. He was always careful to give the row and column number, fearing to say the letter aloud. After each message was received, it was rewritten backwards. The angel himself dictated each letter in reverse order because of the power of the language. In this way the magical names were constructed as well as the calls of the Aethyrs, which use the letters to actually make sentences. Of course, the angel himself probably knew whether the language he used was ancient or new but, if so, he apparently never told Dee.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE WILL

Every intentional act is a magical act. It is the human intent or will that makes an act magical, nothing else. This is a very important idea. It can be seen that most of our daily actions are actually magical. We are in fact, consciously or unconsciously, all magicians.

As one's intent makes an act magical, so it also colors that magic either black or white. As a general rule, "black" magic is any intentional act whose purpose is purely selfish or ego-oriented. By contrast, "white" magic is any intentional act whose motive is altruistic or non-ego-oriented.

The Enochian magical system comprises two chief types of magical operations: (i) invocations of the ruling spirits (i.e. bringing them to you) and (ii) astral traveling into the quadrants and Aethyrs described by the system (i.e. you going to them). Both types have been used effectively and can be used today by the willing student. The system works because the magician wills it so. On the other hand, the system will not work if such is one's will.

There can be a difference between "will" and "desire". The will exercises a strong determination toward conscious and deliberate action. Desire, on the other hand, can be whimsical or impulsive. It is the task of each student to carefully examine his mind and sort out the capricious desires from those strong determinations that mark the will. The quest for one's TRUE WILL, that for which one comes into this world, can take many years.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE MOTIVE

The motive is the driving force behind every magical act and is critical for success. Curiosity alone is usually not sufficient.

The student must look within himself to see what his true motive is. Is it selfish? Will a successful result benefit only himself? Will anyone be hurt? How these and similar questions are answered will determine the karma of the operation.

Karma is the cause and effect relationship that exists between all things and it operates on all planes of existence. Every magical act is charged with karma; physical, mental, emotional, and so on. Karma does not reward or punish. It is amoral. It is impersonal. It is ruthless. It continually seeks a balance between extremes and cares not for the ill-fated magician who inadvertently stresses its delicate network.

Religion and morality aside for a moment, any magical act that falls under the general heading of white magic will produce karmic effects that are pleasant, while acts that are black (i.e. selfish) will produce karmic effects that sooner or later are most unpleasant. This being the case, common sense alone can dictate the choice of proper motive for the wise magician.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE PLANES

Central to Enochian magic, and all other forms of true magic, is the doctrine concerning the cosmic planes of existence. This doctrine says that divinity expresses itself downward (or outward) from spirit into matter in graduated steps something like cosmic quanta. Each of these steps is a plane or universe. Our earth and the entire physical cosmos, is on the seventh (i.e. lowest and most dense) of these cosmic planes.

TABLE III. THE SEVEN COSMIC PLANES AND THEIR CORRESPONDING BODIES

Plane No.	Occult System	Qabalistic System	Enochian System
			Plane	Body
1	Divine	Three Planes of the Divine and Formless World	Divine	Divine Body
2	Upper Spirit'l (abstract spirit)		Spiritual	Spiritual Body
3	Lower Spirit'l (concrete spirit)
		THE GREAT OUTER ABYSS
4	Upper Mental (abstract mind)	Archetypal	Mental	Mental Body
5	Lower Mental (concrete mind)	Intellectual (Creative)
6	Astral	Substantial (Formative)	Astral	Astral Body
7	Physical	Physical	Physical	Physical Body

Table III shows the usual occult and Qabalistic divisions of these planes and the corresponding bodies that we assume on each. There is no need to create any of these bodies, we each already have them. What is needed is to learn to function consciously in them. Notice that the Abyss marks the major division between form and formlessness. Here the Oversoul, or Reincarnating Ego, takes on "new bodies" with each incarnation of the spirit. The doctrine of reincarnation is used to understand and describe these seven planes and how we function on them. This is because initiation into these planes is similar to death.

The major difference between the leveled or stepped system of occultism shown in Table III and the Enochian is that in the latter these cosmic planes are considered as concentric spheres. The Enochian system subdivides these concentric spheres into thirty regions or zones which it calls the Aethyrs.

HOW TO SPEAK ENOCHIAN

The pronunciation of Enochian, as taught by both the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley, is similar to Hebrew. Ten major rules to remember are:

1. Most consonants have an e or eh added; for example, the letter B is pronounced beh and the letter K as keh.
2. Most vowels have an h added; for example, the letter A is pronounced ah.
3. The Enochian word SOBHA is pronounced in three syllables as soh-beh-hah. This is the general rule for words.
4. The letter G can be either hard as in the word gimel or soft as in jimel.
5. The letters Y and I are interchangable, as are the letters V and U. The letters j and w are seldom used.
6. The letter X can be like the s in samekh, or like the tz in tzaddi.
7. The letter S can be pronounced either as ess or seh.
8. The letter R can be pronounced either as rah, reh, or ar.
9. The letter Z is pronounced as zod. It is interchangable with the letter S.
10. The vowel I is pronounced as ee.

Examples of Name Pronouncements.

Correctly pronouncing the names of the gods, spirits, and rulers of the quadrants and Aethyrs, is critical in order to obtain satisfactory magical results. As a rule of thumb, the syllables should flow together easily and poetically almost like a song. Seldom is a harsh or sharp sound made.

The reciting aloud of these names should be like speaking mantras. Each should be intoned in one long flowing breath, if possible. As an example, recite the name of a Senior of Air, HABIORO. This should be done in a single smooth breath. Say, Hah-bee-oh-roh. The mouth should make four distinct syllables with this name. During an invocation of this Senior, the magician must focus his mind on the qualities of HABIORO, while repeating his name in four melodious syllables.

Some names are subject to several possible spellings. This is because some squares on the Watchtowers contain multiple letters. As a general rule, pronunciation should include all letters, or the highest whenever only one is desired (the multiple letters are given like a fraction with a higher and a lower row). However, there are exceptions to this rule.

An example here is the name of the great King of Earth, IKZHIKAL. This name can also be spelled IKZHHHAL, IKZHIHAL, and IKZHHKAL because the squares give IKZH$^{I}_{H}{}^{H}_{K}$AL where the fifth and sixth letters are multiple. The best way of pronouncing this King's name is to choose the variant spelling that has the most meaningful gematric value. In this case, this is Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal.

How To Vibrate The Names.

In addition to pronunciation, some names should be vibrated. This is especially important during invocations. When a name is to be vibrated, the speaker must imagine the sound of the name going outward from himself into the farthest reaches of the universe. As the name is being pronounced verbally, it must be projected outward mentally. After verbal pronunciation, the magician should still be able to "hear" the name psychically and "see" the name expand over the Watchtowers and Aethyrs. The vibration of a name requires full concentration.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE IMAGINATION

Imagination is essential in magic. It is the golden key to the performance of any magical operation. All of the usual magic paraphernalia—incense, music, rituals, chants, robes, signs, symbols and the like—are useful only insofar as they are able to stimulate the imagination.

For example, during an invocation of a spirit, while chanting the name the magician must concentrate on the known qualities and characteristics until the spirit is clearly visualized in his mind. It is a mental image held by the magician. This image will stimulate the precipitation of the spirit. Because of this intense imagery, after the fact it is usually impossible to determine if a spirit actually manifested physically or not. It is a point of interest here that it doesn't matter in the least so far as the results are concerned.

This magical image is called a Telesmatic image and it is important for effective results. Every Angel, King, Senior, Governor, and so forth, has his own telesmatic image. However, this telesmatic image can vary widely, within certain limits, with each magician. No angel or king will appear exactly the same to every magician, though certain characteristics are universal. For example, every angel in the Watchtower of Fire must exhibit a fiery nature in one way or another. Appearance, in every case, must correspond with locality and function.

The imagination is the creative faculty of man. With its use, thoughts take on form. This may not seem to be of concern on Earth where thoughts have little effect. But in the psychic world, which one sees in the "Spirit Vision", it is very important indeed. There, thoughts are real things. On the Mental Plane the thought-form of a tree, for example, is as real to one's spirit vision as an oak is to one's eyes on the Physical Plane. The magical power of imagination to create thought forms is called Kriya Sakti. The conscious use of thought forms is called Kriya Sakti. The conscious use of Kriya Sakti on Earth is rare, and difficult to develop. But on the Astral and Mental Planes it is very much easier. Actually, we all use Kriya Sakti subconsciously; it is the power which causes dreams. Its control is equivalent to being able to fall asleep and consciously direct a dream.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE SPIRITS

According to the Enochian magical system, the universe is chock full of spiritual intelligent beings and forces. Every region in space throughout the seven cosmic planes is ruled by a hierarchy of deities. Each has a slightly different character and quality. Which one we choose to encounter, depends upon our motive for the magical operation.

This idea is in accord with a basic tenet of occultism: the entire universe is alive. There is no such thing as dead matter (or dead anything else). However, because things have life (and therefore consciousness) completely foreign to ours, they appear quite lifeless and communication with them is impossible. A corollary of this tenet is that there is no such thing as empty space. Every mathematical point in space is a center of some kind of consciousness (called a monad). A vacuum is a figment of our imagination. We can detect nothing in a vacuum, but something is there nonetheless.

Are these spirits real? Do the Kings and Seniors have objective existence? Here the student must adopt a special attitude; it is more convenient to accept their existence than it is to reject it. If we accept them as real, the operations have satisfactory results; if we reject their reality, the magic will not work. It is just that simple. Belief is important in order to properly goad the imagination. Whether they actually exist or not (i.e. whether they exist objectively or subjectively) must be answered individually by each person according to his experiences and convictions.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE ROD

The magician will have to trace pentagrams and hexagrams during invocation and banishing rituals. With this in mind, a rod or wand of some kind is required. This rod is the only magical implement that is actually required for Enochian Magic, although the four Elemental Weapons could certainly be used. These were described in some detail by the Golden Dawn and consecrated by appropriate rituals, but the following could be used just as well:

The Fire Wand—This can be a dowel rod about ten inches long, painted red.

The Water Cup—This can be any blue cup, either metal or glass.

The Air Dagger—this can be a simple knife or letter-opener, painted bright yellow.

The Earth Pentacle—This can be a round wooden disk about four inches in diameter and painted black.

The magic rod can be a wooden dowel either ¼ or ½ inch in diameter and about one foot long. It should be painted gold or, if preferred, divided into equal sections of white, blue, yellow, black and red, which are the colors of the elements. Painting or engraving the symbols of the elements is also encouraged.

The wand symbolizes the highest will of the magician. This is the so-called True Will; an individual expression of the Great Work. It is the aim of macrocosmic human evolution as this is expressed in the microcosmic magician. This works best when it is unconscious and is allowed to influence the entire life and life-style of the magician as a matter of course. If the Great Work is likened to climbing a mountain, then the True Will is the individual pathway taken up the slopes to arrive at the common peak. This True Will is symbolized by the straightness and arrow-like nature of the rod.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE GREAT WORK

The ultimate aim, and only truly worthy purpose of magic (like mysticism) is to awaken the consciousness of man to his inherent divinity, the god within. Everyone has an inner spiritual being. The mind and personality are but faint expressions of it. The physical body is its far-distant reflection. Table III shows that each of man's vehicles is a creative expression of the other, from the spiritual down to the physical. However, few are directly aware of this and even fewer can focus consciousness on their spiritual body as easily as they can on their physical body. Indeed, modern psychology shows that most people have a difficult time being aware of their own emotions and thoughts. The subconscious seems an alien and threatening land, ready to snuff out the ego at the first opportunity. If we are unable to focus consciousness on the astral body (emotions) or on the mental body (thoughts), how can we do so on the causal and spiritual bodies? How can we function in the spiritual body as consciously as we do in the physical body? It is not easy, yet this is exactly what the real magician tries to do. The attempt is called the "Great Work" and it is the toil of many lifetimes. Every magical operation worthy of being performed (i.e. white magic) is done to further this Great Work. Every invocation and all traveling in the Spirit Vision, as described in Enochian Magic, should be done solely to tread the path which continues, in some degree, the Great Work.

THE HOLY TABLE

Dee and Kelly devised a Holy Twelvefold Table containing seven different talismans, as shown in Figure 1. This table is covered with Enochian writings. In the center is:

O I T
M L U
L M L
O O E

Reading across, we get OIT which means "this is";

MLU which means "a surge"; LML meaning "a treasure"; and OOE meaning "ecstasy." Taken together, this says, "This is an outpouring of rich ecstasy."

Reading downward we get OMLO which can mean "knowledge of the first"; ILMO meaning "of the Aethyrs"; and TULE meaning "also of the last." Taken together this says, "The knowledge of the first of the Aethyrs even unto the last."

A detailed description of the thirty Aethyrs is given later, however the key to their understanding is contained here in this Holy Table.

Around the outer edge of the Holy Table are Enochian letters. These are arranged without any visible break or starting point. Reading the message either clockwise or counterclockwise is to no avail. But the center four words give the key to reading this message. This is because the words OIT, MUL, LML and OOE are all found in the surrounding message. The message's words are thus read clockwise beginning with the word OIT, but the letters within the words are read counterclockwise (i.e. backwards), except in a few instances where they are scrambled into an anagram. The message around the Holy Table can be translated as follows:

This is the place of the outpouring of forgotten treasure in the form of ecstasy.
OIT EOGA MLU

LN-BAM LML EOAN OOE

Only Fire is substantial here. This is GZE PLG (PRG) BASP OI

the way of Babalon and of PSEA (ESAP) M OAVAANBBL (BABALON-V)

the Beast who is the First Form.
LN-NIA-O SOB SSNO (ZON) - L.

The eyes only need rest upon the name of EG (GE) OOEEON F G-DO any guardian and its representative
BNG (BRABZG) SMAN-M

will speedily be encountered.
MEL-F

This message mentions "Babalon" and the "Beast", a favorite theme of Aleister Crowley. According to these directions, a simple glance at the awesome name of a "guardian" will be sufficient to precipitate an encounter. The reader should take this as a dire warning. Although the likelihood of a physical manifestation of one of these guardians right before the reader's eyes is remote, a psychic manifestation in the form of an alien impulse or desire is highly probable. The danger here is that one may ignore this warning, being quite content that no ugly or mischievous demon will suddenly appear before him in a puff of grey smoke. However, demons come in other forms than those seen with eyes. The reader must guard his mind. That Dee and Kelly clearly believed this themselves is evidenced by the way they carefully anagramed the name of BABALON in the message, fearing that a straightforward spelling would bring her too close. History shows that Kelly himself finally became a victim to one of these strange and powerful Enochian forces.

THE HOLY PANTACLE

The Holy Pantacle, or Great Seal, devised by Dee and Kelly is shown in Figure 2. This magical device was carefully carved in wax and placed on top of the Holy Table during certain operations. The pantacle contains the sacred names of many great angels.

I. The seven great names of God, whose pronunciations are unknown, are:
1. SAAI$^{2}_{8}{}^{1}$EME ($^{2}_{8}{}^{1}$ is probably "El")

2. BTZKASE^{30}
3. HEIDENE
4. DEIMO^{30}A
5. I^{26}MEGCBE
6. ILAOI$^{2}_{8}{}^{1}$VN
7. IHRIAAL$^{2}_{8}{}^{1}$

II. Names of four groups of angels can be found by reading the heptagram of the Pantacle obliquely:

A.
1. E (Eh)
2. Me (Meh)
3. Ese (Es-seh)
4. Iana (Ee-ah-nah)
5. Akele (Ah-keh-leh)
6. Azdobn (Ah-zod-doh-ben)
7. Stimcul (Ess-tee-em-kul)

B.
1. I (Ee) (Sol)
2. IH (Ee-heh) (Luna)
3. Ilr (Ee-lar) (Venus)
4. Dmal (Dem-ah-el) (Jupiter)
5. Heeoa (Heh-oh-ah) (Mars)
6. Beigia (Beh-ee-gee-ah) (Mercury)
7. Stimcul (Ess-tee-em-kul) (Saturn)

C.
1. S (Ess)
2. Ab (Ab-beh)
3. Ath (Ah-teh)
4. Ized (Ee-zod-deh)
5. Ekiei (Eh-kee-ehee)
6. Madimi (Em-ah-dee-mee)
7. Esemeli (Ess-em-el-ee)

D.
1. L (El)
2. An (Ah-neh)

3. Ave (Ah-veh)
4. Liba (El-ee-bah)
5. Rocle (Roh-kah-leh)
6. Hagone (Hah-goh-neh)
7. Ilemese (Ee-leh-meh-seh)

III. Seven great angels are named. These are the angels of the Seven Circles of Heaven:
   1. SAB-ATH-IEL "He who is first in works"
   2. Z-EDEK-IEL "He who is first in attainment"
   3. MAD-IM-IEL "He who is first in expressing God"
   4. SE-MEL-IEL "He who is first in speed"
   5. NO-GAH-EL "He who is first in spirit"
   6. K-ORAB-EIL "He who is first in ecstasy"
   7. L-EV-ANAEL "He who is first in the Secret Wisdom"

IV. Outside the heptagram are the seven names:
   1. ZLLRHIA Zod-el-lar-hee-ah
   2. AZKAAKB Ah-zod-kah-ah-kebeh
   3. PAVPNHR Pah-veh-pen-har
   4. HDMHLAI Heh-dem-hel-ahee
   5. KKAAEEE Keh-kah-ah-eh-eh-eh
   6. IIEELLL Ee-ee-eh-el-le-leh
   7. EELLMG Eh-el-lem-geh

V. Around the outer rim of the seal are two sets of numbers and letters at regular intervals. By an imaginative process of deciphering these curious letters and numbers, the Golden Dawn produced the names of the four elemental Kings (these are not the same as the Kings of the Watchtowers) as follows:
   1. Elemental King of Air. Tahaoelog
   2. Elemental King of Water. Thahebyobeaatanun
   3. Elemental King of Earth. Thahaaothe
   4. Elemental King of Fire. Ohooohaatan

Concerning The Names On The Holy Pantacle.

Although there is no attempt here to describe an invocation ritual for these angels, the reader may do so if he desires. Using the numerical values contained in Table II for letters, gematria can be used to obtain a specific number for each name. For example, the first name of the second group is "I" which letter can mean either "is" or "is not" and therefore denotes the duality of existence and nonexistence. Its character is solar and its number is 60, the number for the Hebrew word GAVN which means "glory" and "sublimity."

The seven great angels who are each "first" are important deities who preside over the Circles of Heaven (i.e. the seven cosmic planes). They should be invoked only with great caution.

THE FOUR GREAT WATCHTOWERS

Dee and Kelly constructed four Tablets, or Watchtowers, one for each of the four quadrants (also called angles) of space. Figure 3 shows an overview of these four great Watchtowers and the Black Cross that unites them together.

These Watchtowers are the heart of Enochian Magic just as they represent the heart of the universe. Each

As the Black Cross divides the Tablet into four quadrants, so each quadrant is itself subdivided as shown in Figure 8. The Black Cross is then arranged in the form of a special Tablet called the Tablet of Union as shown in Figure 9.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE FOUR ELEMENTS

The Enochian, like all other systems of magic, makes use of four primary elements. These are earth, water, air and fire and they correspond to many things, as shown in Table IV. These attributes and correspondences are important in order to determine the precise location on the Watchtowers where one wishes to travel, or to select a spirit to converse with.

Figure 8 shows the elements as they relate to the Watchtowers. Combinations of elements such as Earth-of Air and Fire-of-Water are made to better specify the nature of the locality. A visit to Water-of-Earth in the north for example, could be interpreted as a lake or pond. Similarly, Earth-of-Water in the west could be interpreted as an island or large ship. Additional explanations are given below.

1. Fire of Fire, Aries, violent fire
2. Air of Fire, Leo, continuous fire
3. Water of Fire, Sagittarius, reflective fire
4. Earth of Fire, dispersiveness
5. Fire of Air, Libra, violent wind
6. Air of Air, Aquarius, steady moving air
7. Water of Air, Gemini, stagnant air
8. Earth of Air, flexibility
9. Fire of Water, Cancer, violent water
10. Air of Water, Scorpio, evaporating water
11. Water of Water, Pisces, stagnant water
12. Earth of Water, cohesiveness
13. Fire of Earth, Capricorn, violent earth, mountains
14. Air of Earth, Taurus, flat earth, plains
15. Water of Earth, Virgo, quiet life-giving earth, fields
16. Earth of Earth, solidity

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE FIFTH ELEMENT

In addition to the four elements of the Watchtowers, a fifth element, Spirit, is used in Enochian Magic. This element is assigned to the Tablet of Union. The symbol for Spirit is a spoked wheel ⊛ and its color is white. Together, these five elements are symbolized by the five-pointed pentagram (Figure 16). Usually the element Spirit is assigned to the topmost point. When the pentagram is inverted the four elements are over Spirit (and therefore have supremacy). This is said to be an unholy sign, used only in operations of black magic. The reason for this is that Spirit has a natural supremacy over the four elements of earth, water, air and fire (they are in fact, expressions of Spirit) and any reversal is therefore unnatural.

GREAT SECRET HOLY NAMES

The four quadrants each give a great secret Holy Name of God along its middle row (called the "Linea Spiritus Sancti"). Each name is three words having 3, 4 and 5 letters:

1. Air. The air quadrant contains the name
   ORO-IBAH-AOZPI (OROI-BAHAO-Z-PI)
   This name is pronounced Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee and means
   "He who cries aloud in the place of desolation."
2. Water. The water quadrant contains the name
   MPH-ARSL-GAIOL (MPH-ARS-L-G-IA-OL)
   This name is pronounced Em-Peh-heh-Ar-ess-el-Gah-ee-oh-leh and means
   "He who is the first true creator; the horned one."
3. Earth. The earth quadrant contains the name
   MOR-DIAL-HKTGA (MORD-IAL-HKT-GA)
   This name is pronounced Moh-ar-Dee-ah-leh-Heh-keh-teh-gah and means
   "He who burns up iniquity without equal."
4. Fire. The fire quadrant contains the name
   OIP-TEAA-PDOKE (OI-P-TEA-AP-DO-KE)
   This name is pronounced Oh-ee-peh-Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-keh and means "He whose name is unchanged from what it was."

Correct Pronouncement of the Holy Names.

The four great secret Holy Names should be pronounced in one long flowing breath if possible. However, emphasis should be given to the first syllable of each name section. For example, ORO-IBAH-AOZPI should be spoken with emphasis on the Oh, Ee and Ah syllables which begin each section of the name.

An alternate method of pronunciation is to pause briefly after each section. This results in saying three distinct names. For example, one could say Oh-roh Ee-bah Ah-oh-zod-pee. Either method is effective. The student should experiment with both and then choose the way that works best for him.

Gematria of the Four Great Holy Names.

1. ORO-IBAH-AOZPI is 340, the number for the Enochian word ZOKH meaning "the past," and the Hebrew word PRS meaning "Vulture" (the vulture was used by the ancient Egyptians to symbolize motherhood).

2. MPH-ARSL-GAIOL is 333, the number for the Enochian phrase SIAION-GRAA which means "temple of the moon." It is also the number for the Hebrew spelling of ChURUNZUN (I.E. Choronzon), the demon of the tenth Aethyr and is half of 666, the number of the Beast of the Apocalypse which Crowley assumed for himself. The serious student should not be at all intimidated by this. The number 666 is equal to the Hebrew word IThRUN which means "good."

3. MOR-DIAL-HKTGA is 622, the number for the Enochian phrase PIAP-PATRALX which means "balance of stone," and the Hebrew word BRKTh meaning "blessings."

4. OIP-TEAA-PDOKE is 483, the number for the Enochian phrase LRING-MONONS which means "to stir up the heart," and the Hebrew phrase GRM SPQ which means "to cause doubt."

5. The gematria of the Hebrew words used above are calculated using standard Hebrew gematric values (reference Crowley's LIBER 777) as follows:

PRS = 80+200+60 = 340
ChURUNZUN = 8+6+200+6+50+7+6+50 =333

IThRUN = 10+400+200+6+50 = 666
BRKTh = 2+200+20+400 =622
GRM SPQ = 3+200+40+60+80+100 =483

General Meaning and Use of the Four Great Holy Names

The four great secret Holy Names are not usually invoked by themselves, being but names of God. Normally the names are used in ritual invocations of the Kings, Seniors, Archangels or Angels of the entire Watchtowers, to get an initial feel or mood of the particular Watchtower under consideration. Each name reflects the general atmosphere of its respective quadrant and should be used with great care. The meaning of the name must be clearly held in mind when the name is spoken.

1. ORO-IBAH-AOZPI. This colors the Watchtower of Air with an atmosphere of great age and of endless past events. The formless aspect of air gives the feeling of emptiness and desolation.

2. MPH-ARSL-GAIOL. This colors the Watchtower of Water with an atmosphere of creation and birth. The life-giving aspect of water gives the feeling of form coming out of formlessness.

3. MOR-DIAL-HKTGA. This colors the Watchtower of Earth with an atmosphere of stability and equalibrium. The solidifying aspect of earth gives the feeling of opposing forces becoming balanced, of chaos becoming structured.

4. OIP-TEAA-PDOKE. This colors the Watchtower of Fire with an atmosphere of instability and turmoil. The violent aspect of fire gives the feeling of continuous dissociation.

THE FOUR GREAT KINGS

How to Obtain Their Names.

Each quadrant has a presiding king or ruler. The name of each Great King is obtained from the center of each respective Tablet by making a clockwise circle, as shown in Figure 10 below for water.

The Names of the Four Great Kings.

Air: The name of the King of Air is BATAIVAH (BA-TA-I-VAH). This is pronounced Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh and means "He whose voice seems to have wings."

Water: The name of the King of Water is RAAGIOSL (RAA-GI-OSL). This is pronounced Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel and means "He whose hands are toward the East."

Earth: The name of the King of Earth is IKZH$^{I}_{N}$$^{H}_{K}$AL (I-KZH-I-KAL). This is pronounced Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal and means "He who solidifies the past."

Fire: The name of the King of Fire is EDLPRNAA (ED-L-PRNAA). This is pronounced Eh-del-par-nah-ah and means "He who is first to receive the flames."

General Character and Qualities of the Four Great Kings

Using gematria on the names of the four Great Kings will give hints of their true nature, as shown in Table V. These Kings can be either invoked or visited by the magician. While speaking the name, the character and qualities of the King must be firmly held in mind. These are:

> The King of Air, BATAIVAH, is kindly and loving. His nature is feminine. He bestows mercy and grace and he speaks with a beautiful voice. In fact his words seem like heavenly music, which is both pleasant and seductive.
>
> The King of Water, RAAGIOSL, is creative and is always making things. His nature, being reflective, is such that one often sees one's own worst faults manifested in him. He seeks, through life-giving creativity, to reduce infinite spiritual ideas into finite forms.
>
> The King of Earth, IKZHIKAL, lives in the past. He hates change. He strives to keep things as they are. He loves to describe and define things. He gave all things of the earth their original names, and he seeks to keep them bound to these names.
>
> The King of Fire, EDLPRNAA, is a consuming fiery being, dangerous and easy to provoke to anger. He loves change and hates stagnation. He has a violent temper and seeks to disperse all aggragates into their monadic essence. The inexperienced magician would do well to avoid this King until he is adept at invocations.

THE TWENTY-FOUR SENIORS

How To Obtain Their Names.

The Tablets contain the names of 24 Seniors or Elders; six in each quadrant. These are found in the center row and two center columns of each quadrant by reading from the center outward (or upward and downward). Each name contains seven letters, except when double letters are given in a section. Figure 11 shows the derivation of the Seniors from the Watchtower of Air as an example.

4. AAPDOKE	Ah-ah-ped-oh-keh His name means "He whose name remains the same."	Venus

5. ANODOIN Ah-noh-doh-ee-neh Mercury
His name means "He who is open to others."

6. ARINNA$^{\mathrm{OP}}$ Ah-ree-neh-nah-peh Saturn
His name means "He who protects with a sword."

Gematria of the Twenty-Four Seniors.

Each Senior has a numerical value obtained by summing up the appropriate letter values as contained in Table II. Using gematria, the name of each Senior corresponds to key Enochian words or phrases which have a direct bearing on their natures. An example of selected numerical correspondences is in Table VI.

TABLE VI. GEMATRIA OF THE NAMES OF THE SENIORS

ARINNAP	281	MALPIRG (fires of life)

[a] 483 is also OIP-TEAA-PDOKE, the Holy Name of the Watchtower of Fire.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THE PLANETS

The seven sacred planets represent seven planetary spheres, or zones of influence. The fact that two of these planets are the sun and the moon, which are not really "planets" as such, does not alter the fact of their respective influences. The most important correspondences are:

Planet	Sign	Chief Characteristics	Watchtower Subquadrant Influenced
Saturn	♄	Intuition,thought formation	Earth of Air
Jupiter	♃	Harmony, beneficial change	Water of Fire
Mars	♂	Destruction, conflicting manifestation	Earth of Fire
Sun	☉	Creativity, active change	Air of Fire
Venus	♀	Emotions, instincts	Water of Earth
Mercury	☿	Intellect, reflective thought	Water of Air
Moon	☽	Reflection, passive manifestation, formation of emotions	Earth of Water

HOW TO INVOKE THE KINGS AND SENIORS

The cross shown in Figure 11 is called the Great Cross of the Watchtower. The Holy Names, and the names of the Kings and Seniors, are all taken from the Great Cross. Any one of the Kings and Seniors can be invoked by using the Hexagram Ritual (see below). Each King is attributed to the sun. Each Senior is attributed to a planet, as shown earlier. A hexagram has six points and each corresponds to a planet, and therefore to a Senior. During the ritual, a hexagram is drawn for a particular Senior by beginning it at the appropriate point. The hexagram is shown in Figure 12. In order to invoke a King, it can be seen that there is no point on the hexagram for the sun. A King is invoked by drawing all six planetary hexagrams as shown in Figure 13.

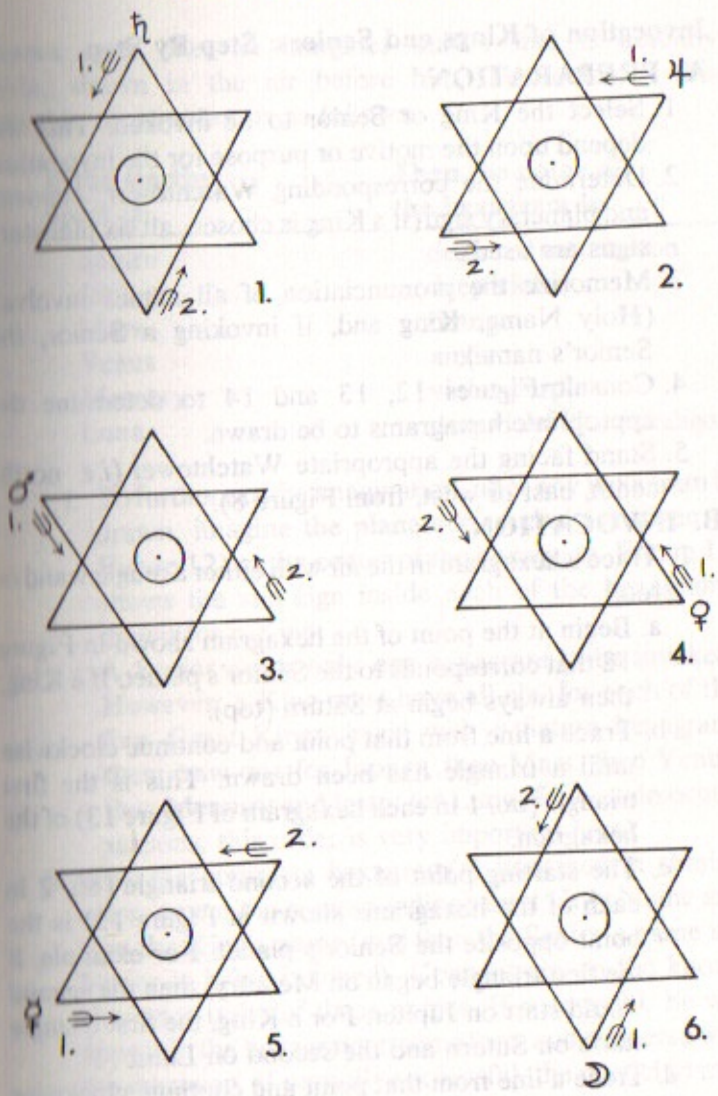

Figure 14. The Six Banishing Hexagrams for Kings. For each hexagram begin at the point shown and in the direction of the arrow as indicated. Do triangle 1 first, then triangle 2.

Invocation of Kings and Seniors: Step By Step.

A. PREPARATION

1. Select the King or Senior to be invoked. This will depend upon the motive or purpose for the invocation.
2. Determine the corresponding Watchtower, element, and planetary sign (if a King is chosen, all six planetary signs are used).
3. Memorize the pronunciation of all names involved (Holy Name, King and, if invoking a Senior, the Senior's name).
4. Consult Figures 12, 13 and 14 to determine the appropriate hexagrams to be drawn.
5. Stand facing the appropriate Watchtower (i.e. north, south, east or west, from Figure 8).

B. INVOCATION

1. Trace a hexagram in the air with either a magic wand or rod.
   a. Begin at the point of the hexagram shown in Figure 12 that corresponds to the Senior's planet. If a King, then always begin at Saturn (top).
   b. Trace a line from that point and continue clockwise until a triangle has been drawn. This is the first triangle (no. 1 in each hexagram of Figure 13) of the hexagram.
   c. The starting point of the second triangle (no. 2 in each of the hexagrams shown in Figure 13) is the point opposite the Senior's planet. For example, if the first triangle began on Mercury, then the second would start on Jupiter. For a King, the first triangle starts on Saturn and the second on Luna.
   d. Trace a line from that point and continue clockwise until a triangle is drawn. This is the second triangle and completes the hexagram.
   e. Imagination is important here. As the magician traces each line, he imagines that a line is actually being drawn in the air before him. The color of this psychic construction is as follows:

If the starting point is:	Then the color of the hexagram is:
Saturn	deep red or crimson
Jupiter	deep violet
Mars	orange
Venus	amber
Mercury	violet-purple
Luna	deep violet-blue or indigo

   f. To further tax the imagination, after any hexagram is drawn, imagine the planetary symbol (as given in Figure 12) at the center of the hexagram. Figure 13 shows the sun sign inside each of the hexagrams drawn for a King.
   g. A Senior needs only one hexagram to be invoked. However, a King must have all six. for each of the four Great Kings, begin with a Saturn hexagram, then draw one for Jupiter, then Mars, then Venus, then Mercury and lastly for Luna (for certain occult reasons, this order is very important here).
2. With the complete hexagram(s) imagined in shining color, repeat the corresponding secret Holy Name and then the King's name (and then the Senior's name if a Senior is being invoked). Concentrate on the known character traits of these names. If successful, he will appear in the hexagram in some form and converse with the magician. If partially successful, the magician may catch an idea or thought from him.
3. Success or failure is not measured by requiring that a King or Senior physically jump out at the magician. It is measured only by the degree in achievement of the original motive. Success or failure may come days or even months after the operation.

C. BANISHMENT

1. Every spirit invoked, must be banished after the operation. If unsure whether the invocation was successful or not, use the banishment ritual anyway (just in case).
2. To banish a King or Senior back to his region, simply go through the hexagrams again, but this time begin counterclockwise rather than clockwise. This has the effect of reversing the invocation. (An example of how to banish a King is in Figure 14.)

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: INCENSE

Although the use of incense during a magical operation is optional, an appropriate incense sometimes helps to assist the mind to concentrate. It also helps stimulate the imagination, which can be critical to success. The following list shows the corresponding incense for each subquadrant and can be used for both invocations and traveling in the Spirit Vision:

⊕ of ⊕ Ambergris.
🜁 of ⊕ The Gall of Rukh.
▽ of ⊕ Onycha.
🜃 of ⊕ Musk.
△ of ⊕ Civet.

⊕ of 🜁 Lign-aloes.
🜁 of 🜁 Galbanum.
▽ of 🜁 Mastick.
🜃 of 🜁 Storax.
△ of 🜁 Olibanum.

⊕ of ▽ Myrrh.
🜁 of ▽ Camphor.
▽ of ▽ Siamese Benzoin.
🜃 of ▽ Indigo.
△ of ▽ Opoponax.

⊛ of 🜃 Dittany of Crete.
🜁 of 🜃 Assafoetida.
▽ of 🜃 Clover.
🜃 of 🜃 Storax.
△ of 🜃 Benzoin.

⊛ of △ Saffron.
🜁 of △ Lign-aloes.
▽ of △ Red-sanders.
🜃 of △ Red Sandalwood.
△ of △ Olibanum.

The following list gives the type of incense to be used for corresponding planetary influences:

Saturn	myrrh, sulphur, indigo (exercise caution with sulphur)
Jupiter	Cedar, saffron
Mars	tobacco, pepper
Sun	olibanum, cinnamon
Venus	rose, benzoin, sandalwood, myrtle
Mercury	storax, mace, mastic
Moon	jasmine, ginseng, camphor, aloes

The following list gives the type of incense to be used to correspond with the elements:

Air	galbanum, peppermint, any light uplifting odor
Water	myrrh, onycha, any purgative odor
Earth	storax, any dull heavy odor
Fire	olibanum, any fiery odor

If the incenses listed above are unavailable, the following can be substituted:

Saturn	any odoriferous roots such as pepperwort
Jupiter	any odoriferous fruits such as coconut
Mars	any odoriferous woods such as pine or cedar
Sun	any odoriferous gums such as musk or anise
Venus	any odoriferous flowers such as roses or violets
Mercury	any odoriferous seeds such as bay berries
Moon	any odoriferous vegetable leaves such as myrtle or bay
Earth	any dry, heavy, earthy scent such as musk or sandalwood
Water	any cool, watery scent such as ginger
Air	any light, airy scent such as lemon or orange
Fire	any spicy or fiery scent such as cinnamon

INVOCATION OF A SENIOR

Suppose, for an example, one would like to improve one's appreciation for music. Such a boon could be granted by the Senior, ADAEOET, "He who sings like a bird." The magician begins by facing south toward the great Watchtower of Fire, where ADAEOET dwells.

He wears only a robe, or at least very loose-fitting and comfortable clothing. The real importance of clothing is that it must be of a type that can be forgotten or ignored. Tight clothing can interfere with concentration, and for that reason should not be worn. The same can be said for nudity; it is good if one can forget the body and not good if one feels at all awkward or uncomfortable. The magician must be able to forget his body for a while. Anything that aids this is good while, on the other hand, anything that hinders this is bad.

All distracting thoughts and concerns must be cast aside. Total concentration is mandatory.

The magician raises his arms outward toward the South and calls out the Holy Name,

"OIP-TEAA-PDOKE, may my request be granted.
You who are unchanged by time, hear me.
OIP-TEAA-PDOKE, thou most holy name. You are the Watchtower of the South. You are the Watchtower of Fire. All things return to you. Hear me.
LRING-MONONS, I call upon you for your music, OIP-TEAA-PDOKE."

The magician then calls upon the King of Fire:

"EDLPRNAA, O Receiver of the Flames, thou who art King over Fire, assist me. Make me to be a knower of music.
EDLPRNAAH, BITOM, EDLPRNAAH, change me, renew me in your forge.
BITOM, I desire to be changed. I desire to be made anew. EDLPRNAAH, BITOM, EDLPRNAAH."

The magician now feels the presence of the King of Fire near him. He should feel the violent churning of this fiery quadrant around him. Now he takes his fire wand (preferably one he has made himself) and traces a large hexagram in the air before him. This hexagram is deep violet and is drawn as shown in hexagram no. 2 of Figure 13 (i.e. the Jupiter Hexagram). He sees a violet "♃" glistening in the center, which charges the hexagram with a tone both religious and creative (if incense is used to heighten the proper mood here, it should be of cedar or saffron).

As the magician gazes into the sparkling violet hexagram of Jupiter, he makes the final invocation:

"ADAEOET, whose voice is music, allow me to share your songs, O ADAEOET.

May your sword cut away my ignorance. May I become new. May my old self be sacrificed as it is in ZEN, the eighteenth Aethyr. May I rise up new with your attributes. May I share your music, O ADAEOET, GOHO, ZEN, TOL-BALT, ADAEOET."

Now the magician feels himself changing under the influence of fire and music. He imagines ADAEOET in the hexagram showering forth his musical ability. He sees himself as a new person. He is now one who loves and appreciates music. His own inherent abilities will now surely be enhanced.

In gratitude to ADAEOET, he now banishes the Senior with a banishing hexagram (hexagram no. 2 in Figure 14). ADAEOET thus returns to the Watchtower of Fire in the South.

No Senior, or any other spirit for that matter, can make something from nothing. They can only work within specific occult laws. Here the magician does not ask for the impossible. He already has a musical ability (as everyone does) buried in his subconscious. He asks only that it be brought out into manifestation. This ADAEOET can do. If properly carried out, this invocation will be effective in some degree. Although the magician will probably not be able to sit immediately at a piano and play Handel or Bach, he probably will find that taking piano lessons is surprisingly easy and that, with practice, he can play tolerably well.

INVOCATION vs SPIRIT VISION

The correspondences between the four elements and the four directions of space, as given for invocations, are:

1. The East Winds are airy therefore Air is in the East.
2. The South winds are hot and dry therefore Fire is in the South.
3. The West Winds are moist with rain therefore Water is in the West.
4. The North Winds are cold and dry therefore Earth is in the North.

These correspondences are in accord with the winds, and in accord with ancient Egyptian tradition. However, whenever astral traveling or moving in the "Spirit Vision" is used, the traditional Zodiac correspondences may be used. These are:

1. Air in the West
2. Water in the North
3. Earth in the South
4. Fire in the East

As a general rule: to invoke, stand facing the position of the winds because the Earth is subject to the winds. However, to travel in the Spirit Vision, face the positions according to the Zodiac.

THE ANGELS OF THE CALVARY CROSS

Each lesser angle (i.e. each subquadrant or angle, such as Water of Air) has a cross called the "Sephirothic Calvary Cross". Figure 15 shows the four Calvary Crosses of the Watchtower of Earth as an example. There is a total of sixteen Calvary crosses. Each cross contains ten squares corresponding to the ten Sephiroth of the Hebrew Qabalah.

Each Calvary Cross contains two names. Reading downward is a six-lettered name and across is a five-lettered name. The former name evokes the intelligent forces of that subquadrant, while the latter name controls them. These Calvary Cross Names are:

I. Air

1. Air of Air:
   - a. IDOIGO Ee-doh-ee-goh
     IDOIGO means "He who sits on the Holy Throne."
   - b. ARDZA Ar-deh-zodah
     AR-DSA means "He who protects."
2. Water of Air:
   - a. $^{L}_{I}$LAKZA El-lah-keh-zodah
     L-KAL-ZA means "He who is first to precipitate."
   - b. PALAM Pah-lah-meh
     PA-LAM means "He who is on the Path."
3. Earth of Air:
   - a. AIAOAI Ahee-ah-oh-ahee
     AAI-O-AI means "He who is within and among you."
   - b. OIIIT Ohee-ee-ee-teh
     OI-I-I-T means "He who is, but also is not."
4. Fire of Air:
   - a. AO$^{U}_{V}$RRZ Ah-oh-var-razod
     AO-VRRS means "He who beautifies."
   - b. ALOAI Ah-loh-ahee
     ALO-AI means "He who is from a succession."

II. Water

1. Air of Water:
   - a. O$^{B}_{L}$GO$^{T}_{K}$A Oh-beh-goh-tah
     OBLOG-TA means "He who is like a garland."

   - b. $^{A}_{O}$A$^{B}_{L}$KO Ah-ah-beh-koh ABA-KO means "He who is bent over."
1. Water of Water:
   - a. NELAPR En-el-ah-par
     N-ELAP-R means "He who must have his way."
   - b. OMEBB Oh-meb-beh
     OM-EBB means "He who knows."
3. Earth of Water:
   - a. MALAD$^{I}_{R}$ Em-ah-lah-dee MAL-ADI means "He who shoots arrows."
   - b. OLAAD Oh-lah-ah-deh
     OL-ADA means "He who created birds."
4. Fire of Water:
   - a. IAAASD Ee-ah-ah-ah-ess-deh
     IA-A-ASD means "He who is in truth."
   - b. ATAPA Ah-tah-pah
     A-TA-PA means "He who bears a likeness."

III. Earth

1. Air of Earth:
   - a. ANGPOI Ah-neh-geh-pohee
     ANG-POI means "He who divides thoughts."
   - b. $^{U}_{V}$NNAX Ven-nahtz
     VN-N-AX means "He whose great name is All."
2. Water of Earth:
   - a. ANAEEM Ah-nah-eh-eh-meh
     ANA-E-EM means "He who is nine times obedient."
   - b. SONDN Soh-neh-den
     S-ONDN means "He who has a kingdom."
3. Earth of Earth:
   - a. $^{A}_{K}$BALPT Ah-bah-leh-peh-teh ABA-LPT means "He who stoops down."

b. ARBIZ Ar-bee-zod
AR-BI-Z means "He whose voice protects."

4. Fire of Earth: a. ${}^{O}_{S}$PMNIR Oh-pem-nee-ar
OM-PNIR means "He who increases knowledge."

b. ${}^{I}_{L}$LPIZ Eel-pee-zod
IL-PI-Z means "He whose place is the Aethyrs."

IV. Fire.

1. Air of Fire: a. NOALMR Noh-ah-leh-mar
NOA-L-MR means "He who is first to bring about torment."

b. OLOAG Oh-loh-ah-geh
OL-OAG means "He who makes nothing."

2. Water of Fire: a. VADALI Vah-dah-lee
V-LAIAD means "He who has the Secret Truth."

b. OBA${}^{U}_{V}{}^{A}_{I}$ Oh-bah-vah
OBA-V-IA means "He who has half of truth."

3. Earth of Fire: a. ${}^{U}_{V}$O${}^{L}_{B}$XDO Voh-letz-doh VOLX-DO means "He whose name is Annihilation."

b. SIODA Ess-ee-oh-dah
S-IO-DA means "He who is eternal."

4. Fire of Fire: a. RZIONR Rah-zodee-oh-nar
ZIN-ROR means "He who is in the Waters of the Sun."

b. NRZFM En-rah-zod-eff-em
NRZ-F-M means "He who visits here six times."

THE KERUBIC ANGELS OR KERUBIM

Above the horizontal bar of each Calvary Cross are four letters, two on each side of the vertical bar. These four letters form the name of a Kerubic Angel, one for each subquadrant. Each of these names can be anagramed, or anagramatized transposed, to form three other names. Together this totals 64 Kerubic Angels: 16 in each Watchtower and four in each subquadrant.

I. Air.

1. Air of Air: RZLA (Ra-zodel-ah), ZLAR, LARZ, ARZL
2. Water of Air: ${}^{Y}_{U}$TPA (Yuh-teh-pah), TPA${}^{Y}_{U}$, PA${}^{Y}_{U}$T, A${}^{Y}_{U}$YP
3. Earth of Air: ${}^{T}_{K}$NB${}^{R}_{A}$ (Ten-beh-rah), NB${}^{T}_{K}{}^{R}_{A}$, B${}^{T}_{K}{}^{R}_{A}$N, ${}^{T}_{K}{}^{R}_{A}$NB
4. Fire of Air: XG${}^{S}_{Z}$D (Tz-egg-seh-deh), G${}^{S}_{Z}$DX, ${}^{S}_{Z}$DXG, DXG${}^{S}_{Z}$

II. Water.

1. Air of Water: TAAD (Tah-ah-deh), AADT, ADTA, DTAA
2. Water of Water: TDIM (Teh-dee-em), DIMI, IMTD, MTDI
3. Earth of Water: MAGL (Em-ah-gel), AGLM, GLMA, LMAG
4. Fire of Water: NLRX (En-el-artz), LRXN, RXNL, XNLR

III. Earth.

1. Air of Earth: BOZA (Boh-zodah), OZAB, ZABO, ABOZ
2. Water of Earth: PHRA (Peh-har-ah), HRAP, RAPH, APHR

3. Earth of Earth: ${}^{R}_{O}{}^{K}_{O}{}^{N}_{A}{}^{K}_{NM}$ (Roh-koh-nah-kem), ${}^{K}_{O}{}^{N}_{A}{}^{K}_{NM}{}^{R}_{O}$, ${}^{N}_{A}{}^{K}_{NM}{}^{R}_{O}{}^{K}_{O}$, ${}^{K}_{NM}{}^{R}_{O}{}^{K}_{O}{}^{N}_{A}$
4. Fire of Earth: ${}^{IA}_{BT}{}^{S}_{A}{}^{M}_{O}{}^{T}_{M}$ (Ee-ah-sah-moh-tem), ${}^{S}_{A}{}^{M}_{O}{}^{T}_{M}{}^{IA}_{BT}$, ${}^{M}_{O}{}^{T}_{M}{}^{IA}_{BT}{}^{S}_{A}$, ${}^{T}_{M}{}^{IA}_{BT}{}^{S}_{A}{}^{M}_{O}$

IV. Fire.

1. Air of Fire: DOPA (Doh-pah), OPAD, PADO, ADOP
2. Water of Fire: ANAA (An-ah-ah), NAAA, AAAN, AANA
3. Earth of Fire: PSAK (Pess-ah-keh), SAKP, AKPS, KPSA
4. Fire of Fire: ZIZA (Zodee-zodah), IZAZ, ZAZI, AZIZ*

What the Kerubim Govern

Each of the Kerubic Angels governs that file of squares which begins with its first letter. For example, in the Watchtower of Air, the Kerubic Angel RZLA governs that area of the subquadrant Air of Air that contains the letters R(A)KTSF. In the same way, ZLAR rules over the file of Z(R)ZOIM, LARZ rules over L(Z)NTAN and ARZL rules over A(A)STSD. In each case, the second letter is placed in parenthesis to show that it is a part of the Calvary Cross. It is not governed by the Kerubic Angel but by the Calvary Cross Angel.

---

*According to the Golden Dawn, AZIZ is a huge human-shaped being, fiery red with flaming wings and emerald green hair.
ZAZI is black and white, flaming and flashing.
IZAZ is blue and orange and covered with a fiery mist.
ZIZA is orange with hazy gold wings which are like gauze, and he has nets of gold around him.

THE ARCHANGELS

In addition to the 64 Kerubim, there are also 64 Archangels who rule over them. The names of these Archangels are found by prefixing one letter from the Tablet of Union or Black Cross to the names of the Kerubim. The letters used are E, H, N and B. These are the first letters of each row as shown in Figure 9 and refer to the element Spirit.

1. "E" prefixes the Kerubic Angels of Air:
   Air. ERZLA Er-zodel-ah
   Water. $E{}^{Y}_{U}TPA$ Eh-yuh-teh-pah
   Earth. $E{}^{T}_{K}NB{}^{R}_{A}$ Eh-ten-beh-rah
   Fire. $EXG{}^{S}_{Z}D$ Ehtz-egg-seh-deh
   Similarly for the 12 lesser Kerubic Angels of Air.

2. "H" prefixes the Kerubic Angels of Water.
   Air. HTAAD Heh-tah-ah-deh
   Water. HTDIM Heh-teh-dee-em
   Earth. HMAGL Hem-ah-gel
   Fire. HNLRX Hen-el-artz
   Similarly for the 12 lesser Kerubic Angels of Water.

3. "N" prefixes the Kerubic Angels of Earth.
   Air. NBOZA En-boh-zodah
   Water. NPHRA Enpeh-har-ah
   Earth. $N{}^{R}_{O}{}^{K}_{O}{}^{N}_{A}{}^{K}_{NM}$ En-roh-koh-nah-kem
   Fire. $N{}^{IA}_{BT}{}^{S}_{A}{}^{M}_{O}{}^{T}_{M}$ Enee-ah-sah-moh-tem
   Similarly for the 12 lesser Kerubic Angels of Earth.

4. "B" prefixes the Kerubic Angels of Fire.
   Air. BDOPA Beh-doh-pah
   Water. BANAA Ban-ah-ah
   Earth. BPSAK Beh-pess-ah-keh
   Fire. BZIZA Beh-zodee-zodah
   Similarly for the 12 lesser Kerubic Angels of Fire.

Chief Characteristics of the Archangels and Kerubim

The Archangels and Kerubim of the sixteen subquadrants, are characterized according to their locality as follows:

1. Archangels and Kerubim of the four Air subquadrants. These angels are characterized by pairs of opposing forces such as expansion and contraction, attraction and repulsion, solidification and dispersion. They seek a balance between such dual forces.

2. Archangels and Kerubim of the four Water subquadrants. These angels are characterized by motion. They desire continual movement and flux. They seek change in all things.

3. Archangels and Kerubim of the four Earth subquadrants. These angels are characterized by their desire for manifestation. They seek to express subjective thoughts and emotions into objective forms.

4. Archangels and Kerubim of the four Fire subquadrants. These angels are characterized by their desire to purify human nature. Theys seek purification by fire of all the lower human character traits.

THE LESSER ANGELS

There are 64 lesser angels of the Watchtowers. Beneath the horizontal bar of each Calvary Cross are sixteen squares (four letters across separated by the vertical bar of the Cross, and four letters down). These are the names of the four Lesser Angels of each respective subquadrant, the first being somewhat more important than the other three.

I. Air.

1. Air of Air: KZNS, TOTT, SIAS, FMND
2. Water of Air: O$^{Y}_{V}$UB, PAOK, RBNH, DIR$^{L}_{I}$
3. Earth of Air: ABMO, NAKO, OKNM, SHAL
4. Fire of Air: AKKA, NP$^{U}_{A}$T, OTOI, PMOX

II. Water.

1. Air of Water: T$^{O}_{A}$KO, NHDD, $^{F}_{P}$AAX, SAI$^{Z}_{X}$
2. Water of Water: ${}^{M}_{I}{}^{A}_{N}{}_{B}GM, I^{L}_{A}OK, VS^{X}_{S}{}^{Y}_{N}{}^{L}_{H}$, RV$^{L}_{K}$I
3. Earth of Water: PAKO, NDZN, $^{R}_{I}$IPO, XRNH
4. Fire of Water: XPKN, VASA, DAPI, R$^{N}_{A}$IL

III. Earth.

1. Air of Earth: AIRA, ORMN, RSNI, IZNR
2. Water of Earth: $^{A}_{O}$MGG, GBAL, RLMU, IAHL
3. Earth of Earth: OPNA, DOO$^{P}_{F}$, RXAO, AXIR
4. Fire of Earth: MSA$^{T}_{L}$, IABA, IZXP, STIM

IV. Fire.

1. Air of Fire: OPMN, A$^{P}_{B}$ST, SKIO, VASG
2. Water of Fire: G$^{M}_{N}$NM, EKOP, AMOX, $^{B}_{V}$RAP
3. Earth of Fire: DATT, DIOM, OOPZ, RGAN
4. Fire of Fire: ADRE, SISP, PALI, AKAR

The Ruling Lesser Angels.

Each of the 64 Lesser Angels has a presiding angel whose name can be found by prefixing an appropriate letter from the Tablet of Union.

1. Air (XARP).

1. Air of Air: XKZNS, XTOTT, XSIAS, XFMND
2. Water of Air: AO$^{Y}_{V}$UB, APAOK, ARBNH, ADIR$^{L}_{T}$
3. Earth of Air: RABMO, RNAKO, ROKNM, RSHAL
4. Fire of Fire: PAKKA, PNP$^{U}_{A}$T, POTOI, PPMOX

2. Water (KOMA).

1. Air of Water: KT$^{O}_{A}$KO, KNHDD, K$^{F}_{P}$AAX, KSAI$^{Z}_{X}$
2. Water of Water: O$^{M}_{I}{}^{A}_{NU}$GM, OI$^{L}_{A}$OK, OVS$^{X}_{S}{}^{YL}_{NH}$, ORV$^{L}_{K}$I
3. Earth of Water: MPAKO, MNDZN, M$^{R}_{I}$IPO, MXRNH
4. Fire of Water: AXPKN, AVASA, ADAPI, AR$^{N}_{A}$IL

3. Earth (ANTA).

1. Air of Earth: AAIRA, AORMN, ARSNI, AIZNR
2. Water of Earth: N$^{A}_{O}$MGG, NGBAL, NRLMU, NIAHL
3. Earth of Earth: TOPNA, TDOO$^{P}_{F}$, TRXAO, TAXIR
4. Fire of Earth: AMSA$^{T}_{L}$, AIABA, AIZXP, ASTIM

Fire (ITOM).

1. Air of Fire: IOPMN, IA$^{P}_{B}$ST, ISKIO, IVASG
2. Water of Fire: TG$^{M}_{N}$NM, TEKOP, TAMOX, T$^{B}_{V}$RAP
3. Earth of Fire: ODATT, ODIOM, OOOPZ, ORGAN
4. Fire of Fire: MADRE, MSISP, MPALI, MAKAR

Chief Characteristics of the Lesser Angels.

The Lesser Angels and Lesser Ruling Angels of the sixteen subquadrants, are characterized according to their locality as follows:

1. Angels of the four Air subquadrants. These angels assist in purifications. They can help free one from illusion, diseases, ignorance and other karmic afflictions by an occult process of sublimation.

2. Angels of the four Water subquadrants. These angels assist in polarizations. They can help make needed changes in one's character or life-style, and can orient one toward a better future.

3. Angels of the four Earth subquadrants. These angels assist in manifestations. They can help one to express inherent inner divinity in daily life.

4. Angels of the four Fire subquadrants. These angels assist in transmutations. They can help to disperse the lower elements of the human nature such as egotism, fear, hate, pride and so on.

THE DEMONS OF THE WATCHTOWERS

Three-lettered names of 128 separate demons can be found by using pairs of letters, from the sixteen squares under the Calvary Cross, together with an appropriate letter from the Tablet of Union. The names of each Lesser Angel consists of two pairs of letters. Each of these pairs is the base of a name of a demon or elemental. The third letter is the prefix to the Lesser Angels, from the Tablet of Union.

For example, in the subquadrant Air of Air, eight demon names are:

XKZ
XTO
XSI
XFM
XNS
XTT
XAS
XND

Another example: In the subquadrant Water of Earth, the eight demon names are:

NAM
NGB
NRL
NIA
NGG
NAL
NMU
NHL

THE CALLS: WHEN TO USE THEM

Dee and Kelly constructed eighteen Calls, or Keys, to be used for either invocations or for traveling in the Spirit Vision. These are rather cumbersome sentences to be recited out loud, prior to any magical operations involving the angels and Aethyrs.

Actually there is a total of 49 Calls. The first is usually numbered 0 and is without words. This Key makes the mind empty of all thoughts, much like the Samadhi of Yoga. It is used to invoke or travel to the highest formless levels beyond the first Aethyr and as such would only be used by the most advanced Adepts.

A single Call is used for all thirty Aethyrs. The only change necessary is to insert the name of the appropriate Aethyr being addressed. In the Call, this name is usually left blank until filled in by a magician as needed.

This leaves eighteen Calls usually numbered one through eighteen. The specific rules governing their use are given in Table VII.

Example 1. To invoke (or visit) any Archangel, recite Call 1 then 2.

Example 2. To invoke (or visit) any Ruling Lesser Angel whose first letter is from the line NANTA (but not the "N", which is only used for Archangels) of the Tablet of Union, recite Call 1, then 2 and then 5.

Example 3. To invoke (or visit) any angel from the subquadrant Air of Air, recite only Call 3.

Example 4. To invoke (or visit) any angel from the subquadrant Water of Fire, recite Call 6 and then 17.

TABLE VII. WHEN TO USE THE EIGHTEEN CALLS

Call No.	When To Use Call
1	Use first for all angels associated with the Tablet of Union.
2	Use second for all Archangels of EHNB of the Tablet of Union as well as for all other angels.
3	Use third for all Ruling Lesser Angels of (E)XARP. Use first for Lesser Angels of the Watchtower of Air. Use first (only) for all angels of Air of Air beginning with IDOIGO.
4	Use third for all Ruling Lesser Angels of (H)KOMA. Use first for all Lesser Angels of the Watchtower of Water. Use first (only) for all angels of Water of Water beginning with NELAPR.
5	Use third for all Ruling Lesser Angels of (N)ANTA. Use first for all Lesser Angels of the Watchtower of Earth. Use first (only) for all angels of Earth of Earth beginning with ABALPT.
6	Use third for all Ruling Lesser Angels of (B)ITOM. Use first for all Lesser Angels of the Watchtower of Fire. Use first (only) for all angels of Fire of Fire beginning with RZIONR.
7	Use second for all angels of Water of Air beginning with LLAKZA.
8	Use second for all angels of Earth of Air beginning with AIAOAI.
9	Use second for all angels of Fire of Air beginning with AOVRRZ.
10	Use second for all angels of Air of Water beginning with OBGOTA.
11	Use second for all angels of Earth of Water beginning with MALADI.
12	Use second for all angels of Fire of Water beginning with IAAASD.
13	Use second for all angels of Air of Earth beginning with ANGPOI.
14	Use second for all angels of Water of Earth beginning with ANAEEM.
15	Use second for all angels of Fire of Earth beginning with OPMNIR.
16	Use second for all angels of Air of Fire beginning with NOALMR.
17	Use second for all angels of Water of Fire beginning with VADALI.
18	Use second for all angels of Earth of Fire beginning with VOLXDO.

THE EIGHTEEN CALLS TO BE RECITED

The eighteen Calls are written in flowery and rather obscure language. The beginner is very apt to "not see the forest for the trees" in this morass of colorful verbiage. The real purpose of these Calls is to place the mind in a proper receptive state. This is difficult to accomplish, however, when the wording is impossible to comprehend. To avoid this problem for the beginner, each call has been slightly revised for simplicity. The actual Calls, as given by Crowley, are contained in Appendix A, for the more daring magician. Accompanying each Call is Crowley's version of the Enochian. The student is encouraged to wade through these and determine for himself, by experience, which version has the best results. Remember, Enochian words are like mantras; they have definite physical vibratory effects as well as emotional and mental effects. But in themselves, they are simply devices used by the magician in order to manifest his will.

1. The First Call.

"I rule over you," declares the God of Justice. His power is exalted above the torment of the world. In his hands, the Sun is like a sword and the Moon is like an all-consuming fire. He measures your clothing material among the available substances and draws you together like the palms of my hands. [Furthermore he says:] "I have decorated your seats with the Fire of Gathering, and have beautified your garments with admiration. I have made a law to govern the Holy Ones, and have delivered a Rod to you, with the Ark of Knowledge. Moreover, you have lifted up your voices and sworn obedience and faith to Him who lives and triumphs, whose beginning is not, and whose end cannot be, who shines like a flame in the center of your palaces, and who rules among you as the balance of righteousness and truth."

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Move therefore, and show yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your creation! Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the First Call. Here the God of Justice is Karma. The pronoun "you" refers throughout to the angels of the Tablet of Union being addressed by the Call.

2. The Second Call.

Can the winged winds understand your wonderous voices? You are the Second of the First. Burning flames outline you when I speak your names. I will treat you like cups for a wedding, or like beautiful flowers in the Chamber of Righteousness. Your feet are stronger than the barren stone, and your voices are mightier than many winds. You are becoming like a building which does not exist save in the Mind of the All-Powerful.
[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

The First commands you to arise and to move therefore toward his servant. Show yourselves in power, and make me a strong Seer-of-things, because I am of Him who lives forever.

Notes to the Second Call. Here the "First" refers to the God of Justice (i.e. Karma) of the first Call. He is above the angels of the Tablet of Union and therefore they are "Second."

3. The Third Call.

"Behold," declares your God, "I am a circle on whose hands stand Twelve Kingdoms. Six of these are seats of life, the rest are like sharp Sickles, or like the Horns of Death. Because of this, the creatures of Earth live or die only in my own hands, which sleep and then rise again."

"In the beginning I made you stewards, and placed you in the twelve seats of govenment. I gave every one of you an appropriate level of power over the 456 true ages of time. My intent was that from the highest vessels and the fartherest corners of your governments, you might work my Power and pour down the fires of life and multiply upon the earth. Thus you have become the skirts of justice and truth."
[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

In the name of this same God, lift yourselves up, I say. Behold, His mercies flourish, and His Name has become mighty among us. In Him we say, move, and descend. Apply yourselves to us as you would to partakers of His Secret Wisdom in your creation.

Notes to the Third Call. Here the "Twelve Kingdoms" are the twelve houses of the Zodiac. Here again the pronoun "you" refers throughout to the angels being addressed. The Enochian word MIKA, which means "mighty" or "powerful", has the numerical value by Gematria of 456. Also, 456 can be reduced, by a process called "Aiq Bkr" or the Qabalah of Nine Chambers, to 4+5+6 = 15, where 15 is the number for the word TA, meaning "correspondence."

4. The Fourth Call.

I place my feet in the South, and look about me and say, "Are not the thunders of increase numbered 33, and do these not rule in the Second Angle? I have placed 9639 servants under them. None have yet numbered them, but One. In them, the Second Beginnings of Things exists and grows strong. They are the successive Numbers of Time. Their powers are like those of the first 456.

"Arise, you Sons of Pleasure, and visit the Earth. I am the Lord your God, who is, and who lives forever."
[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

In the name of the Creator, move and show yourselves as pleasant deliverers, and praise Him among the sons of men.

Notes to the Fourth Call. Here the "Second Angle" is Water. Thirty-three is the numerical value of L-BESZ which means "the first (i.e. primordial) matter." The direction South, can be taken as the direction inward, which is to say toward the spiritual. The number 9636 reduces to 9+6+3+6 = 27 and 2+7 = 9. Also 33 is equivalent to 456 because 3+3 = 6, and 4+5+6 = 15 and 1+5 = 6. The number 9 is the value of the letter T which means the same thing as the word TA ("likeness" or "correspondence").

5. The Fifth Call.

Mighty sounds have entered into the Third Angle, and have become like olives on the Olive Mount. They look with gladness upon the Earth, and dwell in the brightness of the heavens like continual Comforters. On them I have fastened 19 Pillars of Gladness and gave them vessels to water the Earth together with her creatures. They are the brothers of the First and Second. They have begun their own seats and have decorated them with 69,636 ever-burning lamps. Their numbers are as the Beginnings, the Ends, and the Contents of Time.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Therefore come and obey the purpose of your creation. Visit us in peace and comfort. Perfect us as receivers of your mysteries. Why? Because our Lord and Master is the All-One.

Notes to the Fifth Call. The "Third Angle" refers to any of the four earth subquadrants. Nineteen is the number for BAG, the name of the 28th Aethyr, and 19x7 = 133, which is the number for VTI, the name of the 25th Aethyr. The number 19 is also the square root of 361, the number for IKH, the name of the 11th Aethyr. Also, 69,636 = 6+9+6+3+6 = 30 and 30 = 3+0 = 3, i.e. the Third Angle.

6. The Sixth Call.

The spirits of the Fourth Angle are nine who are mighty in the Firmament of Waters, who the First has planted as a torment to the wicked and a garland to the righteous. He gave them fiery darts to protect the earth, and 7699 continual workmen, whose courses visit the earth with comfort and who are in government and continuance like the Second and the Third.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Therefore listen to my voice. I have spoken of you, and I have advanced you in power and presence. Your works shall be a song of honor, and the praise of your God shall be in your creation.

Notes to the Sixth Call. The "Fourth Angle" refers to any of the four fire subquadrants. The number 9 occurs throughout these Calls. This is the occult number for the circumference of a circle (360 degrees reduces to 9) and therefore any outward or objective quantity. The number 7699 reduced to 7+6+9+9 = 31, an important number in Qabalism, and 3+1 = 4, i.e. the Fourth Angle.

7. The Seventh Call.

The East is a House of Virgins who sing praises among the flames of the first glory. There the Lord opened his mouth, and they became 28 living dwellings wherein the strength of man rejoices. They are clothed with ornaments of brightness, and they work wonders on all creatures. Their kingdoms and continuance are like the Third and Fourth; strong towers and places of comfort, the seats of mercy and continuance.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

O you Servants of Mercy, move and appear! Sing praises to the Creator, and be mighty among us, so that this remembrance will give power, and our strength will grow strong in our Comforter.

Notes to the Seventh Call. The East is the direction of the Watchtower of Air. Twenty-eight is the number for the word BALT which means "justice." Here the angels are associated with mercy and comfort. Also, $28 = 2+8 = 10$, and $10 = 1+0 = 1$, i.e. the First Watchtower.

8. The Eighth Call.

The Midday, where the First is like the Third Heaven, is made of 26 Hyacinthine Pillars. Here the Elders become strong. "I have prepared them for my own righteousness," declared the Lord, whose long continuance is like a shield to the Stooping Dragon, and like the harvest of a widow. How many are there who remain in the Glory of the Earth, who live, and who shall not see Death until the House falls and the Dragon sinks?

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Come away! The Thunders have spoken. Come away! The Crowns of the Temple and the Robe of Him who is, was, and will be crowned, are divided. Come forth! Appear, to the terror of the Earth and our comfort, and to the comfort of such who are prepared.

Notes to the Eighth Call. "The First is like the Third Heaven" refers to the subquadrant Earth (third) of Air (first). Twenty-six is the number for the word BAHAL meaning "to shout" or "to cry out." Also 26 is half of 52, the number of QAA, "creation." Twenty-six is also the Enochian number for DAATH, the hidden Eleventh Sephiroth. Also $26 = 2+6 = 8$, i.e. the Eighth Call. Here the angels are associated with a culmination of endurance. The "Stooping Dragon" is Apophrassz (the Apophis or Apep of the Egyptians).

9. The Ninth Call.

A mighty guard of fire, with two-edged swords flaming, and with eight Vials of Wrath for two times and a half, and with wings of wormwood and with marrow of salt, have set their feet in the West. They are measured with their 9996 ministers. These gather up the moss of the Earth like the rich man gathers up his treasure. Cursed are they who have iniquities. In the eyes of those with iniquities are mill-stones greater than the Earth and from their mouths run seas of blood. The heads of the Guard of Fire are covered with diamonds, and upon their hands are marble stones. Happy is he upon whom they frown not, because the Lord of Righteousness rejoices in them.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Come away, but without your Vials, because the time is such that requires comfort.

Notes to the Ninth Call. The references to Fire of Air are clear here. According to the Zodiac correspondence, West is the direction of Air. Eight Vials for two times and a half: $8+8+4 = 20$. Also, $9996 = 9+9+9+6 = 33$, and $33 = 3+3 = 6$. Furthermore, $20+6 = 26$. Both 20 and 26 are Enochian numbers for DAATH, the Dark Sephiroth. Here the angels are clearly purgative.

10. The Tenth Call

The Thunders of Judgment and Wrath are numbered, and are contained in the North, in the likeness of an Oak whose branches are 22 nests of lamentation and weeping which are stored up for the Earth. These burn night and day, and vomit out the heads of scorpions and live sulphur mingled with poison. These are the Thunders that, 5678 times in the twenty-fourth part of a moment, roar with a hundred mighty earthquakes and a thousand times as many surges. They rest not, neither do they know any time here. One rock brings forth a thousand, just as the heart of man brings forth his thoughts. Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Yea, Woe to the Earth, because her iniquity is, was, and shall be great.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]
Come away! But not your mighty sounds.

Notes to the Tenth Call. According to the Zodiac correspondence, North is the direction of Water and these "Thunders" and "mighty sounds" occur in air (i.e. Air of Water). The "22 nests" are the trumps of the Tarot, the paths between the Sephiroth on the Tree of Life. 5678 = 5+6+7+8 = 26, and 2+6 =8, the occult number for spiral cycles. Here the angels are associated with the turmoil and flux of powerful karmic forces.

11. The Eleventh Call.

The mighty Seat groaned, and there were five Thunders that flew into the East, and then an eagle spoke and cried aloud, "Come away!" And then they gathered themselves together and became the House of Death, which is measured, and they were like those whose number is 31.
[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]
Come away! I have prepared a place for you. Therefore, move and show yourselves. Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Eleventh Call. East is the direction of Air. Also, "Thunders" and "eagle" suggest air. However, all of the air has "come away" leaving Earth of Water which is "the House of Death." Thirty-one is the number for the word BESZ, "matter." It should also be noted that Death is the 13th path on the Tree of Life and 13 is the reverse of 31 (both reduce to 4, the occult number for solidity and firmness which characterize the element Earth). Here opportunity and possiblility give way to fatality which is a kind of death (in an occult sense, death is stagnation). Also, if 5 (the number of Thunders) is added to 31, the sum reduces to 9 (see the note to the Fourth Call).

12. The Twelfth Call.

O you who range in the South, and who are the 28 Lanterns of Sorrow, bind up your girdles, and visit us. Bring down your 3663 servants so that the Lord may be magnified. His name among you is Wrath.
[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]
Move I say, and show yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Twelfth Call. South is the direction of the element Fire. Twenty-eight is the number for the word BALT which means "justice." Also, 28 reduces to 1. 3663 = 3+6+6+3 = 18, and 18 = 1+8 = 9. The sum of 3663 and 28 reduces to 1, the occult number for unity. Sorrow and wrath accompany the purification by fire only for the unprepared.

13. The Thirteenth Call.

O Swords of the South, who have 42 eyes to stir up the Wrath of Sin, who make men drunken who are empty; Behold, the Promise of God, and His Power which is called among you a bitter sting.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Thirteenth Call. The "Swords of the South" can also be considered "spiritual swords" because South is the direction of the spiritual. The "Promise of God" refers to the Air of Earth, the region of possible manifestations. Forty-two is the number of the word ELZAP which means "way" or "course." Also, 42 = 4+2 = 6, the occult number for the principle of animation and physical nature. The angels called here can help hasten the growth of one's karmic seeds.

14. The Fourteenth Call.

O Sons of Fury, O Children of the Just One, who sits upon 24 seats, who vex all creatures of the Earth with age, and who have 1636 servants under you; Behold, the Voice of God, the promise of Him who is called among you, Fury or Extreme Justice.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Move and show yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same god, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Fourteenth Call. Here the angels are associated with fury and turmoil, albeit karmic. Twenty-four is the number for LEA, the name of the 16th Aethyr, and PAZ, the 4th Aethyr. Also, 24 x 2 = 48 where 48 is the number for POP, the 19th Aethyr, and LOE, the 12th Aethyr. All of these Aethyrs are related through the number 24. Also the word TAFA, "poison" is 24. This number reduces to 6 (2+4 = 6). 1636 = 1+6+3+6 =16, one third of 48. Also 1+6 =7, the occult number for completeness. Seven is also half of fourteen, the number of this Call. The sum of 24 and 1636 reduces to 6+7 = 13 and 13 =1+3 =4, i.e. the Fourth Watchtower, or Earth. These angels seek change which appears as fury to the unprepared, and justice to the initiated.

15. The Fifteenth Call.

O Governor of the First Flame, under whose wings are 6739 servants, who weaves the Earth with dryness, and who knows the Great Name of "Righteousness," and the Seal of Honor.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Fifteenth Call. The "First Flame" relates this Call to the Element of Fire, and "weaving the Earth with dryness" relates it to Earth (i.e. to Fire of Earth). 6739 = 6+7+3+9 =25 and 25 is the number for BESZ, "matter." Also, 2+5 = 7 to show that the servants of this Call are similar to those in the 14th Call. These angels are associated with the manifestation of purity.

16. The Sixteenth Call.

O Second Flame, O House of Justice, who has His beginning in glory, and who comforts the Just, who walks upon the Earth with 8763 feet, and who understands and separates creatures. You are great, like the God of Conquest.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Sixteenth Call. The sense of justice and comfort given here characterizes the subquadrant of Air. The "Flame" refers to the element Fire. 8763 = 8+7+6+3 = 24 (see the 14th Call for this number).

17. The Seventeenth Call.

O Third Flame, whose wings are thorns to stir up vexation, and who has 7336 living lamps going before you, and whose God is "Wrath in Anger."

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Gird up your loins and listen! Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Seventeenth Call. The "Flame" refers to the element Fire, and the "stirring up" is a reference to Water. When Water meets Fire, a great disturbance or "vexation" is produced. 7336 = 7+3+3+6 =19, and 19 = 1+9 =10 =1+0 =1.

18. The Eighteenth Call.

O Mighty Light and burning Flame of Comfort, who unveils the Glory of God to the center of the Earth, and in who the 6332 Secrets of Truth have their abode, and who is called in your kingdom, "Joy" and who is not to be measured.

[The magician addresses the appropriate angels and says:]

Be a window of comfort to me! Move and appear! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest.

Notes to the Eighteenth Call. Here Fire of Fire is emphasized, but the secret nature of this fire is joy. 6332 = 6+3+3+2 = 14, the number for the word AG meaning "no" or "not." Also 14 = 1+4 = 5, the occult number for a mixture of spirit and matter (also the number for man).

HOW TO INVOKE THE ARCHANGELS AND ANGELS

The Kerubic Angels, Archangels and Lesser Angels are all invoked using the appropriate Calls from Table VII, together with the Pentagram Ritual. Each Angel is attributed to the element of the corresponding Watchtower. The Archangels and Ruling Lesser Angels are attributed to Spirit, the element of the Tablet of Union.

A pentagram has five points and each corresponds to an element, and therefore to one of the Holy Tablets. During the ritual, a pentagram is drawn for a particular Angel or Archangel by beginning it at the appropriate point. The pentagram is shown in Figure 16. The four lower points correspond to the Watchtowers, and above them is Spirit which corresponds to the Tablet of Union.

Invocation of Archangels and Angels: Step by Step

A. PREPARATION.

1. Select the Archangel or Angel to be invoked. This will depend upon the motive or purpose for the invocation.
2. Determine the corresponding Watchtower, Angel and Element.
3. Determine and be familiar with the appropriate Calls, from Table VII.
4. Memorize the pronounciation of all names involved. The order of the Enochian Hierarchies is:
   - a. Great Holy Name
   - b. Great King
   - c. Six Seniors
   - d. Calvary Cross Angel (six letters)
   - e. Calvary Cross Controlling Angel (five letters)
   - f. Archangel
   - g. Kerubic Angel
   - h. Ruling Lesser Angel
   - i. Lesser Angel
   - j. Demons
5. Consult Figures 16, 17 and 18 to determine the appropriate pentagrams to be drawn.
6. Stand facing the appropriate Watchtower (i.e. North, South, East, or West from Figure 8).

B. INVOCATION.

1. Begin by reciting out loud the appropriate Call or Calls in their proper order. Concentration should place the mind in a receptive state, tuned to the vibratory forces of the particular Angel being invoked.
2. Trace a large pentagram in the air with either a magic wand or rod.
   - a. Begin at the point of the pentagram shown in Figures 17 and 18 depending upon the corresponding element. There are two pentagrams for the Tablet of Union, one for E and B (both are active) and another for H and N (both are passive).

b. Trace the pentagram in a single unbroken line. Begin in the direction shown in the figures by the arrow and continue until returning to the starting point.

c. Imagination is important here. As the magician traces the lines in the air, he imagines that a pentagram is actually being drawn. He must be able to see it very clearly in his mind. The color of this psychic construction is as follows:

If the starting point is:	Then the color of the pentagram is:
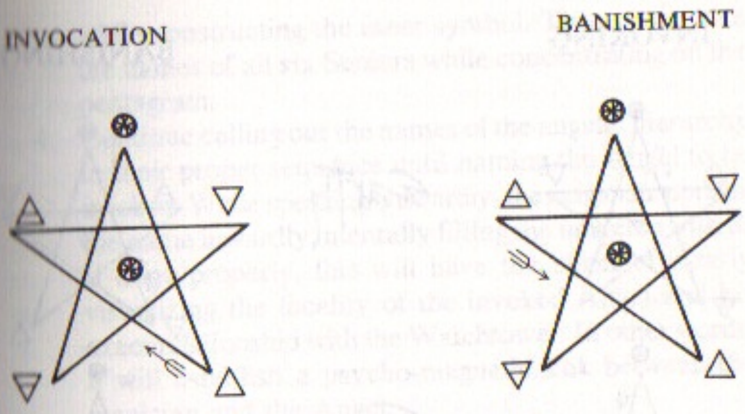
Spirit (E,B)	bright purple
Spirit (H,N)	deep purple
Air	sky blue
Water	sea green
Earth	amber
Fire	bright fiery vermillion

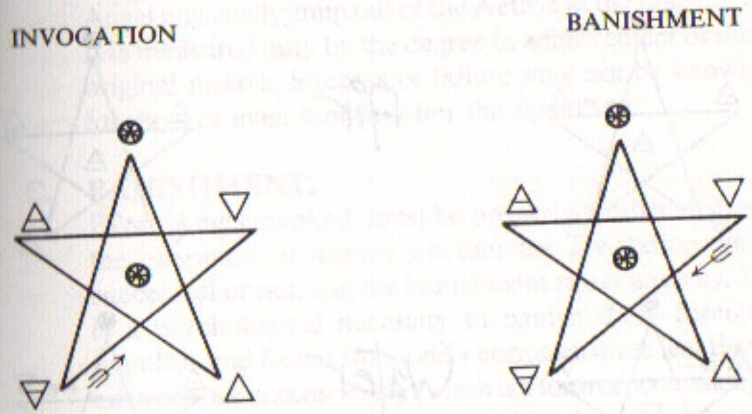
d. To further tax the imagination, after any pentagram is drawn, imagine the following symbol at the center of it, shining with the same color:

Spirit	⊛
Air	🜁
Water	🜄
Earth	🜃
Fire	🜂

3. As a general rule, pronounce the Holy Name while tracing the pentagram and the Great King's name



Pentagrams for Invocation and Banishment of Angels and Archangels Whose Names Begin with the E(XARP) of Air and the B(ITOM) of Fire.



Pentagrams for Invocation and Banishment of Angels and Archangels Whose Names Begin with the H(KOMA) of Water and the N(ANTA) of Earth.

while constructing the inner symbol. Then pronounce the names of all six Seniors while concentrating on the pentagram.

4. Continue calling out the names of the angelic hierarchy in their proper sequence until naming the Angel to be invoked. While speaking outwardly, the magician vibrates the name inwardly, mentally filling the universe with it. If done properly, this will have the effect of clearly visualizing the locality of the invoked Angel and his exact relationship with the Watchtower. In other words, it will establish a psycho-magnetic link between the magician and the Angel.
5. If successful, he will appear in the pentagram in some form and will converse with the magician. If partially successful, the magician may catch an idea or thought from him.
6. Success or failure is not measured by requiring that an Angel physically jump out of the Aethyr at the magician. It is measured only by the degree in achievement of the original motive. Success or failure may not be known for days or even months after the operation.

C. BANISHMENT.

1. Every Angel invoked, must be properly banished after the operation. If unsure whether the invocation was successful or not, use the banishment ritual anyway. It is a psychological necessity to banish these foreign impulses and forces from one's consciousness lest they influence one unconsciously (which is a form of possession).
2. To banish an Archangel or Angel back to his region, simply make another pentagram in reverse, as shown in Figures 17 and 18.
3. As the banishing pentagram is drawn, imagine that the colored lines previously traced are being erased (this may take some practice at first). Imagine that the central symbol disappears simultaneously. When the banishing pentagram has been drawn properly, the magician will no longer see any pentagram at all. He should feel that a great distance once again separates him from the Angel.

An Invocation of a Lesser Angel.

Suppose, for an example, one would like to increase his capacity for knowledge. Perhaps he has a poor memory, or is slow to learn new things. In order to ease this problem, he decides to call on the assistance of ABMO, the highest of the Lesser Angels in the subquadrant Earth of Air.

As part of his preparation, the magician finds that ABA can mean "to bend" or "to come down" and that OM means "knowledge" or "understanding." AB-OM can thus mean "the coming down of knowledge," and the Angel AB-MO (where MO is an anagram for OM) is "he who brings down knowledge." He also calculates the gematric value of ABMO to be 131 and uses this number to find an equivalent Enochian word or phrase. He knows that he will be working on the Watchtower of Air, so he reviews the Governing Angels of this quadrant and the two pentagrams to be used (one for invoking the other for banishing).

The magician begins by casting aside all distracting thoughts and concerns. He should be alone, or at least without distractions or interruptions. Once such operations begin, any interruption could be disastrous.

The magician stands with arms outstretched facing the East and recites Call no. 3 and then Call no. 8. The meanings of these Calls must be clear. Their symbolism should lead to a vibratory feeling for the subquadrant Earth of Air.

Then the magician speaks the Holy Name, Oh-roh Ee-bah Ah-oh-zod-pee and vibrates it in his mind while tracing a large light blue Air Pentagram. He should be able to see the blue pentagram shining in the air before him.

He then sees a light blue symbol for air (△) in the center of the pentagram while he simultaneously vibrates the five-syllabled name of Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh, "he whose voice seems to have wings."

As he looks at the completed pentagram, he slowly vibrates the names of the six Seniors:

Hab-bee-oh-roh
Ah-ah-oh-zodah-eefeh
Heh-teh-noh-rah-dah
Ah-ha-oh-zodah-pee
Ah-veh-toh-tah-rah
Hee-poh-teh-gah

By now the magician should be in good rapport with the Watchtower of Air. A psycho-magnetic link should be clearly established. He is now ready to proceed to the proper subquadrant. He begins by saying:

> "Ahee-ah-oh-ahee, who stands upright at the great Cross, be within me, and grant my request.
>
> Ohee-ee-ee-teh, who expands outward to control the mighty Cross, be within me and without me, and grant my request.
>
> O Mighty Archangel, Eh-ten-beh-rah, who guards over the Earth of Air, manifest my request; make my inner desire for knowledge to be an outer reality.
>
> O mighty and merciful Kerubic Angel, Ten-beh-rah, may my inherent capacity for knowledge be made manifest in this life. O Ten-beh-rah, may a balance be made between ignorance and wisdom.
> O kindly presiding Angel, Rah-beh-moh, may knowledge of all things come easily to me."

The magician has now worked his way down to the Angel who is to be invoked, ABMO. Consciousness which was first expanded in all directions (i.e. blank), has been guided to the great Watchtower of Air in the East, and then to the subquadrant Earth of Air, and then to the specific squares of that subquadrant where the Lesser Angel ABMO dwells. All the while the original goal is kept firmly in mind and the Air Pentagram still sparkles in the air before the magician's eyes. He is now ready to invoke ABMO:

> "O Ah-bem-oh, who governs over the three Lesser Angels Nah-koh, Oh-ken-em, and Ess-hah-el; assist me!
>
> O Ah-bem-oh, whose number is one hundred and thirty-one, attend me!
>
> You are ETHAMZA (Eteh-ahm-zodah) MADBESZ (Em-ah-deh Bess-zod) (i.e. "you are hidden by the god of matter." Both of these equal 131).
>
> Ah-bem-oh, Ah-bem-oh, come to me. Make the ASr of Knowledge to be the earth of intelligence for me. Help me to fully realize my inherent ability to learn and to retain what is learned. May I be made firm in knowledge even as you are earthed in Air.
> Ah-bem-oh, assist me!

Now the magician should feel the airy nature of knowledge becoming a solid fact within himself. He imagines ABMO in the pentagram showering forth his ability to manifest the capacity for knowledge. He is now one who can learn easily and remember facts over long periods of time. His own inherent ability will now surely be enhanced.

In gratitude to ABMO, he now banishes the Angel with a banishing Air Pentagram. ABMO thus returns to the Watchtower of Air in the East and the pentagram is gone from his sight.

A successful outcome here is likely because the magician has requested that an inherent ability (i.e. inherent in man) be made manifest in this life. The Angel was not asked to perform an impossible mission. He was asked only to assist the magician to make a desired psychological change within himself in accordance with the Great Work. Enochian Magic is extremely powerful in this regard.

RELATIONSHIP OF THE WATCHTOWERS TO THE TREE OF LIFE

Both Crowley and the Golden Dawn sought to show a correspondence between the Enochian system and the Hebrew system of the Qabalah and its Tree of Life. The Tree of Life consists of ten Sephiroth, globes of splendor, from Kether the most spiritual down to Malkuth, our Earth and the most material. These globes are situated as shown in Figure 19. There are 22 paths connecting these globes. These paths are each represented by one of the trump cards of the Tarot. Figure 19 also shows the matching Enochian letters.

It can be seen from this, and from the data contained in Table II, that an exact match is not possible. Three paths have two letters each, while three paths (Sun, Tower, and Fortune) have none. Crowley states (in THE VISION AND THE VOICE) that the Aethyrs approach the Tree of Life, but are nowhere identical. Nevertheless, a fairly good correspondence can be made using the Abyss as a common reference point for the two systems. The dark and hidden Sephiroth of Daath corresponds tolerably well with the tenth Aethyr.

The Calvary Crosses of the Watchtowers bear a direct correspondence with the Sephiroth, as shown in Figure 20. Each Calvary Cross in the four Fire subquadrants, represent the Sephiroth in the Atziluth World. Each Cross in the four Water subquadrants, correspond to the Sephiroth in the Briah World. Each Cross in the Air subquadrants, the Yetzirah World, and the four Earth subquadrants, the Assiah World. These four worlds or cosmic planes each contain ten Sephiroth according to Qabalistic tradition.

RELATIONSHIP OF THE WATCHTOWERS TO THE UNIVERSE

According to ancient occult philosophy, each person is always located in the center of the universe. The universe itself is said to be like a circle whose circumference is everywhere (i.e. infinite) and whose center is nowhere (i.e. infinitesimal). In magic, this idea means that it is convenient to imagine ourselves at the center of the universe just as it is convenient to imagine that the universe is endless. Whether these things be so or not, is of no consequence to the magician. He finds it convenient to imagine that he is the geometric point at the center of infinity. He finds no difficulty in regarding others as also geometric points, or consciousness-centers, at the center of the universe. If the universe is considered to be infinite, then virtually any point one cares to select can be said to lay at the center.

The Tablet of Union (Figure 9) is the central region of the universe, according to the Enochian magical system. The magician therefore visualizes himself at the center of the Tablet of Union. Around him, like walls rising up from the ends of the world, are the four Watchtowers. Around these Watchtowers are the thirty Aethyrs rising up into the spiritual realms of infinity.

The 30th through the 27th Aethyrs are located in what is generally called the Astral Plane. The 26th through the 11th are on the Mental Plane. The 10th is on the dividing line between formless spirit and formed matter. This is usually called the Great Outer Abyss, or simply the Abyss. The higher Aethyrs, 9th through the 2nd, are spiritual. The highest Aethyr, the first, is divine.

Figure 21 is a diagram of this relationship. The magician visualizes himself standing between the "O" of HKOMA and the "N" of NANTA at the center of the universe. In this way, the quadrants, Aethrys, Angels, and so forth can become very real and meaningful. Mind traveling to certain squares, subquadrants or Aethyrs, is equivalent to traveling through one's own universe. Figure 21 must not be taken too literally by the beginner. It is a diagram only. Actually the Watchtowers and Aethyrs overlap to a large extent. In fact, the Governors of the Aethyrs are named in the letters of the Watchtowers and through a study of these names, the actual relationships can become known.

TRAVELING IN THE SPIRIT VISION: GENERAL

When Angels are invoked, there must be a reason or motive behind the invocation which relates to the nature of the Angel. Invocations are therefore generally limited in scope. They are constrained by the motive. Not so is traveling in the Spirit Vision.

The ability to consciously leave the physical body and travel mentally through the astral and mental planes is rare, but certainly not unknown. The Golden Dawn referred to such conscious out-of-body experiences as traveling in the Spirit Vision. In truth, whether one actually leaves the physical body in a subtle body and travels in specific directions through the Watchtowers and Aethyrs, or simply uses his imagination tempered by known correspondences, is immaterial to a successful operation. Anyone with a colorful imagination can astral travel, and vice versa.

Just as the Qabalist travels mentally along the paths of the Tarot to the Sephiroth, so the magician here can travel through the four Watchtowers and the thirty Aethyrs.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: THREE MAGICAL OPERATIONS WITH SPIRIT VISION

The three most important operations using the Spirit Vision in Enochian Magic are:

a. Scrying in the Spirit Vision
b. Traveling in the Spirit Vision
c. Rising on the Planes or Aethyrs

a. Scrying in the Spirit Vision. This is identical with clairvoyance or psychic vision. It is the method most recommended for beginners and should be practiced until proficiency is reached before the other two operations are attempted. Basically, it consists of using signposts or known magical symbols and correspondences to "see", with inner vision, the regions or subquadrants so symbolized. The signposts are used to "prime the pump" of the imagination as well as to keep the imagination in check once it begins. Start by meditating on the symbols and signposts pertinent to the operation. Then gradually slide into seeing them mentally rather than physically. The result will be a psychic vision of the region or subquadrant under consideration.

b. Traveling in the Spirit Vision. This operation is also known as Astral Traveling or Astral Projection. Here the magician actually separates his consciousness from his physical body and, by a concentration of will, projects himself in either an astral or mental body to the desired Aethyr or Watchtower Square. There he observes the region and its inhabitants directly and returns whenever he so desires. The mechanics of this operation are identical to those for falling asleep and entering a dream. The only real difference is that dreams are subconscious and spontaneous whereas this magical operation is conscious and deliberate. In Astral Projection the magician remains in complete control of any situation that may develop. Unlike scrying, which is two-dimensional, traveling in the Spirit Vision is three-dimensional. The magician actually enters into the region rather than merely visualizing it.

c. Rising on the Planes or Aethyrs. This operation is the most advanced and is not recommended for beginners. It should be attempted only after proficiency is established in Astral Projection. The process consists of raising consciousness from the Physical Plane upward (relatively speaking) toward the spiritual realms of the Spiritual Plane and then through them to the Divine Plane. In this sense it is not unlike mysticism and indeed the result is a mystical experience or samadhi. The Western Qabalistic Model of the Tree of Life (Sephiroth), the Eastern Gupta-Vidya Model (Globes) and the Enochian Model (Aethyrs) can all be used as structural maps for consciousness during this operation (these models will be described in detail later).

THE TABLET COLORS

Each magician should draw his own Tablets. The colors used should be those prescribed by the Golden Dawn, and presented by Robert Wang in THE SECRET TEMPLE (Weiser, New York, 1980). These are shown in Figures 22 and 23. Above each Tablet is the appropriate sigil of the elemental king whose name is found from the Great Seal.

These colored Tablets are important for traveling in the Spirit Vision. They give a sense of orientation and direction, as well as expressing the overall mood or tone of the squares. Familiarization of the territory beforehand, can prevent one from going astray during an operation.

HOW TO MAKE EACH TABLET SQUARE INTO A PYRAMID

The Golden Dawn worked out a system whereby each of the Watchtower squares can be made into a truncated pyramid (This is a pyramid with its top cut off). Figure 24 shows a typical example.

Each pyramid is positioned so that triangle no. 2 faces the top of the Tablet. An elaborate scheme has been devised so that each face of every pyramid has correspondences with planets, Tarot cards, Hebrew letters, and elements. Here, it is sufficient to consider only the elements. The appropriate Enochian letter of the square is placed in the center square which represents the chopped-off top of the pyramid. The similarity between Figure 24 (microcosm) and figure 21 (macrocosm) should not go unnoticed.

THE SERVIENT SQUARES

Making Pyramids of the Servient Squares.

The Sixteen Servient Squares under the horizontal bar of each Calvary Cross are especially easy to convert into element-affected pryamids. Using the triangular side numbers as shown in Figure 24, the general rules are:

Triangle no. 1 = Element of the Tablet or Watchtower
Triangle no. 2 = Element of ruling file or column
Triangle no. 3 = Element of Subquadrant
Triangle no. 4 = Element of ruling rank or row

To find the appropriate element for any column or row of a Servient Square, use the correspondence shown in Figure 25. The numbers 1 through 4 represent the elements attributed to the row or column indicated. As an example, the Servient Square "R" of BRAP in the Water subquadrant of the Watchtower of Fire (i.e. Water of Fire), should be designated,

Triangle no. 1 = Fire
Triangle no. 2 = Earth
Triangle no. 3 = Water
Triangle no. 4 = Air

As an additional aid in understanding these Servient Squares, Figure 26 shows the influences of these elements on any square in terms of its strength and/or weakness. For example, in the "R" of BRAP, it should be clear that Water will be very strong and Air very weak while Earth and Fire are about even.

Egyptian Deities of the Servient Squares

The question of why a magician should make pyramids out of the Servient Squares will now be answered. Each of the Servient Squares in the Watchtowers is ruled by an Egyptian god or goddess. The pyramid, with its four-sided attribution of elements, is used to determine which Egyptian deity presides over each pyramid.

Although technically not part of the Enochian Hierarchy, each of these deities can be considered as an additional ruler. However, they usually do not answer to the pentagram or hexagram rituals. For this reason they are seldom invoked but are primarily used when traveling in the Spirit Vision. They are much more familiar to most occultists and magicians than the relatively obscure Enochian Angels. Indeed, Egyptian tradition is the bedrock of western occultism (the Tarot, for example, is the "Book of Thoth", the ibis-headed god of wisdom and magic). Their use thus aids the magician to assimilate the general contour of those subtle regions symbolized by each Servient Square. In this way, the Enochian Hierarchy itself can easily become more familiar.

The exact Egyptian god or goddess of any Servient Square is found as follows:

1. First convert the Servient Square to a pyramid.
2. Determine the element attributed to each of the four triangular sides.
3. Determine the presiding Egyptian deity from these elements by using Table VIII.

TABLE VIII. EGYPTIAN DEITIES OF THE PYRAMIDS

No.	Elements in Pyramid	Egyptian Ruling Deity
1	One triangle of each element.	Osiris, god of death; ruler of the reincarnation cycle.
2	At least three triangles of Water.	Isis, goddess of nature and magic; ruler of all solidification processes; sister of Nephthys and Set, sister and wife of Osiris.
3[a]	At least three triangles of Earth.	Horus, hawk-headed god of human evolution; son of Osiris and Isis.
4[a]	At least three triangles of Fire.	Nephthys, goddess of the esoteric; ruler of all dispersion processes.
5	At least three triangles of Air.	Aroueris, or Ur-Horu, Horus the Elder Horus as humanity matured.
6	Two triangles of Earth and two of Water.	Hathor, cow-goddess, an aspect of Isis as the wife of Horus.
7	Two triangles of Fire and two of Water.	Sothis, goddess of the dog-star Sirius; a form of Isis who initiates each new season.
8	Two triangles of Air and two of Water.	Harpocrates, or Hor-pa-Khrat, Horus the Child, ruler of Silence.
9	Two triangles of Fire and two of Earth.	Apis, god of the emotions and of desire in the form of a bull.
10	Two triangles of Earth and two of Air.	Anubis, dog-headed god of the subtle substances and guide through the after-death state; son of Osiris and Nephthys.
11[b]	Two triangles of Fire and two of Air.	Bast, cat-headed goddess of darkness and Witchcraft.
12	At least one triangle of Fire, Water and Earth.	Mestha, protector of disembodied consciousness; son of Horus, in the form of a human-headed mummy.
13	At least one triangle of Fire, Water and Air.	Hapi, protector of disembodied consciousness; son of Horus, in the form of an ape-headed mummy.
14	At least one triangle of Earth, Water and Air.	Tuamautel, protector of disembodied consciousness; son of Horus, in the form of a dog-headed mummy.
15	At least one triangle of Earth, Fire and Air.	Qebhsennuf, protector of disembodied consciousness; son of Horus, in the form of a hawk-headed mummy.

[a] Here nos. 3 and 4 are the reverse of the Golden Dawn attributions. Nephthys is the ruler of the Fire of Dispersion and should control Fire, while Horus is the prototype of man and should rule Earth. The Golden Dawn listing is Either a mistake or a deliberate blind.

[b] Bast is used where Water is strong and Fire relatively weak. In areas where Fire is strong and Water relatively weak, use the lioness headed goddess Sakhet, ruler of heat and fire, and wife of the god Ptah.

The Sphynx of the Servient Squares.

In addition to an Egyptian deity, each pyramid of the Servient Squares is said to contain a sphynx. This sphynx is a composite of four basic sections and is dependent upon the elements of each triangle. The student can construct a rough likeness of this sphynx as follows:

1. Head. The element of Triangle No. 2 determines the head and whether the sphynx has wings:
    Air = Human-headed with wings like an angel
    Water = Eagle- or hawk-headed with wings
    Earth = Bull-headed without wings
    Fire = Lion-headed without wings
2. Upper Body. The elements of Triangles 1 and 3 together determine the torso and arms or forelimbs:
    Air = Human torso/limbs plus wings
    Water = Eagle or hawk torso plus wings
    Earth = Bull-like torso/forelimbs
    Fire = Lion-like torso/forelimbs
3. Lower Body. The element of Triangle No. 4 determines the lower limbs (and tail for bull, eagle and lion):
    Air = Human legs and feet
    Water = Eagle or hawk legs and tail
    Earth = Bull-like legs and tail
    Fire = Lion-like legs and tail
4. Sex. When Air or Fire are emphasized by the triangles the tendency of the sphynx is to be male. When Water or Earth dominate, the tendency is for the sphynx to be female.

Note. The primary purpose of including the sphynx in any pyramid visitation is for a check. If the sphynx seen does not conform to the above signposts, then something is wrong with the Spirit Vision and the operation should be concluded as quickly as possible.

MAKING PYRAMIDS OF THE GREAT CROSS SQUARES

The 36 squares of the Great Cross of each Watchtower can be converted into pyramids. This is done for meditational purposes as well as to develop signposts for visiting in the Spirit Vision. The Great Cross consists of one row and two columns, as shown in Figure 11 for the Watchtower of Air. Conversion is in accordance with Figure 24 which shows the four trianglar sides of a typical pyramid. The rules which apply are:

Triangle No. 1 = Zodiac Influences
Triangle No. 2 = Element of Spirit
Triangle No. 3 = Planet Influences
Triangle No. 4 = Element of Watchtower

1. Zodiac Influences. The general rules for attributing the Zodiac signs are:
   - (a) The four fixed signs are given to the row (Linea Spiritus Sancti).
   - (b) The four cardinal signs are given to the left-hand column (left side of the Linea Dei Patris Filiique).
   - (c) The four mutable signs are given to the right-hand column (right side of the Linea Dei Patris Filiique).
   - (d) Each sign influences three adjacent squares for a total of 36 squares.

The specific rules for Zodiac Influences are:

- a. Great Cross of Air.
  - (1) Row. From left to right, three squares each, are: Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo, and then Taurus.
  - (2) Left-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Libra, Cancer, Aries, and then Capricorn.
  - (3) Right-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Gemini, Pisces, Sagittarius, and then Virgo.

- b. Great Cross of Water.
  - (1) Row. From left to right, three squares each, are: Scorpio, Leo, Taurus, and then Aquarius.
  - (2) Left-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Cancer, Aries, Capricorn, and then Libra.
  - (3) Right-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Pisces, Sagittarius, Virgo, and then Gemini.
- c. Great Cross of Earth.
  - (1) Row. From left to right, three squares each, are: Taurus, Aquarius, Scorpio, and then Leo.
  - (2) Left-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Capricorn, Libra, Cancer, and then Aries.
  - (3) Right-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Virgo, Gemini, Pisces, and then Sagittarius.
- d. Great Cross of Fire.
  - (1) Row. From left to right, three squares each, are: Leo, Taurus, Aquarius, and then Scorpio.
  - (2) Left-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Aries, Capricorn, Libra, and then Cancer.
  - (3) Right-hand column. From top to bottom, three squares each, are: Sagittarius, Virgo, Gemini, and then Pisces.

2. Spirit. The second triangle of each pyramid of every Great Cross is assigned the element of Spirit.
3. Planet Influences. Planetary influences are obtained from occult correspondences between the seven sacred planets and the Decans of the Zodiac. These are as follows:
   - a. Row, from left to right.

     Leo = Saturn, then Jupiter, and then Mars
     Scorpio = Mars, then Sun and then Venus
     Aquarius = Venus, then Mercury and then Moon

Taurus = Mercury, then Moon, and then Saturn

b. Left-hand column, top to bottom.
    Aries = Mars, then Sun, and then Venus
    Capricorn = Jupiter, then Mars, and then Sun
    Libra = Moon, then Saturn, and then Jupiter Cancer = Venus, then Mercury, and then Moon

c. Right-hand column, top to bottom.
    Gemini = Jupiter, then Mars, and then Sun
    Pisces = Saturn, then Jupiter, and then Mars
    Sagittarius = Mercury, then Moon, and then Saturn
    Virgo = Sun, then Venus, and then Mercury

4. The fourth triangle of each pyramid of every Great Cross is assigned the element of the Watchtower.
5. Color.
    a. Zodiac Influences. These triangles (No. 1) are colored according to type as:
        Fiery Signs (Aries, Leo, Sagittarius) are red
        Watery Signs (Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces) are blue
        Airy Signs (Gemini, Libra, Aquarius) are yellow Earthy Signs (Taurus, Virgo, Capricorn) are black
    b. Spirit. All Spirit triangles (No. 2) are white.
    c. Planet Influences. These triangles (No. 3) are colored as:
        Sun and Jupiter are red (Fire)
        Saturn and Mercury are yellow (Air)
        Venus and Moon are black (Earth)
        Mars is blue (Water)
    d. Watchtower. These triangles (No. 4) are colored according to the standard Watchtower colors:
        Air = yellow
        Water = blue
        Earth = black
        Fire = red

Example No. 1.
The square "I" which is the fourth square from the left along the Linea Spiritus Sancti in the Great Watchtower of Air (see Figure 4):
Triangle No. 1 = Scorpio, blue (watery)
Triangle No. 2 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Mars, blue (watery)
Triangle No. 4 = Air, yellow

Example No. 2.
The square "O" which is the second square from the top along the left side of the Linea Dei Patris Filiique in the Great Watchtower of Water (see Figure 5):
Triangle No. 1 = Cancer, blue (watery)
Triangle No. 2 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Mercury, yellow (airy)
Triangle No. 4 = Water, blue

Example No. 3.
The square "A" which is the seventh square from the left along the Linea Spiritus Sancti in the Great Watchtower of Fire (see Figure 7):
Triangle No. 1 = Aquarius, yellow (airy)
Triangle No. 2 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Venus, black (earthy)
Triangle No. 4 = Fire, red

Note: In each Tablet, the two squares of the Linea Spiritus Sancti which cut the Linea Dei Patris Filiique in half are a part of the former, not the latter.

MAKING PYRAMIDS OF THE SEPHIROTIC CROSS SQUARES

The ten squares of each of the Calvary (Sephirotic) Crosses can be converted into pyramids. The Sephirotic or Calvary Cross is shown in Figure 15. It consists of five horizontal squares and six vertical squares with one square shared by the two bars. Conversion is in accordance with Figure 24. The rules which apply are:

Triangle No. 1	Element of Watchtower
Triangle No. 2	Element of Spirit
Triangle No. 4	Element of Subquadrant
Triangle No. 4	Sephirotic Influence

The first three triangles are self-explanatory and should be colored according to the standard Watchtower/Element colors (Spirit is always white). Triangle No. 4 is determined from Figure 20 for each cross. After finding the correct Sephiroth, use the following correspondences:

No.	Sephiroth	Planet	Color
1	Kether	Jupiter	brilliance
2	Chokmah	Mercury	soft blue
3	Binah	Moon	crimson
4	Chesed	Venus	deep violet
5	Geburah	Mars	orange
6	Tiphareth	Sun	pink rose
7	Netzach		white
8	Hod		white
9	Yesod	———	white
10	Malkuth	———	white

Example No. 1.

The first "A" in OLAAD in the subquadrant Earth of Water (see Figure 5). This is also the first "A" in the name MALADI:

Triangle No. 1	Water, blue (Water is weak here)
Triangle No. 2	Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3	Earth, black (Earth is weak here)
Triangle No. 4	Tiphareth (Sun), pink rose (influence here is strong)

Example No. 2.

The first "I" of ILPIZ in the subquadrant of Fire of Earth (see Figure 6):

Triangle No. 1	Earth, black (Earth is strong here)
Triangle No. 2	Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3	Fire, red
Triangle No. 4	Binah (Moon), crimson

Example No. 3.

The "L" in NOALMR in the subquadrant Air of Fire (see Figure 7):

Triangle No. 1	Fire, red
Triangle No. 2	Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3	Air, yellow
Triangle No. 4	Hod, white

MAKING PYRAMIDS OF THE KERUBIC SQUARES

The Kerubic Squares (four in each subquadrant) are located above the horizontal bar of the Calvary Cross, two on each side of the vertical bar. Conversion is in accordance with Figure 24. The rules which apply are:

Triangle No. 1 = Kerubic Element
Triangle No. 2 = Element of Watchtower
Triangle No. 3 = Kerubic Element
Triangle No. 4 = Element of Subquadrant

Triangle Nos. 2 and 4 are self-explanatory and should be colored according to standard Watchtower/Element colors. Triangle No. 1 is always the same element and color as Triangle No. 3. The correct element to use is found from Figure 25. Use Figure 25 to find the corresponding number (column nos. 1 through 4) of the Kerubic Square desired. Then use the key given in Figure 25 to determine the correct Kerubic Element.

Note: The appropriate Kerubic numbers for the subquadrants of Earth and Fire are shown in Figure 25 along the bottom row of each Tablet but are nevertheless the correct Kerubic numbers for the subquadrant. Use only the column numbers, not row numbers.

Example No. 1

The Kerubic Square "S" of PSAK in the subquadrant Earth of Fire:

Triangle No. 1	Air, yellow
Triangle No. 2	Fire, red (Fire is weak here)
Triangle No. 3	Air, yellow
Triangle No. 4	Earth, black

Example No. 2.

The Kerubic Square "A" of PHRA in the subquadrant Water of Earth:

Triangle No. 1	Water, blue (Water is weak here)
Triangle No. 2	Earth, black
Triangle No. 3	Water, blue (Water is strong here)
Triangle No. 4	Water, blue

Example No. 3.

The Kerubic Square "D" of TAAD in the subquadrant Air of Water:

Triangle No. 1	Earth, black (Earth is strong here)
Triangle No. 2.	Water, blue
Triangle No. 3	Earth, black (Earth is weak here)
Triangle No. 4	Air, yellow (Air is weak here)

MAKING PYRAMIDS OF THE TABLET OF UNION SQUARES

The twenty squares of the Tablet of Union can easily be converted into pyramids. This Tablet is shown in Figure 9. Conversion is in accordance with Figure 24. The rules which apply are:

Triangle No. 1 = Element of Column
Triangle No. 2 = Element of Spirit
Triangle No. 3 = Element of Row
Triangle No. 4 = Element of Spirit

Example No. 1. The square with letter "E":
Triangle No. 1 = Spirit, white
Triangles No. 2 and 4 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Air, yellow

Example No. 2. The square with the letter "X":
Triangle No. 1 = Air, yellow
Triangles No. 2 and 4 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Air, yellow

Example No. 3. The square with the letter "P":
Triangle No. 1 = Fire, red
Triangles No. 2 and 4 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Air, yellow

Example No. 4. The square with the letter "K":
Triangle No. 1 = Air, yellow
Triangles No. 2 and 4 = Spirit, white
Triangle No. 3 = Water, blue (water is strong here)

TRAVELING IN THE SPIRIT VISION: STEP BY STEP

A. PREPARATION.

1. Select the area to be visited. This can be either an Aethyr or one of the squares of the four Watchtowers.
2. Determine all known correspondences. These act as guideposts along the way to prevent the imagination from fooling itself or being trapped, or lost. One's imagination will project outwardly one's subconscious fears and tendencies, as in a dream. Traveling in the Spirit Vision is indeed similar to falling asleep. The primary difference is that here one consciously controls events, while dreams are unconscious and spontaneous.
3. Sit or lie quietly and relaxed. It is usually considered best to keep the spine upright and straight. Be this as it may, the goal is to forget the physical body for a time. Twisting oneself into a yogic pretzel is not necessary and can, in fact, be dangerous as well as uncomfortable. The key factor here is to eliminate distractions.

B. THE SPIRIT VISION.

1. Face the appropriate direction.
    a. Use the Zodiac correspondence for the Watchtowers.
    b. No direction is necessary for Aethyrs because they lie in all directions, like concentric spheres.
2. Recite the appropriate Call or Calls.
    a. The Calls for invocations are also used for Spirit Vision.
    b. One Call is used for all of the thirty Aethyrs.
3. Vibrate the names of the corresponding rulers.
    a. The entire appropriate hierarchy should be recited for each square of a Watchtower. Demon names are excluded unless they are specifically being called (not recommended).

b. Each Aethyr is ruled by three Governors whose names are each vibrated.

c. If entering a Serviant Square, call upon the ruling Egyptian deity and observe the sphynx.

4. Feel as though surrounded by the atmosphere desired. Known correspondences should be used until the imagination gives them form and they appear real. As each name is spoken outwardly and vibrated inwardly, the locality of its ruler should be felt and if possible, visualized in the mind.
5. Be fully conscious of the experience. Direct the events as they occur (you will direct them subconsciously anyway). Note any discrepancies or incongruities. Anything that goes against the signposts should indicate that something is wrong.
6. Each encounter with an Angel or deity must be dealt with in the same way as an invocation. Show respect and humility, but also show control of the conversation. The advantages to being previously versed in these correspondences are obvious (you can't take a textbook with you).

C. THE RETURN.

1. Normally, the desire to return is alone sufficient to bring one back to the physical body.
2. Vow to remember the experience after returning. Astral experiences, like dreams, are easy to forget or to get distorted when back in the physical body again.
3. Ideally, one should be able to split consciousness so that while part undergoes experiences in the Watchtowers and Aethyrs, another is fully aware of the physical body and may even be writing down notes or dictating to a scribe. If this is done, a full return is extremely easy.

Signposts for a Spirit Vision: An Example.

Suppose, for an example, that one desires to travel in the Spirit Vision to the Servient Square "D" that is located in the Watchtower of Fire, in the subquadrant Fire of Fire, ruled by the Lesser Angel ADRE. The following signposts can be determined beforehand in order to be certain one is on the right track, and to keep the imagination in check:

1. The Holy Name is Oh-ee-peh Teh-ah-ah Peh-doh-keh, "He whose name is unchanged from what it was." This name causes turmoil outwardly and doubt inwardly to be a presiding characteristic in this Watchtower.
2. The Great King is Eh-del-par-nah-ah, "He who is first to receive the flames." He has a fiery nature, quick to anger and loves change of any kind but especially the dispersion of aggragates into their constituent components.
3. The six Seniors are:
   Ah-ah-eteh-pee-oh
   Ah-dah-eh-oh-eteh
   Ah-len-keh-voh-deh
   Ah-ah-ped-oh-keh
   Ah-noh-doh-ee-neh
   Ah-ree-neh-nah-peh
4. The Angels of the Calvary Cross are:
   RZIONR (Rah-zodee-oh-nar), "He who is in the Waters of the Sun", i.e., he has a solar nature.
   and NRZFM (En-rah-zod-eff-em), "He who visits here six times," i.e., he brings life to this area (six is the number for the principle of animation)
5. The Archangel is BIZAZ (Bee-zodah-zod), "He who is with a voice." He aids in the purification of communication (e.g., he purifies thoughts, languages, speech, and the like).
6. The Kerubic Angel is IZAZ (Ee-zodah-zod), "He who is outlined." According to the Golden Dawn, he is "outlined" with a fiery mist. He aids in the purification of definition (e.g., he purifies restrictions and limitations).

7. The Ruling Lesser Angel is MADRE (Em-ah-dareh), "He who would be a god." He can help to make one more godlike.
8. The Lesser Angel is ADRE (Ah-dareh), a "small mountain" or "hill." He can help to increase strength and endurance.
9. The Demon here is named MAD (Em-ah-deh), "god." He represents the demonic temptation to see oneself as divine and therefore better than others (i.e. the insidious idea that I am more enlightened, further along the Path, than you). The truth is that all men are inherently divine.
10. The pyramid formed from the square here is as follows:
    Triangle No. 1 = Fire, red
    Triangle No. 2 = Air, yellow
    Triangle No. 3 = Fire, red
    Triangle No. 4 = Fire, red
11. The presiding Egyptian deity of this square (three triangles of fire and one of air on the pyramid) is the beautiful and alluring goddess, Nephthys. Her name means "the Lady of the House" and her chief function is the dispersion of aggragates. She usually wears a low-cut gauze-like robe which is easily seen through and is very sensual. She can reduce any form into its formless essence by her penetrating gaze. She is the complement of her sister,Isis. Her filmy gown is usually crimson and blue.
12. The Sphynx in this pyramid should be male and look like a large lion with a human head. It will have wings.
13. Prior to Spirit Vision, face East and recite the Sixth Call. This Call reminds the magician that the subquadrant Fire of Fire is an area which is "a torment to the wicked and a garland to the righteous." In other words, one's experience here will be highly karmic in nature.
14. In summary, the Servient Square "D" of ADRE is a region where the lower human nature is consumed in a purification by fire. The goddess Nephthys acts as the feminine complement of the King, EDLPRNAA, and she assists those natural fiery forces of this Watchtower to consume the karma of anyone who enters here. If properly prepared, a magician can return with much of the Great Work accomplished. If not properly prepared, he can return with all sorts of karmic problems immediately manifesting themselves. During this spirit vision, the magician has the chance to meet with any or all of the Angels mentioned above, and to benefit from these encounters. BIZAZ can give one a better sense of communication, even telepathy. IZAZ can help one to identifiy with his inner spiritual essence rather than only as a human being, which is but a temporary manifestation of this essence. MADRE also helps one to see his divine self (i.e. the spiritual body in Table III). ADRE can help one to eliminate transient human qualities and incorporate permanent ones. However, one must beware of spiritual pride embodied in the demon MAD who haunts this square.
15. A Warning: The Servient Square "D" contains powerful forces which will expose one's unconscious karma, in an effort to consume it. That which is not consumed in the fires of this square will nevertheless be exposed. For this reason they will surely manifest for good or ill upon one's return. The student is thus warned not to meddle with this square until fully prepared. One important preparation in any spirit vision like this is to map out the signposts such as this one beforehand. Sometimes the signposts show dangers and the square is best left until later. It cannot be overemphasized that large, shaggy, sharp-toothed monsters are not the prime danger in magic of this type. The danger is a psychological one, and it is very real indeed. Things will happen to anyone who uses this magic, even if no Angels or deities are encountered at all. Just because a magician doesn't see a demon, doesn't mean that the demon isn't there. In the psychic world, thoughts are things. There is no such thing as only a thought or merely an impulse. If one enters "D" unprepared and then has terrible nightmares later, or comes down with the flu, or has an unfortunate accident, one is perfectly free to say "coincidence"; but one could also correctly say that this magic brought to fruition certain karmic seeds that lay unconscious, until the experience in "D" germinated them into manifestation.

HOW THE MAGIC WORKS: AS ABOVE, SO BELOW

The Egyptian teaching "as above, so below" is the cornerstone of Western occultism and magic. It applies to Enochian Magic as well. The phrase means that one principle expresses itself on all of the cosmic planes and Aethyrs. For this reason, the Spiritual Plane can be understood by knowing the Physical Plane. Every universal principle in the physical world is also active in all thirty Aethyrs.

A corollary to the above rule is that man is a microcosm of the macrocosmic universe. Every universal principle in the world is also active in man. This idea expresses the general principle of correspondence upon which the art of magic is based. A correspondence exists between certain things in the universe. If this correspondence is known, then anything otherwise unknown can become known. For example, the invisible worlds, planes and Aethyrs that exist beyond the range of the physical senses, can become known through their correspondences. Furthermore, because man has a physical body which senses an objective physical world, it seems reasonable to propose that this principle holds equally well on all of these planes and Aethyrs. If so, then man has suitable vehicles on each cosmic plane with appropriate sensing organs to experience those planes. The truth of this proposition is demonstrated by dreams, because a dreamer is by definition one who leaves the physical body and functions on the Astral Plane in an astral body. The fact that most people are unconscious of what they are doing in dreams does not disprove the proposition. Rather it shows the frailty of human consciousness on the Astral Plane and the importance of magical exercises if one is to retain conscious control of himself and his surroundings.

Insofar as Enochian Magic is concerned, the Watchtowers and Aethyrs pertain both to the universe and to man. In a very real sense they are regions of the subtle worlds which surround and sustain the Earth. In another sense, equally valid, they are regions of the mind; psychological dimensions whose inhabitants are personifications of powerful psychic forces and impulses both unique and shared (i.e. residents of the personal and collective unconscious defined by Carl Jung). Hinduism likens man to waves that rise up on the surface of an ocean. As a wave, each person is discrete. But as all waves rise up from a common sea, so the consciousness of man rises up from a common subconsciousness. For this reason when any two magicians enter an Aethyr they will share certain experiences and not share others. These "shared experiences" are called signposts. Each Watchtower square and Aethyr has its own signposts. Every magician should encounter these. They serve as buoys, or road signs, by marking safe passageways for those who travel in the Spirit Vision.

THE AETHYRS

The Governors of the Aethyrs: How to Obtain Their Names

Each of the Aethyrs is presided over by at least three Governors. Their names are contained in the Watchtowers, 22 in each Tablet and three in the Black Cross. Figure 27 shows the sigils for these Governors and how their names are obtained. Each sigil has an arrow at the beginning of the name to show the proper direction of the letters.

There is a total of 92 Governors. This is an important magical number, being numerically equivalent to the Enochian word TOANT which means "love."

A careful count of 22 names from each Tablet and three from the Black Cross results in one missing name. An examination of Figure 27 will show that eight squares are not used for the sigils. In these eight squares, Dee had written the Enochian letters backwards. Presumably this was owing to the danger of seeing, or pronouncing, them even by accident. These letters are O and A from Air, L and (Y, L, N, H) from Water, A and (R, O) from Earth, and A and (O, P) from Fire: a total of thirteen letters and eight squares.

Crowley gives the missing secret name as PARAOAN and relates it to the 22nd Aethyr, LIN. The remaining backward letter is L and this is prefixed to one of the three names from the Black Cross thus forming the name LEXARPH (all three of these names are attributed to the 10th Aethyr, ZAX).

Two Aethyrs are given four Governors: the 30th, TEX, and the 22nd, LIN. The remaining 28 Aethyrs each have three.

The Call of the Thirty Aethyrs.

There is only one Call for all thirty Aethyrs. The name of any desired Aethyr is inserted into the blank space at the beginning of the Call. The following Call should be recited prior to traveling in the Spirit Vision to any of the Aethyrs (Crowley's version is contained in Appendix B for comparison):

> The Heavens that are in the (first, second, etc) Aethyr, (LIL, ARN, etc.) are mighty in those regions of the universe, and they carry out the Judgment of the Highest. To them it is said: Behold, the Face of your God, the beginning of Comfort, whose eyes are the brightness of the Heavens. He enables you to govern the Earth, and her unspeakable variety and furnishes you with the Power of Understanding so that you can carry out all things according to the Providence of Him who sits upon the Holy Throne, and who rose up in the Beginning, saying: The Earth, let her be governed by her parts, and let there be division in her, so that her glory may be both an eternal ecstasy and an inherent vexation.

Her course, let it run with the Heavens, and let her serve them like a handmaiden.

One season, let it mix with another, and let there be no creature upon her or within her that remains the same.

All of her members, let them have different qualities, and let no one creature be equal to another.

The creatures of reason who are on the Earth, such as man, let them disturb and eliminate one another; and their dwelling places, let their Names be forgotten.

The egotistical works of man, let them be destroyed.

His buildings, let them become caves for the beasts of the field.

Dim her understanding with darkness. Why? Because I am sorry that I have made Man. The Earth is well known for awhile, and for another while, she is a stranger, because she is the bed of a harlot, and the dwelling place of him who is fallen.

O Heavens, arise! The Lower Heavens are beneath you. Let them serve you! Govern those who govern! Cast down those who are likely to fall. Bring forth with those who increase, and destroy those who are rotten. Let no place remain in one number. Add and subtract until the stars are numbered.

Arise! Move! Appear before the Covenant of His Mouth which He has sworn to us in His Justice. Unveil the mysteries of your creation, and make us to be partakers of THE UNDEFILED KNOWLEDGE (IADNAMAD).

THE THIRTIETH AETHYR: TEX

Name: TEX is pronounced Teh-etz and means "the Aethyr that is in four parts."

Gematria: TEX = 419 = LONKHO (the fallen)
419 is also the Hebrew word TITh (serpent)
TEX = 413 = 59 x 7 where 59 = BALTOH (the righteous)

Governors:

1. TA$^{A}_{O}$$^{O}_{A}G^{B}_{L}$A Tablet: Water Sigil:    - a. Name: TAOAGLA, Tah-oh-ah-geh-lah
     TA-NOAG-LA can mean "he who becomes the foremost."
   - b. Gematria: TAOAGLA=73=ATH-ZEN (works of sacrifice)
     TAOAGLA=67=L-BALTOH (most righteous)

2. GEMNIMB Tablet: Water Sigil:    - a. Name: GENIMB, Gem-nee-em-bah
     GEM-NIMB can mean "He who is only for a season"
   - b. Gematria: GEMNIMB=313=HOLQ-PANPIR (to increase measurements) also 313=EOLIS BALZIZRAS (to make judgments)

3. AD$^{U}_{V}$ORPT Tablet: Water Sigil:    - a. Name: ADUORPT, Ah-du-oh-rah-peh-teh
     A-DUORPT can mean "She who silently watches"
   - b. Gematria: ADUORPT=228=QURLST (woman, handmaiden)

228 is also the Hebrew word IRChI
(lunar)
ADUORPT=222, PRDZAR
(to deceive)

4. $\text{DO}^{X}{}_{Z}{}^{M}{}_{I}{}^{A}\text{NU}^{I}{}_{A}\text{L}$ Tablet: Water Sigil:
a. Name: DOZIAAL, Doh-zodee-ah-ah-leh DOZI-AAL can mean "He who establishes the night."

b. Gematria: DOZIAAL=123=MOZ (joy)=
LONDOH (kingdom)
123 is also the Hebrew word ONG
(pleasure, delight)
DOZIALL=117=NANBA (thorns)=
ZIZOP (vessel)
117 is also the Hebrew word OLIZ
(joyful)

Location: TEX is the lowest and most material of the Aethyrs. It is located on the Etheric Plane, or Lower Astral Plane which surrounds the Earth and is, in fact, the etheric body of the Earth.

Brief Description: This Aethyr, as its name implies, is divided into four major sections as follows:

North; the region of Karma and strong karmic forces.

East; the region of Desire and charged with all manner of personal desires.

South; the region of Silence and a strong tendency toward nonverbal communication because of the difficulty in finding adequate words.

West; the region of personal limitation and a tendency of the ego to realize its shortcomings.

Comment: TEX gives one a brief glimpse into the subtle planes that exist immediately behind (or beyond) the physical. The four fundamental occult teachings of karma (limitations of action), desire (limitations of emotions), silence (limitations of language), and personal restriction (limitations of ego) are all found here. Hints of higher teachings are given, but as yet these seem only a promise yet unfulfilled.

THE TWENTY-NINETH AETHYR: RII

Name: RII is pronounced Ree-ee and means "The Aethyr of the mercy of heaven."

Gematria: RII=220=OM MAD (knowledge of God) also, 220=110x2, where 110=LAMA
(a path) and 220=22x10, where 22=BALT (justice)
and 10=ATH (works)

Governors:

1. VASTRIM   Tablet: Earth   Sigil:
a. Name: VSTRIM   Vah-seh-tah-ree-em
VAS-RIT-M can mean "He who is merciful."
b. Gematria: VSTRIM=342=KAL BALT
(solidification of justice)
VASTRIM=336=LEVITHMONG
(beasts of the field)
336 is also the Hebrew word MKVOR
(ugly)

2. ODRAXTI   Tablet: Earth   Sigil:
a. Name: ODRAXTI   Oh-dar-ahtz-tee
OD-RAX-TI can mean "He who opens up the east."
b. Gematria: ORDAXTI=609=203x3, where 203=
PIAMOL (righteousness)
203 is also the Hebrew word BRA (created) and the Hebrew word ABR (destroyed)
ODRAXTI   603   OXI-ZIN
(mighty waters)

3. G$^{\mathrm{M}}{}_{\mathrm{O}}{}^{\mathrm{T}}{}_{\mathrm{M}}$ZIAM   Tablet: Earth   Sigil:
a. Name: GMOTZIAM   Geh-moh-teh-zodee-ah-meh
G-OM-T-ZIAM can mean "She who knows only herself."
b. Gematria: GMOTZIAM=302=151x2, where 151=ZORGE (love)
GMOTZIAM=296=148x2, where
148=ORSBA (intoxicated)
GMOTZIAM=290=RIOR (a widow)

Location: The 29th Aethyr is located on the Astral Plane. This is the dream state, the plane of psychic fantasy, the Heavens of the world's religions.

Brief Description: Like the 30th Aethyr, this too is divided into four sections (there is a strong sense of direction here):

South: This section is characterized by the realization of the survival of consciousness after death; It is the Kama-Loka of Theosophy, or at least a part of it.

East: This section is characterized by the desire for revenge and for destruction of the wicked; there is a strong sense of right and wrong.

West: This section is characterized by a sense of finality and inevitability; evolution seems to be finished here; strong sense of stagnation.

North: This section is characterized by judgment; karmic necessity; destiny; There is a feeling here that karma is a huge wheel that rolls on and on forever.

Comment: RII gives one a clear look at what happens after death for the average person. Life does, in fact, continue on after death of the physical body. But the quality of this life is of a restrictive nature. The religious person enters heaven. The agnostic continues on in a dream-like existence and may not even know that he has died. The closed mind sees an end to all things. The open (but naive) mind sees the hopelessness of an endless cycle of births and deaths beyond his ability to control. The play between these dualistic viewpoints is strong here.

THE TWENTY-EIGHTH AETHYR: BAG

Name: BAG is pronounced Bah-geh and means "the Aethyr of doubt."

Gematria: BAG=19 which is equal to the Hebrew word ChVH (to manifest) also 19x2=38=OL (to make) and 19x3=57=GOSAA (stranger)
57 is also the number for the Hebrew AVIM (terrible)

Governors:

1. $^{T}{}_{L}$ABNIXP Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: TABNIXP, Tah-ben-eetz-peh TABN-IXP can mean "He who governs"
b. Gematria: TABNIXP=539=KORMEP (to number)
TABNIXP=533=HOL-IOLKAM (to measure and bring forth)

2. $^{P}{}_{F}$OKLSNI Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: FOKLSNI, Foh-kel-ess-nee FO-KLZNI can mean "He who visits those in Heaven"
b. Gematria: FOKLSNI=458=YOLKI (to bring forth) also 458=229x2, where 229= SAANIR (parts, sections)

3. OXLOPAR Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: OXOLPAR, Ohtz-loh-par OXOL-PAR can mean "He who has them in his hands"
b. Gematria: OXLOPAR=583=KOMMAH-IA (to bind up truth)

also 583=MIKA-IADNAH
(powerful knowledge)

Location: The 28th Aethyr is located in the Astral Plane in a subplane characterized by a strong sense of conscience, sin, and the need for purgative suffering.

Brief Description: A strong feeling of one's unworthiness pervades this Aethyr. Sin, especially karmic sin, is seen here as self-limiting. There is suffering here in a purgatory sense, and one feels that sorrow itself is a necessary factor to encounter if one is to spiritually progress. This Aethyr is filled with the symbols of dualism and one may feel that evil is as real and necessary as good. It is the inherent discriminating nature of the human mind that brings about this strong sense of dualism. If the magician looks carefully, he will detect a hint of the illusive nature of the ego here.

Comment: The power of restriction and doubt in this Aethyr comes from one's own sense of guilt and unworthiness, and thus from one's own karma. BAG is the result of one's identification with the human ego, which is seen as little better than an animal and, at best, a sinner. This kind of identification places a restriction on consciousness and prevents further progress. As long as one identifies himself as a human sinner, he will not be able to rise above BAG. The notion that man is more than an animal, that man can cast off egotistical impulses and desires and can retain a spiritual and purified nature, is considered a blasphemy by some, but is essential for the magician to rise into the higher Aethyrs.

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH AETHYR: ZAA

Name: ZAA is pronounced Zodah-ah and means "the Aethyr of solitude."

Gematria: ZAA=21=APA (that which is unchanging)
21 is also equal to the Hebrew word AHIH (existence)
ZAA=15=GAH (spirit)=AP (unchanging)

Governors:

1. SAZIAMI Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: SAZIAMI, Sah-zodee-ah-mee
SA-Z-IA-MI can mean "He who has true power"
b. Gematria: SAZIAMI=238=VIRG (nests, home)
also 238=119x2, where 119=RAAS (east)=ZIN (waters)
SAZIAMI=232=MALPRGE (appearance of fire)

2. MATHVLA Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: MATHVLA, Mah-teh-hev-lah
M-ATH-VLA can mean "He who ends actions"
b. Gematria: MATHVLA=190=VONPHO (wrath)
190 is also equal to the Hebrew word QTz (the end)
MATHVLA=184=DOSIG-IPA (night of voidness)

3. $^{K}_{o}$RPANIB Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: KORPANIB, Koh-ar-pah-nee-beh KAR-PON-BI can mean "He who destroys speech"

b. Gematria: KORPANIB=560=KOMOIN (window to the void) also 560=280x2, where 280=
VOVIN (dragon)
and 560 is equal to the Hebrew
ThNINIM (dragons)

Location: The 27th Aethyr is located at the apex of the Astral Plane where the primary characteristic is loneliness.

Brief Description: This Aethyr emphasizes man's basic nature of solitude. One is alone in the womb before birth, and returns to this aloneness after death. Because man has an individual or monadic essence, he is forever alone with himself and his reality. This Aethyr contains the feeling of separateness, of being an isolated entity separate and distinct from all other entities. In ZAA the magician will encounter the Great Heresy of Mahayana Buddhism—the awesome and terrible isolation of individuality.

The primary angel in ZAA is the goddess Hecate, who weeps continually for the suffering of humanity. Her tears turn into pearls which she offers to all who enter here. The magician must accept these pearls; he must incorporate within himself the precious characteristic of compassion if he expects to rise above ZAA. This goddess can also be seen as the Egyptian Hathor whose name, Het-Her, means "the place above." Hathor is an expression of the goddess Nut who represents infinite space. It is this quality of Space that is emphasized in ZAA.

Comment: When the magician realizes that he is not a lowly sinner and, in fact, has the potential for spiritual things, he can rise above BAG into ZAA. But his self-image is still restricted and distorted. He still clings to his humanity. This makes him see aloneness as loneliness. If emotional reactions to stimulation are equated with life, then the lack of such reactions will probably be interpreted as death. Life takes on meaning in the interactions of one's self with other selves. In this sense, ZAA is death. Here life is seen as a game wherein all the players must accept clearly defined ground rules. But because this game inevitably ends in death for each player, the only meaningful goal becomes how well the game itself is played. In ZAA one is able to consider how well he has been playing. This builds and otherwise modifies his character traits in preparation for his return to the game. The aloneness of ZAA is therefore a necessary condition in order to assimilate life experiences.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH AETHYR: DES

Name: DES is pronounced in one syllable as Dess and means "the Aethyr that accepts that which is."

Gematria: DES=21=APA (that which is unchanging)= ZAA (27th Aethyr)
DES and ZAA share their nature through the number 21.
also, 21x16=336, where 16=ZAH (within) and 336 is the Hebrew word ROIVN (thought)

Governors:

1. POPHAND Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: POPHAND, Poh-peh-hah-en-deh POPH-AN-D can mean "He who is divided into three parts"
   b. Gematria: POPHAND=109=DOSIG (night)= ZAR (ways, paths) 109 is also the Hebrew word OGVL (circle, sphere) and 109x2=218, the number for the Hebrew IRCh (moon)

2. NIGRANA Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: NIGRANA, Nee-gar-ah-nah NI-GRAA-N can mean "He who governs the 28 days of the moon"
   b. Gematria: NIGRANA 280=VOVIN (dragon)= IOU-GRAA (soul of the moon)
   280 is also the Hebrew word RP (terror)

3. $^{L}\mathrm{B}AZ^{H}\mathrm{K}^{I}\mathrm{H}^{I}\mathrm{L}M$ Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: BAZHIIM, Bah-zod-hee-ee-meh

BAZHI-IM can mean "He who makes use of the day"
b. Gematria: BAZHIIM=231=T-PRDZAR (to decrease in proportion)
231 is also for the Hebrew word DKVRA (male)
BAZHIIM=225=T-PRDZAR (to decrease in proportion) also 225=RAAGIOSL (Great King of the Water Tablet) and 225=15x15, where 15= ZAA (27th Aethyr)

Location: The 26th Aethyr is located at the lowest level of the Mental Plane where logic and reason hold sway over intuition.

Brief Description: This Aethyr is the realm of logic and reason. But the intuitive conviction that logic and reason are unable to get at truth, and in fact distort and limit truth, is like an undercurrent running through the Aethyr of DES. The Angel who guides one through DES is dressed in black. DES is torn by great forces of duality which sweep through it. Good and evil, sin and salvation, illusion and reality, all demand attention here. The intellect is hard pressed to cope with these dual forces. It feels its own inadequacy and its lamentations are thunders which boom from one end of DES to the other. This inability of the intellect to cope with duality is demonstrated in Zen Buddhism by the koan which the student is given to meditate on until it is fully understood. The forces flowing through DES are like a koan. At the top of this Aethyr, coincident with the death of the intellect, the magician will have a brief vision of the beautiful goddess Nut, the Eternal Feminine, the Mother of All, Infinite Space, whose body is jeweled with stars.

Comment: The death of one's descriminative faculties marks the birth of a higher type of consciousness. This is the great secret of the Mental Plane, that consciousness can function without the human mind, and without words, and even without forms.

Any magician who can enter DES has already learned to see life as a game but, due to the intellect, it takes the game very seriously. Logic and reason have been exalted. Now the magician can go no higher until he can go beyond logic and reason. This requires some degree of intuitive insight.

DES is covered by intellectual fog. The intellect desperately clings to dualism and sees clearly its own death in the higher Aethyrs, and quite naturally feels threatened. It seeks a rational solution to the problem of dualism but cannot find it any more than the Zen student can explain his koan. In order to rise above DES, the magician must be willing to drop all logical arguments and to bring to an end all intellectual dissections.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH AETHYR: VTI

Name: VTI is pronounced Veh-tee and means "the Aethyr of change."

Gematria: VTI=139=SIBSI (Covenant)=TOR (23rd Aethyr)

VTI=133=OVOF (to be magnified)

133 is also the value of the Hebrew HChHLPH (change)

Governors:

1. MIRZIND Tablet: Earth Sigil:
a. Name: MIRZIND, Mee-rah-zodee-en-deh

MIR-ZIN-D can mean "He who is from the Waters of Torment"

b. Gematria: MIRZIND=373=TA-TELOKH (like death)

MIRZIND=367=MOMAO-OHIO (crown of woe)

367 is also the Hebrew words MMIN ZKR (masculine) and AIShVN (black)

2. OB^{u}vAORS Tablet: Earth Sigil:
a. Name: OBVAORS, Oh-beh-vah-oh-rah-seh

OBVA-ORS can mean "She who is half darkness"

b. Gematria: OBVAORS=248=PI-BLIAR (places of comfort) also 248=SIBSI-DOSIG (covenant with the night) and 248 is the Hebrew word RChM (womb)

3. RANGLAM Tablet: Earth Sigil:
a. Name: RANGLAM, Rah-neh-geh-lah-meh
R-ANGLA-M can mean "He who governs his thoughts"
b. Gematria: RANGLAM=268=BRGDO-OHIO (sleep of woe) also 268=LRASD-MOLAP (disposer of men)

Location: The 25th Aethyr is in the Lower Mental Plane in a subplane of change between the old logic and reason of the intellect and the new intuition. It is a natural continuation of the 26th Aethyr, DES. On the Qabalistic Tree of Life, VTI is just under Tiphareth.

Brief Description: This Aethyr at first appears to be volatile and destructive. But this is only because destruction is necessary for creation, just as one must first die in order to be reborn. The chief characteristic of VTI is spiritual pride. The intuition has won over the intellect and the magician is now in VTI. The magician, if not forewarned, will be quick to pat himself on the back and to boast of his attainments. The Guiding Angel of VTI may approach the magician and close his mouth for him.

Comment: The magician leaves DES and enters VTI as a natural continuation of intuition over intellect. However, here the poison of spiritual pride will hold one until this pride can be cast aside. One is very apt to feel himself to be one of the Great Adepts of mankind because of his successes. There is a feeling in VTI that there is nowhere else to go; that there are no "higher" Aethyrs. The desire to "rest on one's laurels" is strong here because VTI will often appear like a great plateau. In order to rise higher, the magician will have to learn how to truly travel about in these Aethyrs.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH AETHYR: NIA

Name: NIA is pronounced En-ee-ah and means "the Aethyr of traveling."

Gematria: NIA=116=POILP (to be divided)=MABZA (a robe)
116 is also for the Hebrew word IVNIM (doves)

Governors:

1. $\mathrm{OR^{A}{}_{K}{}^{N}{}_{A}{}^{K}{}_{NM}IR}$ Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: ORAKAMIR, Oh-rah-kah-mee-ar
ORAK-A-MIR can mean "He who is above and below"
b. Gematria: ORAKAMIR=692=ZAMRAN ZAKARE (to come into movement) also 692=SALMAN KHIRLAN (House of Joy)

2. $\mathrm{KH^{IAS}_{BT}{}_{A}LP^{O}{}_{S}}$ Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: KHIASALPS, Keh-hee-ah-sal-pess KHIA-SALPS can mean "He of wondrous joy"
b. Gematria: KHIASALPS=404=ABRAMIG-MOZ (preparation of joy)
404 is also the Hebrew word ShQD (to hasten)

3. SOAGEEL Tablet: Earth Sigil: a. Name: SOAGEEL, Soh-ah-geh-el
SO-A-GE-EL can mean "He who helps the most"
b. Gematria: SOAGEEL=79=HOLQ (to measure)=PAID (always) also 79=ELU-BESZ

(primordial matter) and 79 is also the Hebrew word
DOH (mind)

Location: The 24th Aethyr is the Aethyr of astral traveling both through space and through time. It is at the apex of the Lower Mental Plane.

Brief Description: NIA is the region of traveling in the mental body. This traveling can be spacial (along the plane) or vibrational (through the cosmic planes) or durational (through time). The Aethyr is thus a preparation for all of the other planes and Aethyrs, especially for the 15th Aethyr.

In order to travel astrally in a "body of light" one must die to the personality and physical body. Entering NIA is therefore similar to dying, except that here a psycho-magnetic link (called the silver cord) still connects the mind with the body. In death this attachment is severed. Because of the nature of this out-of-body traveling, one's personal fears, loves, hates and so forth, must be put aside or else they can interfere and cause dissociation, insanity, and possibly even death. These Aethyrs are not without their dangers.

The magician who can travel about in NIA will probably see an impassible roof gleaming like steel over the top of this region. This is a Ring-Pass-Not for the magician at this stage of his development.

Comment: NIA is somewhat like a summary version of the lower six Aethyrs (TEX through VTI) and it combines the best characteristics of each. But there is a new factor added here. This new quality is joy, which is a true spiritual characteristic. Joy is intensified as one goes higher into the Aethyrs. The sense of joy is essential for the Great Work. The magician in NIA learns that life is inherently joyous, that the game of life is fun to play. The Ring-Pass-Not in NIA is the barrier between the Lower Mental Plane and the Upper Mental Plane. In order to pass this barrier, the magician must pass beyond his normal human mind.

THE TWENTY-THIRD AETHYR: TOR

Name: TOR is pronounced Toh-rah and means "the Aethyr that sustains [the universe]."

Gematria: TOR=139=SIBSI (covenant)=VTI (25th Aethyr) also 139x2=278, the Hebrew words GORH (girl) and OVBR (fetus)
TOR=133=OVOF (to be magnified) also 133x2=266, the Hebrew word MTzPVN (conscience)

Governors:

1. RONO$^{A}_{o}$MB Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: RONOAMB, Roh-noh-ah-meh-beh RO-NOAMB can mean "He who protects the process of becoming"
   b. Gematria: RONOAMB=311=KAB (a rod)
   311 is also the value of the Hebrew words ShBT (a rod) and AISh (a man)

2. ONIZIMP Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: ONIZIMP, Oh-nee-zodee-em-peh
   O-NIS-IMP- can mean "He who brings labor"
   b. Gematria: ONIZIMP=308=154x2, where 154=VAUL (to work)
   308 is also the Hebrew word BVQR (daybreak)
   ONIZIMP 302=151x2, where 151=ZORGE (love)
   302 is also the Hebrew word BQR (dawn)

3. ZAXANIN Tablet: Earth Sigil:
a. Name: ZAXANIN, Zod-ahtz-ah-nee-en
Z-AX-ANIN can mean "He who names things."

b. Gematria: ZAXANIN=581=KORMP-QAA (to number creation)
also 581=KAL-YRPOIL
(to solidify what is divided)
ZAXANIN=575=25x23 where 25=BESZ (matter);23=GAH-L
(the highest spirit)

Location: The 23rd Aethyr is located on the Mental Plane in the region of the World Sustainer, the principle of causation. It is he who maintains and powers the Earth.

Brief Description: TOR contains the mystery of toil, and the virtue of labor. It contains the Cause for which the Earth is an effect. The universe is evolving, but not toward any fixed or permanent goal. The end of evolution is the beginning of involution and vice versa. The entire universe and everything in it, oscillates between states of potential and kinetic energy without conceivable end. Matter evolves from spirit and then involves back into it again. For this reason all labor is an on-going process of self-expression or self-unfoldment, called the Great Work. Man and the universe are effects of the labor of an infinite number of constituent parts, all working together. This idea is clearly seen in TOR.

Comment: The joy of traveling in NIA now gives way to the seriousness of labor in TOR. The energy needed to perpetuate the lower planes and Aethyrs is awesome. But, as Einstein showed, energy and matter are directly related and are interchangeable. In effect, the source of energy is infinite, and therefore the potential for creativity is infinite. There is a danger in TOR that the magician will lose the sense of joy acquired in NIA and take creative manifestation too seriously. He should remember that the chief difference between work and play is one's attitude.

THE TWENTY-SECOND AETHYR: LIN

Name: LIN is pronounced El-ee-en and means "the Aethyr of the void."

Gematria: LIN=118=GONO (faith)
118 is also the value of the Hebrew ChLP (change, renewal)

Governors:

1. O^{s}zIDAIA Tablet: Air Sigil:    a. Name: OZIDAIA, Oh-zodee-dah-ee-ah AOZ-IAD-IA can mean "He who is the god of truth"
   b. Gematria: OZIDAIA=175=OIAD-NAZPS (sword of justice) also 175x3=525=KHIRLAN (joy)
   OZIDAIA=169=RIT (mercy)

2. KALZIRG Tablet: Earth Sigil:    a. Name: KALZIRG, Kal-zodee-ar-geh KALZ-IRG can mean "She who is in the firmament"
   b. Gematria: KALZIRG=491=KOMSELHA-TABGES (a circular recess)
   491 is also the Hebrew word PUThH (vagina)
   KALZIRG=485=ILONON-MONONS (branches of the heart)
   485 is also the Hebrew word ThVDOH (mind, consciousness)

3. LAZDIX$^{R}_{I}$ Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: LAZDIXR, Lah-zodee-tzar
   LAS-DIXR can mean "He who brings down a bounty"
   b. Gematria: LAZDIXR=587=YOLKI-MOZ (to bring forth joy)
   LAZDIXR=581=ESIASKH-QUASAHI (brother of delight)

4. PARAOAN Tablet: 7 of 8 backward letters from all four Tablets Sigil:    a. Name: PARAOAN, Pah-rah-oh-ah-em PAR-AOAN can mean "He who has eyes"
   b. Gematria: PARAOAN=207=NIISO (come away)
   207 is also the Hebrew word AGRAB (a scorpion) also 207x2=414=KRAL (joy, pleasure)

Location: The 22nd Aethyr is located at a position in the Archetypal Plane where the occult doctrine of polarities becomes self-evident. It marks the beginning of non-dualism, which intensifies as one rises higher. Because of this shift in viewpoint toward the mystical, LIN is an Aethyr of change and renewal.

Brief Description: Consciousness in this Aethyr is in the first stages of the mystical state called samadhi, wherein the human personality is cast aside. Here the beginning of form can be seen as the very sense of extension in space. In addition, the complement of form, the formless, can be seen directly as an endless Void which gives the Aethyr its name. Actually this void in LIN is only an appearance. It seems void to the human mind that experiences it. The higher Aethyrs are no more formless than the deep sleep state, although this oftenseems a void when waking.

Comment: The Aethyr of LIN is the region where form and the formless merge into each other. It represents a dramatic change in one's viewpoint. The magician who enters here must look with eyes other than the human, else he will see only desolation.

THE TWENTY-FIRST AETHYR: ASP

Name: ASP is pronounced Ahs-peh and means "the Aethyr of causation."

Gematria: ASP=22=BALT (justice)
22 is also the value of the Hebrew word TVBH (good)

Governors:

1. KHLIRZPA Tablet: Air Sigil:    a. Name: KHLIRZPA, Keh-helee-rah-zod-pah KHIRL-SAP can mean "He who enjoys loud sounds"
   b. Gematria: KHLIRZPA=493=KNILA-ZEN (blood sacrifice)
   KHLIRZPA=487=MOZ-TELOKH (joy of death)
   487 is also the Hebrew word ALIMUTh (violence)

2. TOANTOM Tablet: Air Sigil:    a. Name: TOANTOM, Toh-ah-en-toh-em TOANT-OM cn mean "He who loves knowledge"
   b. Gematria: TOANTOM=224=BAHAL-A-AMMA (He whose cry is cursed) 224 is also the Hebrew DKR (male)
   TOANTOM=212=TORZU (to rise up)
   212 is also the Hebrew ChDR (to enclose)

3. VIXPAG Tablet: Air Sigil:    a. Name: VIXPALG, Veetz-pah-leh-geh V-IX-ALPG can mean "He who consumes"

b. Gematria: VIXPALG=561=
KNILA-ORS
(the blood of darkness)
also 561=MALPRG-ZOKH
(the burning up of the past)

Location: The 21st Aethyr is a continuation of the previous Aethyr in the Archetypal Plane. Here one confronts the reflection of the spirit or atma of man.

Brief Description: ASP is the location of the reflection of atma below the Abyss. It provides a distorted vision of man's spiritual nature. Here existence itself appears as an annihilation. The entire region at first seems an abomination and horror. There is little joy here. In ASP the magician comes face to face with his own reincarnating ego. Here is that part of himself that does the reincarnating into the lower planes. The three Governors of ASP all work together to silence the illusion of the ego and for this reason will at first appear hideous monsters or demons.

Comment: The sense of desolation in ASP is the continuation of the sense of loneliness first experienced in ZAA (the 27th Aethyr). It is due to an erroneous sense of identification. The magician still identifies himself with a single incarnated ego. Therefore the realms above him here appear black and ominous. His own past and future lives can be seen here so that a shift in his sense of identity is necessary in order to properly assimilate these experiences. Insanity is but one real possibility. The magician in ASP must shift his sense of identity from ego to Ego, from a single human being to a reincarnating Ego which has many human expressions.

THE TWENTIETH AETHYR: KHR

Name: KHR is pronounced Keh-har and means "the Aethyr of the wheel."

Gematria: KHR=401=KHIDAO (diamonds)=TOTO-NOR-MOLAP (cycles of the sons of men)
401 is also the value of the Hebrew word ATh (essence)

Governors:

1. ZILDRON Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: ZILDRON, Zodee-el-dar-oh-en ZILDR-ON can mean "He who sets in flight"
b. Gematria: ZILDRON=261=ZAMRAN
(to appear)
261 is also the Hebrew MChZVR
(a cycle)
ZILDRON=255=ZAMRAN
(to appear)
255 is also the Hebrew MZRCh
(East)

2. PARZIBA Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: PARZIBA, Par-zodee-bah PAR-SIB-A can mean "He who promises"
b. Gematria: PARZIBA=195=ETHARZI (in peace) also 195=13x15, where 15 is the Hebrew ZCh (to force, impel) and 13 is the Hebrew HGH (wheel)
PARZIBA=189=FISIS-QAA
(to make a creation)

3. TOTOKAN Tablet: Air Sigil:
a. Name: TOTOKAN, Toh-toh-kan
TOTO-KAN can mean "He who drives the cycles"
b. Gematria: TOTOKAN=434=ZAKAREF (visitor)
TOTOKAN=422=VNIG-MATORB (the need for repetition)

Location: The 20th Aethyr is located in a subplane of the Mental Plane where the whole world appears as a huge rotating wheel. The occult doctrine of cycles is self-evident here.

Brief Description: The magician who enters KHR will see the whole world as a tremendous spinning wheel. He may even see the hand of He who spins it. He will also sense that there is little purpose to it all; the Being who spins the wheel does so for His own pleasure. A close inspection will reveal that this wheel is both seductive and deceptive. Its allure is due to the fun and pleasure that it promises. Its deceit is its demand to be taken seriously. It contains games such as politics and religion which all too often turn the promised pleasure into pain and sorrow.

Comment: The magician in KHR should be able to see both sides of the universe; the mayavic deceptions which perpetuate bondage and false identifications, and the joyous expressions of love and beauty in form and color. The universe can be seen either way because, in a sense, it is both simultaneously. The formlessness of ASP gives way to a higher sense of form in KHR. The wheel of the universe is seen with spiritual eyes and as such the magician can see the inside as clearly as the outside.

THE NINETEENTH AETHYR: POP

Name: POP is pronounced Poh-peh and means "the Aethyr of division."

Gematria: POP=48=LOE (12th Aethyr) and 48=24x2, where 24=LEA (16th Aethyr) =PAZ (4th Aethyr) also 48=ELO (first)=TALHO (cup)
48 is also the value of the Hebrew words ChIL (a woman) and KVKB (a star)

Governors:

1. TORZOXI Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: TORZOXI, Toh-razod-oh-tzee TORZ-OXI can mean "She who rises up in strength"
b. Gematria: TORZOXI=638=VOVIN-TELOKH (Dragon of Death) also 638=MIKA-ZILDARH (mighty flier)
TORZOXI 632=316x2, where 316 is the Hebrew AIShH (a woman)
TORZOXI 626=313x2, where 313=GEMNIMB (Governor of TEX)

2. AB$^{R}_{A}$IOND Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: ABRAIOND, Ah-bar-ahee-oh-en-deh ABRA-I-OND can mean "He who prepares his kingdom"
b. Gematria: ABRAIOND=261=ZILDRON (Governor of KHR) also 261=ZAMRAN (to appear) and 261 is the Hebrew word DRAVN

(an abomination)

3. OMAGRAP Tablet: Air Sigil:
a. Name: OMAGRAP, Oh-mah-gar-ah-peh
OM-GRAAP can mean "He of lunar knowledge"

b. Gematria: OMAGRAP=249=SIATRIS
(a scorpion)
249 is also the Hebrew MGVR
(fear, terror)

Location: The 19th Aethyr is also on the Mental Plane; in a region containing the Priestess of the Silver Star. This priestess is the goddess Isis and she is located on the Qabalistic Tree of Life on the path of gimel. This places POP just above Tiphareth.

Brief Description: POP is an Aethyr of initiation. Here the magician is initiated into the karmic need for violence, bloodshed and death; characteristic attributes of human development. The initial vision in POP often results in a alphabet of daggers wherein each dagger symbolizes the sharp penetrating power of thought. The dagger is also used as a glyph for a sunbeam or ray of light; light itself being a symbol for consciousness. These daggers seen in POP are therefore usually related to an alphabet to illustrate how thoughts go together to form communication systems. The actual Aethyr is difficult to enter. It contains conflicting forces and there is a feeling here that life itself is surrounded by violence and death. The magician will usually meet the Guiding Angel, the Priestess of the Silver Star. Her function is to initiate anyone who enters here into a higher sense of life and the meaning of life. She personifies the spiritual impulse in man and imbodies the spiritual current, and she offers this current to all who can enter POP.

Comment: The imagery of life surrounded by violence and death can take many forms. It symbolizes the idea that existence is a series of conflicts of some kind. Good fights evil, life fights against death, and so on. All progress must be earned. No Adept can give spiritual insight to another. However, they can give initiation if one is properly prepared and ready for it.

THE EIGHTEENTH AETHYR: ZEN

Name: ZEN is pronounced Zod-en and means "the Aethyr of Sacrifice."

Gematria: ZEN=69=GOHO (to speak)=IP (not) 69 is also the value fo the Hebrew words
IGVN (desolation)
and ABVS (an enclosure)
ZEN=21x3, where 21=ZAA (27th Aethyr) also 63x2=126=OMA (understanding)

Governors:

1. NABAOMI Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: NABAOMI, Nah-bah-oh-mee
NABA-OMI can mean "He who knows pain"
Gematria: NABAOMI=247=IADNAH-GRAA
(knowledge of the moon)

2. ZAFASAI Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: ZAFASAI, Zodah-fah-sahee
Z-AFA-SA-I can mean "He who is in emptiness"
b. Gematria: ZAFASAI=97=HOLQ-AFFA
(measurement of emptiness)
97 is also the Hebrew word AMUN
(changeless)
ZAFASAI=91=TABAAN-AP
(unchanging governor) also 91=13x7, where 13 is the Hebrew word BHV (emptiness)

3. $^{Y}{}_{V}A^{L}{}_{1}$PAMB Tablet: Air Sigil: a. Name: VALPAMB, Val-pah-meh-beh

VAL-PAMB can mean "He who is the beginning and the end"
b. Gematria: VALPAMB=194=BITOM (fire)=
EMETGIS (seal)=
PARADIZ (virgin)
also 194=97x2, where 97=

Location: The 18th Aethyr is located on the Mental Plane at the place of an important initiation: the initiation of the crucifixion.

Brief Description: One who can enter ZEN will learn the esoteric meaning of sacrifice and crucifixion. First, one must be free of all personal desires, thoughts, regrets and attachments. This is an essential preparation for safe passage through this Aethyr. The main vision encountered is some type of a crucifixion. One possibility here is the Egyptian ritual of the King's Chamber in the Great Pyramid of Gizah. There a candidate was made to lay in the lidless sarcophagus for three days and nights while his subtle body roamed the planes and Aethyrs. If successful, he reached the 8th Aethyr and obtained a direct awareness of his own inner divinity. In other words, he became initiated, and was considered an Adept. In ZEN, one will see two types of crucifixion. In one, the higher Self is crucified on the cross of matter. This idea is symbolized in the Tarot by the Hanged Man. In the second form, the lower self is crucified in a tomb (or womb) of darkness in order to free consciousness. One is a descent into matter, the other is an ascent into spirit.

Comment: In ZEN the magician will see that birth and death are two forms of crucifixion. Both illustrate the principle of sacrifice, and in both the real sacrifice made is the break in the continuity of consciousness. Only an Adept can travel through all of the Aethyrs and retain continuity of consciousness (and therefore memory). The magician who can enter ZEN will learn how to maintain a continuity of consciousness. He will then be able to undergo crucifixion without sacrifice.

THE SEVENTEENTH AETHYR: TAN

Name: TAN is pronounced Tah-en, and means "the Aethyr of one's equilibrium."

Gematria: TAN=65=BI (voice) also 65x2=130=SOBOLN (West)
130 is also the Hebrew word HPLIH (discrimination)
TAN=59=BALTOH (the righteous) also 59x2=118=LIN (22nd Aethyr) and 59x7=413=TEX (30th Aethyr)

Governors:

1. SIGMORF Tablet:Air Sigil:

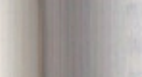
a. Name: SIGMORF, See-geh-moh-rah-feh SIG-MOR-F can mean "He who visits the darkness"
b. Gematria: SIGMORF=298=BALZIZRAS-OIAD (judgment of the just)
298 is also the Hebrew word RChMIM (mercy)

2. A$^{Y}_{U}$DROPT Tablet: Air Sigil:



a. Name: AYDROPT, Ah-yeh-deh-roh-peh-teh AY-DROP-T can mean "She who sees us with equality"
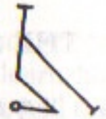
b. Gematria: AYDROPT=218=TORZU (to rise up)
218 is also the Hebrew word IRCh (moon)
AYDROPT=212=TORZU (to rise up) =TOANTOM (Governor of 21st Aethyr)
212 is also the Hebrew word ZRH (harlot)



3. TOKARZI Tablet: Air Sigil:
   a. Name: TOKARZI, Toh-kar-zodee
   T-O-KARZI can mean "He of such equality"
   b. Gematria: TOKARZI=514=VOVIN-MATORB (Dragon of Repetition)
   TOKARZI=508=127x4, where 127=IADNAH (knowledge)
   508 is also the Hebrew ShChR (dawn)

Location: The 17th Aethyr is the region of the Mental Plane that contains the Karmic Balance. This balance produces cyclic changes throughout the universe from its continuous efforts to reach equilibrium.

Brief Description: The initial vision here is usually of the Guiding Angel who explains that all reality is relative. Things are real only in relation to the consciousness that experiences them. The magician will then be shown the Balance of TAN which is, of course, karmic. This karmic balance strives to bring the universe to an equilibrium which would quite naturally destroy the universe as we know it. However, the Balance considers all imbalance as evil and seeks to equalize it. Actually karma itself can be considered to be the result of this huge Balance of TAN.

Comment: The symbol of the balance illustrates that karma seeks an equilibrium for the forces of duality which define the universe. Karma and duality are dependent principles, neither of which could exist without the other. The entire idea of morality and ethics must be faced in TAN, where good and evil, right and wrong, are weighed in the karmic balance of the universe.

THE SIXTEENTH AETHYR: LEA

Name: LEA is pronounced Eleh-ah and means "the first Aethyr of the [higher] Self."

Gematria: LEA=24=TAPA (poison)=PAZ (4th Aethyr) also 24x2=48=LOE (12th Aethyr)=POP (19th Aethyr) and 24 is the value of the Hebrew word GVIH (body)

Governors:

1. $K^{U}_{V}K^{U}_{A}$RPT Tablet: Air Sigil:
   a. Name: KUKUARPT, Ku-ku-rah-peh-teh KUKU-ARP-T can mean "She who replaces what was before with something similar"
   b. Gematria: KUKUARPT=864=54x16, where 54=TALHO (cup) and 16=TA (likeness)
   864 is also the Hebrew words AShTH ZNVNIM (women of whoredom)
   KUKUARPT=858=OADO-KIKLE-BABALON (to weave the mysteries of Babalon) also 858=143x6, where 143=MOLAP (MANKIND)

2. LAUAKON Tablet: Air sigil:
   a. Name: LAUAKON, Lah-u-ah-koh-en
   A-ULAKON can mean "the happy one"
   b. Gematria: LAUAKON=470=ZAMRAN-BLIORA (appearance of comfort)
   470 is also the Hebrew word OTh (time)

3. SOKHIAL Tablet: Air Sigil:
 a. Name: SOKHIAL, Soh-keh-hee-al
  SOKH-IAL can mean "He who burns up the past"
 b. Gematria: SOKHIAL=412=MALPRG-IALPRG (burning fiery flames)
  412 is also the Hebrew word ChDTh (new)

Primary Angel of this Aethyr: BABALON
 a. Name: BABALON is pronounced Bah-bah-loh-en and means "wicked" or "evil."
 b. Gematria: BABALON=110=TOANTA (lust)

Location: The 16th Aethyr is located on the Mental Plane in a region of change and transition. Here one begins to identify himself as a spiritual being.

Brief Description: The Guiding Angel of this Aethyr is named Babalon. She is extremely alluring and enticing. If the magician who enters here were to imagine the most beautiful woman in the universe (an obviously relative concept), such would be his vision of the angel here. In the duality of objectivity and subjectivity, Babalon personifies objectivity and the beast upon which she often rides symbolizes subjectivity. The magician in LEA feels that his consciousness is like an unruly beast in need of discipline. It is driven willy-nilly about the Aethyr by the seductive nature of the environment. Because the enchanting beauty of LEA is available to all who enter here, she is sometimes figuratively called a harlot (the Enochian word BABALON means "harlot").

A second Angel will then approach the magician. He personifies the past, especially the personal past (and therefore karma) of the magician. He will lament bitterly because he knows that he is dying. If asked, he can show a vision of the Tarot trump of the Lightning Struck Tower, the 27th path of the Tree of Life. He will also provide a vision of one's spiritual self, but at this level of understanding it usually appears irrational and quite mad. For this reason it is called a beast. The Angel knows quite well that this beast will someday slay him. He may show this in a vision to the magician. One may even glimpse the ultimate victory of this beast, the spiritual self.

Comment: In LEA the great duality of the subjective self and the objective world is seen symbolically. This vision generally (but not always) takes the form of a beautiful naked woman riding upon an unruly beast of some sort. The attraction between these two polarities of Babalon and the beast is called lust. This lust is the theme of the Tarot card that symbolizes the 9th path of the Tree of Life, which connects the Sephiroths, Chesed and Geburah.

THE FIFTEENTH AETHYR: OXO

Name: OXO is pronounced Oh-tzoh and means "the Aethyr of dancing."

Gematria: OXO=460=GLO-KRAL (things of joy)
460 is also the value of the Hebrew NShIQ
(to kiss, to come together) also 460=230x2, where 230=ROR (the sun)
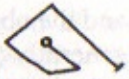
230 is also the Hebrew word KDVR
(the Earth)

Governors:

1. TAHA$^{N}_{M}$DO Tablet: Air Sigil:



a. Name: TAHAMDO, Tah-hah-meh-doh
TA-HAM-DO can mean "He who lives according to his name"
b. Gematria: TAHAMDO=146=IAOD-GLO
(beginning of things)
TAHAMDO=140=TIANTA (a bed)

2. NO$^{T}_{K}$IABI Tablet: Air Sigil:

a. Name: NOKIABI, Noh-kee-ah-bee
NOK-IA-BE can mean "Servant who speaks the truth"
b. Gematria: NOKIABI=511=NOKO-LONSA
(the servant of everyone)

3. TASTO$^{Z}_{X}$O Tablet: Air Sigil:

a. Name: TASTOXO, Tah-seh-toh-tzoh TAST-OXO can mean "She who initiates dancing"
b. Gematria: TASTOXO=491=OXO-BESZ
(dancing matter)=KALZIRG
(Governor of 22nd Aethyr)

491 is also the Hebrew word PUThH
(vagina)
TASTOXO=479=BI-KRAL
(voice of joy)

Location: The 15th Aethyr is on a subplane of the Mental Plane where all life is seen directly as a great dance. This is the play of Brahman taught in Hinduism.

Brief Description: The vision of OXO is based on the realization that life needs no purpose or goal other than itself. The purpose of life is to live. When one enters OXO, he will usually see a beautiful goddess dancing. Some say that this is the biblical Salome where, by gematria, SALOME=151=ZORGE (love)=HOATH BABALON (a true worshipper of Babalon). Whatever the case, she is indeed a reflex of the seductive world personified by Babalon. She is also a form of that aspect of the Hindu Brahman which is called ananda or bliss (Brahman is often called sat-sit-ananda or existence-consciousness-bliss). Her dance expresses the ecstatic joy of spiritual consciousness. It is a visual representation of the highly occult "music of the spheres." If a magician looks closely, he will usually see a rose here in one form or another. The feminine symbol of the rose is an apt glyph for the atmosphere of OXO.

Comment: OXO contains the sense of joy that began in NIA (24th Aethyr). Here the joy that was found in the harmony of the Aethyrs is intensified. Life is now seen as a divine dance, the lila of Hinduism. From the viewpoint of the serious and time-oriented ego, OXO appears as a terrible blasphemy. The message of OXO is that the creativity of divinity causes matter to flow from spirit until an equilibrium point is reached and then causes this matter to return back into its spiritual essence. This endless cyclic flow of the universe is seen as a joyous game in OXO.

THE FOURTEENTH AETHYR: VTA

Name: VTA is pronounced Veh-tah and means "the Aethyr of semblances."

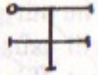
Gematria: VTA=85=VLS (the outermost, the most distant)
85 is also the value of the Hebrew word MILH (circumcision)
VTA=79=HOLQ (measured)
79 is also the value of the Hebrew word GUO (to die)

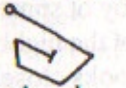
Governors:

1. TE$^{K}_{D}$OAND Tablet: Fire: Sigil:



a. Name: TEDOAND, Teh-doh-ah-en-deh
T-ED-ADNO can mean "He who demands obedience"
b. Gematria: TEDOAND=113=ZIN (waters)
113 is also the Hebrew PLG (a stream, brook)
TEDOAND=107=HOATH-ADNA (one who worships obedience)

2. VI$^{U}_{V}$IPOS Tablet: Fire Sigil:



a. Name: VIVIPOS, Vee-vee-poh-seh
VIV-POSI can mean "She of many repetitions"
b. Gematria: VIVIPOS=306=MATORB-TOTO-A (one who repeats)
306 is also the Hebrew AShH (a woman)

3. $^{V}_{O}$OANA$^{M}_{N}$B Tablet: Fire Sigil:

a. Name: VOANAMB, Voh-ah-nah-em-beh VAOAN-MB can mean "He to whom truth is relative"
b. Gematria: VOANAMB=257=MONONS (the heart)
257 is also the Hebrew words ChRTM (a magician) and MRIBH (discord)

Location: The 14th Aethyr is on the Mental Plane in a region that contains the City of the Pyramids. This region partakes of both the darkness of Daath and the severity of Geburah on the Tree of Life, and is probably somewhere along the 7th path, the Lovers of the Tarot.

Brief Description: VTA is the home of those Adepts who have left the world of form and now reside in a formless darkness. They will appear black and lifeless to the magician who can enter here because they are without emotions of any kind. Their home is called the City of the Pyramids and it is covered with the thick black smoke of solemnity. The Aethyr is pervaded with a current of transiency. The transient nature of all things is felt here as a living presence and is sometimes called the "Great One of the Night of Time." Everyone who enters here will encounter him in one form or another. In the inky blackness of VTA countless Masters sit very still and quiet, looking like dark pyramids. They can neither see nor hear nor speak. The have eliminated all personal desire and lust for life.

Comment: The pyramid is both a place of initiation and a tomb. The Masters of VTA combine both of these possibilities. They are both initiated and dead. They represent those people who have used yoga or magic for personal gain. They have burnt-out desire and have risen to this lofty spiritual height. But to what end? They represent the lowest form of Pratyeka-Buddha. This is an Adept who seeks only his own salvation. Only by being like the bodhisattva who has compassion for others, can one hope to ascend the Aethyrs all the way to LIL, the first.

THE THIRTEENTH AETHYR: ZIM

Name: ZIM is pronounced Zodee-meh and means "The Aethyr of application (or practice)."

Gematria: ZIM=159=TABAAN-FIFALZ
(governor who weeds out) also 159=53x3, where 53=BALTOH
(righteous)
53 is also the Hebrew word GN (a garden)
ZIM=153=LORSL (flowers)=ABRAASSA-ATH (to provide work)

Governors:

1. GEKAOND Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: GEKAOND, Geh-kah-oh-en-deh
GE-K-ADNO can mean "She who only obeys"
b. Gematria: GEKAOND=408=QURLST-NEMO (Nemo's handmaiden)
also 408=204x2, where 204=
PAPNOR (remembrance)

2. LAPARIN Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: LAPARIN, Lah-pah-ree-en LAP-AR-IN can mean "He who is the protector of man"
b. Gematria: LAPARIN=239=FIFALZ-GROSB
(weeding out the unworthy)
239 is also the Hebrew word GURL
(fate)

3. DOKEPAX Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: DOKEPAX, Doh-keh-pahtz
DO-KEP-AX can mean "He who names only great names"
b. Gematria: DOKEPAX=759=KORMP-ROR

(to number the sun)
and 759=23x33, where 23 is the Hebrew ChDUH (joy) and 33 is the Hebrew ABL (sorrow)

Primary Angel of this Aethyr: NEMO
A. Name: NEMO can be pronounced either Neh-moh in two syllables or En-em-oh in three syllables. The name means "Master of the Temple" and refers to an initiatory title. This name spelled backwards is OM-EN which means "know thyself."
b. Gematria: NEMO=180=LIMLAL (treasure)=
MAD-NETAAB (divine government)

Location: The 13th Aethyr is on the Mental Plane at the subplane of Nemo, the Silent Watcher of mankind.

Brief Description: ZIM is the Aethyr of NEMO, the Master of the Temple of Great White Brotherhood. This is a universal organization of men and women whose sole task is to help others to realize their spiritual potential. It is this organization which keeps the spirit of love and brotherhood alive in the world. One of the leaders of this group is called Nemo and he resides in the 13th Aethyr. The magician who enters ZIM will usually see Nemo tending his enormous garden like a devoted horticulturist. The garden symbolizes the universe. The flowers that occasionally can be seen to spring up from this garden are the new members of the organization, sometimes called the Hierarchy of Compassion.

Comment: The vision of Nemo in ZIM emphasizes the importance of compassion and concern for others. Without compassion, one will probably become a pyramid-like Adept in VTA. Nemo represents a principle form of this compassion; the desire to help others no matter how long it takes and with no thought for any personal reward.

THE TWELFTH AETHYR: LOE

Name: LOE is pronounced El-oh-eh and means "the first Aethyr of glory."

Gematria: LOE=48=POP (19th Aethyr)=TALHO (a cup) 48 is also the value of the Hebrew ChIL (a woman) also 48=6x8, where 6=A (I, self), and 8=G (not, void)

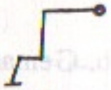
Governors:



1. TAPAMAL Tablet: Fire Sigil:
   a. Name: TAPAMAL, Tah-pah-mal
   TA-PAM-AL can mean "She who is like she was at the beginning"
   b. Gematria: TAPAMAL=134=TAFA-BABALON (poison of BABALON) also 134=ED-NAS-GOSAA (receiver of strangers)
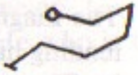
   TAPAMAL=128=TIANTA (a bed)
   128 is also the Hebrew word HChLPH (change)



2. GEDOONS Tablet: Fire Sigil:
   a. Name: GEDOONS, Geh-doh-oh-ness
   GE-DO-ONS can mean "He who eliminates your name"
   b. Gematria: GEDOONS=139=SIBSI (covenant) =TOR (23rd Aethyr) also 139=FIFALZ-DODSEH (elimination of vexation)

3. AM$^{\mathrm{B}}_{\mathrm{v}}$RIOL Tablet: Fire Sigil:
   a. Name: AMBRIOL, Ah-em-beh-ree-oh-leh

   AM-BLIOR can mean "He who continuously comforts"
   b. Gematria: AMBRIOL=299=ZUMVI (seas)= BLIAR-GRAA (comfort of the moon)
   299 is also the Hebrew word AVRHLBNH (moonlight)

LOCATION: The 12th Aethyr is located on the Mental Plane at the place of the Mystery of Babalon.

Brief Description: LOE contains the leaders of the Hierarchy of Compassion, those who have given their life's blood for others. It also contains the fate of the so-called Black Brothers, those who seek to avoid the Abyss because of fear or egoism. Those who are able to rise above VTA but lack compassion congregate here. The magician who enters LOE can see the chariot which is the symbol of the 8th path of the Tree of Life. This path crosses the Abyss while connecting the Sephiroths Geburah and Binah. There the Mystery of Babalon will be seen. This mystery was first sighted in LEA (16th Aethyr) and is intensified here. Babalon will again be seen riding a beast. Here the beast will have the title "Lord of the City of Pyramids" and it is the inner divinity of the magician, but more self-conscious than before.

Comment: LOE is the natural culmination of compassion which is developed over the preceding Aethyrs. In LOE one has to shed the last taint of a personal ego. Here the magician will feel that compassion for others is a sacred duty, a holy trust. However, there usually remains a tiny subtle thought that says something like, "Look at me, I am an Adept. I am working for your benefit. Therefore you should give me your gratitude and respect." Even this kind of thought, an expression of spiritual selfishness, must be eliminated.

THE ELEVENTH AETHYR: IKH

Name: IKH is pronounced Ee-keh and means "the Aethyr of tension."

Gematria; IKH=361=KAL-TOL (solidification of everything) and 361=19x19, where 19 is the Hebrew word ChVH (to manifest) and 19=BAG (3rd Aethyr)
361 is also the Hebrew word AShIN (foundation)

Governors:

1. MOLPAND Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: MOLPAND, Moh-leh-pan-deh MOLAP-ND can mean "He who receives men"
   b. Gematria: MOLPAND=197=ISRO (promise)=VRELP (an Adept) 197 is also the Hebrew word TzIMAVN (thirst)

2. VSNARDA Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: VSNARDA Fes-en-ar-dah VS-ADRAN can mean "He who casts down into the depths"
   b. Gematria: VSNARDA=243=SIATRIS (a scorpion) 243 is also the Hebrew words BRAM (created) and GRM (to destroy) also 243=81x3, where 81=NAZPS (a sword)
   81 is also the Hebrew ALIM (violence)

3. PONODOL Tablet: Fire Sigil:    a. Name: PONODOL, Poh-noh-doh-leh PON-OD-OL can mean "He who destroys and creates"
   b. Gematria: PONODOL=161=IAIDA-BESZ (the highest substance)
   =TOL-OM (all-knowing)

Location: The 11th Aethyr is situated in the highest subplane conceivable to the human mind, on the brink of the Outer Abyss.

Brief Description: IKH contains a city, sometimes called the Holy City, which represents the highest possible residence for the human mind (manas). The entire Aethyr is pervaded by an atmosphere of tension. The proximity of the Abyss gives the feeling of being on a great precipice. There is a strong feeling here that something extremely important is about to occur, although nothing actually happens. The magician who enters here can sometimes see the god Shu. This Egyptian god originally separated the sky (Nut) from the earth (Seb). Here he can be seen separating structured manifestation from the chaotic blackness of the Abyss. The Aethyr also contains vast armies of Angels whose function is to assist Shu and to defend the cosmos from the chaos that encircles it. They keep the mighty Khoronzon in ZAX and prevent him from entering the Aethyrs below the Abyss.

Comment: IKH contains a sense of impending doom. the last vestiges of egoity scream out for survival against the promise of dispersion awaiting in the next Aethyr. The 11th Aethyr marks the last frontier of human consciousness.

THE TENTH AETHYR: ZAX

Name: ZAX is pronounced Zod-ahtz and means "the Aethyr of the One with a Great Name."

Gematria: ZAX=415=83x5, where 83=FIFALZ
(to eliminate)
ZAX=409=MALPRG-BITOM
(fiery flames of Fire)
also 409=QUASB-MALPIRG
(destruction of the fires of life)

Governors:

1. LEXARPH Tablet: Black Cross
a. Name: LEXARPH, El-etz-ar-peh-heh
L-EXARPH can mean "He who is first of the air"
b. Gematria: LEXARPH=534=KIAOFI-NAZPS (terrible sword)
also 534=276x2, where 267=
YRPOIL (a division)

2. KOMANAN Tablet: Black Cross
a. Name: KOMANAN, Koh-mah-nah-neh
K-OM-NANA can mean "He who knows how to manifest"
b. Gematria: KOMANAN=532=PATRALX
(stone, rock)=AX-OMA
(Great Name of Knowledge)

3. TABITOM Tablet: Black Cross
a. Name: TABITOM, Tah-bee-toh-meh TA-BITOM can mean "He who is like fire"
b. Gematria: TABITOM=209=BLIORA (comfort)

209 is also the Hebrew word BZR
(dispersed)
TABITOM=197=VRELP
(an Adept)=MOLPAND
(Governor of 11th Aethyr)

Demon of ZAX: KHORONZON
A. Name: KHORONZON is pronounced Keh-hoh-roh-en-zodoh-en in seven syllables and means "He who is the basis of form" (KHORO-N-ZON).
b. Gematria: KHORONZON=600=OXI-BABALON (mighty evil one) KHORONZON=594=ZIXLAY-GOSA (the confusion of strangeness) also 594=54x11, where 54 is the Hebrew word LAAChID (incoherent)

Location: The 10th Aethyr is located at the subplane called the Great Outer Abyss. On the Qabalistic Tree of Life it is called the Veil of the Abyss and separates the three higher Sephiroth from the lower seven.

Brief Description: ZAX is a Ring-Pass-Not for the human mind. It represents an indescribable barrier between phenomena and noumena, matter and spirit. ZAX is the first stage of the Nirvana of Buddhism because it annihilates any ego that enters into it like a great wind blowing out the flame of a lamp. The chief resident in ZAX is the demon Khoronzon. He personifies the forces of dispersion and incoherence, the two primary qualities of this Aethyr. He is sometimes said to be the Master of Form, and he can change shape to suit the magician who dares to enter his domain.

Comment: When the magician enters ZAX, he must relinquish the personal sense of identity. The ego cannot enter ZAX, because Khoronzon will disperse it, and the result will be certain death. The key to this barrier is to meditatively silence the mind in samadhi before entering. Consciousness can safely pass through the Abyss so long as it is untainted by personality. The ability to reach a mental state equivalent to samadhi is a prerequisite to the higher Aethyrs.

THE NINTH AETHYR: ZIP

Name: ZIP is pronounced Zodee-peh and means "the Aethyr for those who are not (i.e. void of ego)."

Gematria: ZIP=78=TOTO (cycles) also 78x2=156=ARN (2nd Aethyr) and 78x3=234=QURLST (a handmaiden)
ZIP=72=TOOAT (to provide) also 72=24x3, where 24=LEA (16th Aethyr)
=PAZ (4th Aethyr) and 72x5=360, the number for the Hebrew word NShI(feminine, womanly)

Governors:

1. ODDIORG Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: ODDIORG, Oh-deh-dee-oh-rah-geh OID-OD-RG can mean "He of fire and justice"
b. Gematria: ODDIORG=236=ENAY BABALON
(the Lord of Babalon)
236 is also the Hebrew word MTzUQ
(a cliff)
also 236=59x4, where 59=BALTOH
(righteousness)

2. KRALPIR Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: KRALPIR, kar-al-pee-ar
KRAL-PIR can mean "He of bright joy"
b. Gematria: KRALPIR=583=BOGPA-KHIRLAN (to rule with joy)
also 583=53x11, where 53=
BALTOH (righteous)

53 is also the Hebrew word GN (garden)

3. DOANZIN Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: DOANZIN, Doh-an-en-zodee-en
DOAN-ZIN can mean "He who names the waters"
b. Gematria: DOANZIN=209=TABITOM
(Governor of 10th Aethyr)
DOANZIN=203= BLIOR (comfort)=
PIAMOL (righteousness)

Location: The 9th Aethyr is located directly above the Abyss on the lowest subplane of the Spiritual Plane.

Brief Description: The magician who rises through the Abyss will be awed by the beauty and splendor of ZIP. After leaving the tension of ZAX, the atmosphere of ZIP will appear like a beautiful garden. In this garden is a stone palace sometimes called the Stone of the Philosophers and sometimes the Palace of the King's Daughter. As one enters further into this Aethyr the stone will be seen as skin and the palace will be seen as the body of an enormous and beautiful woman. She is known as the Virgin of Eternity and the Daughter of Babalon. She personifies the femininity that pervades this Aethyr. The 9th Aethyr will give one the strong feeling that spirit is reality and that matter is illusion. Ananda, or bliss, is strong here.

Comment: The 9th Aethyr is very close to the Sephiroth of Binah on the Tree of Life. The Daughter of Babalon is the Shakti or Kundalini of Tantracism, and Isis, the reflex or "daughter" of the Egyptian goddess Nut. But this is only one side. She is also the black Kali and the lioness Sekhet, the dark side of femininity. However, this side is only hinted at here. The magician will probably do little more than bask in the bliss of this Aethyr and contemplate the multiple aspects of femininity.

THE EIGHTH AETHYR: ZID

Name: ZID is pronounced Zodee-deh and means "the Aethyr of one's [inner] god."

Gematria: ZID=73=GOSAA-ZAH (the stranger within)
73 is also the Hebrew word ChKMH
(wise one, the Sephiroth Chokmah)
ZID=67=ASPT-ADPHAHT
(before the unspeakable)
67 is also the Hebrew word BINH
(understanding, the Sephiroth Binah)

Governors:

1. ZAMFRES Tablet: Fire Sigil:    a. Name: ZAMFRES, Zodah-em-far-eh-seh ZAM-F-RES can mean "He who appears when praised"
   b. Gematria: ZAMFRES=225=EOLIS-BABALON (to make evil) also 225=15x15, where 15=AP (unchanging)=GAH (spirit) ZAMFRES=219=ZIRN (wonder) also 219=73x3, where 73=ZID (8th Aethyr)

2. TODNAON Tablet: Fire Sigil:    a. Name: TODNAON, Toh-deh-nah-oh-en T-OD-NOAN can mean "He who is and who will be"
   b. Gematria: TODNAON=179=BLIAR (with comfort)
   TODNAON=173=THARZI (peace)
   also 173x2=346=ZOKHA (what is past)

3. PRISTAK Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: PRISTAK, Peh-ree-seh-tah-keh PIR-S-TA-K can mean "He who has the likeness of a Holy One"
b. Gematria: PRISTAK=491=KALZIRG
(Governor of 22nd Aethyr)
PRISTAK=485=KALZIRG
(see 22nd Aethyr)

Location: The 8th Aethyr is located on the Spiritual Plane above the Abyss in the region of one's Holy Guardian Angel. It is between Binah and Chokmah on the Tree of Life, probably somewhere along the 4th path, the Empress.

Brief Description: The Guiding Angel of the 8th Aethyr is one's inner god, the divinity within man. He is sometimes called one's Holy Guardian Angel and his encounter here is known as having "knowledge and conversation with the Holy Guardian Angel." The truth of one's spiritual nature is directly confronted here. The magician who enters ZID must face this truth even though the god usually appears objectively. This Angel will explain one's True Will to each magician who can face him.

Comment: The 8th Aethyr is as masculine as the 9th is feminine. Furthermore the joy that is in ZIP is now serious and sober. Entrance into ZID is the primary goal of all true magic. Only by meeting one's own inner divinity, and thereby learning of one's True Will, can one hope to set about accomplishing that Will.

THE SEVENTH AETHYR: DEO

Name: DEO is pronounced Deh-oh and means "the Aethyr of [spiritual] selfishness."

Gematria: DEO=44=OBZA (dual)
44 is also the value of the Hebrew word AGM (sorrow) also 44=22x2, where 22=BALT (justice)

Governors:

1. O$^{P}_{B}$MAKAS Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: OPMAKAS, Oh-pah-mah-kah-seh
O-PAM-KAS can mean "He who is from the beginning"
b. Gematria: OPMAKAS=448=16x28, where 28= BALT (justice)
and 16=ATH (works)
448 is also the Hebrew word MBVQSh (desire)

2. GENADO$^{L}_{B}$ Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: GENADOL, Geh-nah-doh-leh GE-ALDON can mean "He who only attracts"
b. Gematria: GENADOL=116=NIA (24th Aethyr) =MABZA (a robe)
also 116x3=348, the number for the Hebrew ShMCh (joyful)

3. ASPIAON Tablet: Fire Sigil: a. Name: ASPIAON, ah-seh-pee-ah-oh-en ASP-IA-ON can mean "She who preceeds inner truth"

b. Gematria: ASPIAON=168=BOGPA-BABALON
(the rule of Babalon)
also 168=42x4, where 42 is the Hebrew word AMA
(supernal mother)

Location: DEO is located in the Spiritual Plane where love is predominate. This love takes two forms, love of self (spiritual selfishness) and love of others (compassion).

Brief Description: The 7th Aethyr contains the duality of love for self and love for others. Here love for self is not simple egotism because the ego was left below the Abyss. It is rather the spiritual selfishness embodied by the Pratyeka Buddha, who sees others as maya or illusion and therefore has no compassion for them. The Guiding Angel of DEO is a woman who can take many forms. She says, "I am a harlot for such as ravish me, and a virgin with such as know me not." It is this dichotomy that disturbed Edward Kelly when he entered here in the Spirit Vision. The lady of this Aethyr is Venus, goddess of love. She is also the woman portrayed in the Tarot trump called the Star. She is also Sakti, goddess of creative energy. The magician who enters DEO will see the Pratyeka Buddhas that inhabit this Aethyr at the feet of this goddess. They will appear similar to those Adepts in the City of the Pyramids.

Comment: There is a mystical notion that comes to one and says something like, "I am all. There is none but me. I am real and all else is illusion." Some mystics succumb to this idea and think of themselves as a drop of spirit slipping into a spiritual sea. They become Pratyeka Buddhas and occasionally rise all the way to DEO but never farther. The higher Aethyrs are for the Bodhisattvas. The former denies the existence of others. The latter recognizes others and strives to help them to become like himself.

THE SIXTH AETHYR: MAZ

Name: MAZ can be pronounced either Em-ah-zod or Mah-zod and means "the Aethyr of appearances."

Gematria: MAZ=105=FAONTS (to dwell in)=
ZIZOP (vessels)
105 is also the Hebrew word HPK (change) also 105=21x5, where 21 is ZAA
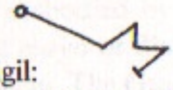
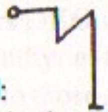
(5th Aethyr)=DES (26th Aethyr)
MAZ=99=FAONTS (to dwell in)
99 is also the Hebrew word ChUPH
(vault of Heaven)

Governors:

1. SAXTOMP Tablet: Fire Sigil:



a. Name: SAXTOMP, Sahtz-toh-em-peh
S-AX-T-OMP can mean "She whose name means understanding"
b. Gematria: SAXTOMP=551=OM-ZAKARE
(knowledge of motion)
SAXTOMP=545=109x5, where 109=
DOSIG (night)
545 is also the Hebrew word MShRH
(end)



2. $VA^{U}_{V}A^{A}_{I}MP$ Tablet: Fire Sigil:
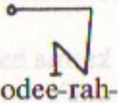
a. Name: VAUAAMP, Vah-uah-ah-em-peh VAU-A-AMP can mean "He who initiates action"
b. Gematria: VAUAAMP=257=MONONS
(the heart)
257 is also the Hebrew word ChRTM
(a magician)



3. ZIRZIRD Tablet: Fire Sigil:
a. Name: ZIRZIRD, Zodee-rah-zodee-rah-deh ZIR-ZIRD can mean "He who was and who will be"
b. Gematria: ZIRZIRD=342=HOM-MALPRG
(to live in fiery flames)
342 is also the Hebrew word ShLHBH (flame)
ZIRZIRD=330=LEVITHMONG
(beasts of the field)
330 is also the Hebrew words ShL
(male) and MRTz (energy)

Location: The 6th Aethyr is situated on the Spiritual Plane in a region which touches the Sephiroth Chokmah on the Tree of Life.

Brief Description: The 6th Aethyr is charged with masculine creative power. As the angel of DEO is feminine, so the angel of MAZ is masculine. He is called Ave (AVE=86= NETAAB (government) by Enochian Gematria). He will show the magician who enters here three types of Adepts who personify the three ways one can look at the world. The yellow Adept is one who is neutral with regard to his environment. He watches it but is not affected by it. The black Adept reacts negatively to his surroundings. He rejects it as illusion or as sorrow. The white Adept reacts positively to his environment. He is joyous and sees all as a delight. These Adepts personify the consciousness-existence-bliss aspects of Brahman. Sometimes Ave will show one the Temple of MAZ. It looks like a huge urn suspended in the air and it contains the ashes of one's past experiences (i.e. one's karmic residue).

Comments: The Temple of MAZ symbolizes that one's karma has been consumed. MAZ is the Aethyr that ends one's personal karma. The magician who can enter MAZ thus becomes a jivamukti, one who is "liberated while living."

THE FIFTH AETHYR: LIT

Name: LIT can be pronounced either Lee-teh or El-ee-teh and means "the Aethyr that is without a supreme being."

Gematria: LIT=77=THIL (seat)=ED-NAS (receivers)
77 is also the Hebrew word SIBH (cause)
also 77x3=231=IADNAH-MAL
(knowldge of the arrow)
LIT=71=THIL (seat)=BIA (voice)
71 is also the Hebrew word ALM (silence)

Governors:

1. LAXDI^{z}xI Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: LAXDIXI, Lahtz-dee-tzee
   L-AX-DIX-I can mean "He who has no supreme name"
   b. Gematria: LAXDIXI=938=PATRALX-AX
   (stone name)

2. NOKAMAL Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: NOKAMAL, Noh-kah-mal NOKA-MAL can mean "He who is servant of the arrow"
   b. Gematria: NOKAMAL=490=OXI (mighty)
   490 is also the Hebrew word ChIVNIVTh (life)

3. TIARPAX Tablet: Water Sigil:    a. Name: TIARPAX, Tee-ah-rah-pahtz
   T-IARP-AX can mean "He whose name means truth"
   b. Gematria: TIARPAX=590=ELO-IPSI-AX (first holder of a name)

also 590=59x10, where 59=
BALTOH (righteous)
and 10=ATH (works)
TIARPAX=584=IOLKAM-BAGHIE
(to bring forth fury)

Location: The 5th Aethyr is on the Spiritual Plane at a point where divinity is seen as an endless host of hierarchies.

Brief Description: The 5th Aethyr contains all of the major gods and goddesses of man. The magician who enters LIT will see rows of these past and future gods. This sometimes appears as many avenues of pylons leading up the side of a mountain. A god or goddess is seated at each pylon. Following one of these avenues will lead one to the top of the mountain where the last pylon is located. Although one would expect the Supreme Deity to be seated there, an inspection will show that the topmost pylon is empty. There is no Supreme Deity as such. Over the top of LIT can be seen a huge arrow. This arrow is sometimes called the Arrow of Truth. It has the feathers of Maat (goddess of truth), the shaft of Amen (the "hidden" god) and the barb is the Silver Star of Isis.

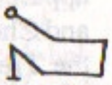
Comment: The 5th Aethyr contains the doctrine of hierarchies. The manifested worlds are created and maintained by vast hierarchies of deities. Although each hierarchy has a chief, or Hierarch, there is no one overall supreme Hierarch anywhere in the universe. The Arrow of Truth symbolizes the intelligent forces of guidance and direction which now replace the concept of a personal Supreme Deity.

THE FOURTH AETHYR: PAZ

Name: PAZ is pronounced Pah-zod and means "the Aethyr of impending expression."

Gematria: PAZ=24=LEA (16th Aethyr)=TAFA (poison)
24 is also the Hebrew words AHUBI
(he whom I love)
and AUHBI (he who loves me)
PAZ=18=AFFA (empty)=GE (not)=TAFA
(poison)
18 is also the Hebrew word AHBI
(my beloved)

Governors:



1. THO$^{T}_{K}$AN$^{F}_{P}$ Tablet: Water Sigil:
a. Name: THOTANF, Teh-hoh-tah-neff
TOH-TA-N-F can mean "She whose visit means victory"
b. Gematria: THOTANF=108=BAMS (forget)=
OTHIL (seat)
108 is also the Hebrew word ChNN
(to love very much) also 108=54x2, where 54=
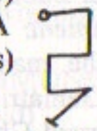
TALHO (a cup)
THOTANF=96=SONFA
(one who reigns)



2. AX$^{Z}_{X}$IARG Tablet: Water Sigil:
a. Name: AXZIARG, Ahtz-zodee-ah-rah-geh AX-Z-IARG can mean "He whose name is Flame"
b. Gematria: AXZIARG=589=ZIXLAY-GLO
(to stir up things)
AXZIARG=583=53x11, where 53=
BALTOH (righteous)

3. POTHN$^{I}_{R}$R Tablet: Water Sigil:
a. Name: POTHNIR, Poh-teh-henee-ar
P-OTH-NIR can mean "Son of the threefold throne"
b. Gematria: POTHNIR=259=T-VABZIR
(like an eagle)
259 is also the Hebrew word NHDR
(lovely)
POTHNIR=253=23x11, where 23 is the Hebrew word ChDVH (joy)

Location: The 4th Aethyr is on the Spiritual Plane in a region which combines femininity and masculinity. It is apparently midway between the two Sephiroths Binah and Chokmah, but well above the path of the Empress on the Tree of Life.

Brief Description: The magician who enters PAZ will see a combination of femininity and masculinity. This usually takes the form of a beautiful dark woman clinging with arms and legs, to a dark repulsive-looking man. They are clasped in a furious embrace and are obviously hurting each other in the process. She is strangling him while he is trying to tear her apart. A close look will reveal that the dark man is Chaos while the dark woman is another form of Babalon (i.e. the cosmos).

Comment: The struggling woman in PAZ is Cosmos while the man who opposes her is Chaos. By Enochian Gematria, KAOS=343, the number for the Hebrew word ChShIKH (darkness) and KOZMOS=466, the number for the Hebrew word OVLM HITzIRH (the World of Formation). The eternal struggle between Cosmos and Chaos gives rise to the manifested planes and Aethyrs below PAZ. In a magical sense, the man here is the Will while the woman is Love.

THE THIRD AETHYR: ZOM

Name: ZOM is pronounced Zod-oh-em and means "the Aethyr of self-knowledge."
Gematria: ZOM=129=MOZ (joy)
129 is also the Hebrew word ODNH
(pleasure, delight)
ZOM=123=MOZ=(joy)
123 is also the Hebrew word ONG
(pleasure, delight)

Governors:
1. SAMAPHA Tablet: Water Sigil: a. Name: SAMAPHA, Sah-mah-peh-hah
SA-M-APHA can mean "He who is with continuity"
b. Gematria: SAMAPHA=125=LRASD
(to dispose of)
125 is also the Hebrew word KPIIH
(a force)

2. VIR$^{L}_{K}$OLI Tablet: Water Sigil: a. Name: VIRLOLI, Vee-rah-loh-lee VIR-L-OLI can mean "He who made the first nest"
b. Gematria: VIRLOLI=336=LEVITHMONG
(beasts of the field)
336 is also the Hebrew words
MKVOR (ugly) and ROIVN (thought)

3. A$^{N}_{A}$DISPI Tablet: Water Sigil: a. Name: ANADISPI, Ah-nah-dee-ess-pee ADNA-IPZI can mean "He who binds into obedience"

b. Gematria: ANADISPI=202=AMMA-ATH (cursed works)
202 is also the Hebrew words BR (pure) and BQQ (to make empty)

Location: The 3rd Aethyr is on the Spiritual Plane along the second path of the Tree of Life, the Magician, Magus or Juggler.

Brief Description: The magician who enters ZOM will become a Magus. In ZOM one will learn that all objective reality is intimately connected to the subjective self. The monadic essence of man contains an infinitesimal consciousness center and its infinite universe. In short, man is a circle whose center is nowhere and whose circumference is everywhere. In ZOM the magician will learn how to consicously control his surroundings as well as himself. In the 8th Aethyr, the magician learned his True Will. In ZOM he learns how to carry it out. One who enters ZOM can become a Maker of Illusions because he will learn how to be consciously creative. The Aethyr is permeated by a feeling of creative freedom.

Comment: ZOM is the Aethyr of self-knowledge. The experiences gained here can make one a Magus, the highest of Adepts. Here the magician will see that his True Will is nothing less than the full conscious expression of his inherent qualitites and characteristics through the planes and Aethyrs. The Magus in ZOM is like an artist who realizes that he is completely free to paint whatever kind of picture he wants so long as he lets other artists do the same.

THE SECOND AETHYR: ARN

Name: ARN is pronounced Ar-en and means "the Aethyr of fulfillment."

Gematria: ARN=156=OLPRT (light)=
LONSHI (power)
=No. of squares in each Tablet and 156=GLO-BABALON
(the things of Babalon) also 156=78x2, where 78=ZIP
(9th Aethyr)

Governors:

1. DO$^{N}_{A}$GNIS Tablet: Water Sigil: a. Name: DOAGNIS, Doh-ah-geh-nee-seh
DO-AG-NIS can mean "She who comes without a name"
b. Gematria: DOAGNIS=165=L-ZORGE
(first love)
165 is also the Hebrew word OMMIH
(Master of the Temple)
also 165=55x3, where 55 is the Hebrew KLH (bride)

2. PAKASNA Tablet: Water Sigil: a. Name: Pah-kah-ess-nah
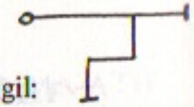
AP-KASNA can mean "She who is unchanged by time"
b. Gematria: PAKASNA=384=48x8, where 48=
TALHO (cup)
48 is also the Hebrew word ChIL
(a woman)
and 8 is the Hebrew word DD
(love)



3. DIAI$^{v}_{o}$IA Tablet: Water Sigil:

a. Name: DIAIVOIA, Dee-ah-ee-voh-ee-ah IAD-I-VO-IA can mean "the god where truth is"

b. Gematria: DIAIVOIA=296=AR-QUASAHI (delight in the Sun) also 296=148x2, where 148= ORSBA (intoxicated)

Location: The 2nd Aethyr is close to the top of the Spiritual Plane. It is the region of Babalon.

Brief Description: ARN is the home of the mysterious BABALON who was first seen in LEA, and whose daughter was seen in ZIP. Here she is seen directly and completely. The vision is indescribable. A hint is given in the name itself because BAB-ALON can mean "the attraction of sound." She is in fact a personification of the powerful force of attraction that exists between the subjective self and the objective non-self. The ancient Egyptians symbolized the self as a winged globe (a form of Horus) and the not-self as the goddess Nut (Space), who was shown arched over the world in the form of the night sky. All of these ideas will be encountered in ARN in one form or another. The entire atmosphere of ARN is characterized by intense bliss.

Comment: The direction of the Aethyrs is towards non-duality. Each is slightly more non-dual than the other until LIL, the highest of thirty Aethyrs and the first stage of true non-duality. In ARN the ultimate duality (all of the others are expressions or offshoots of this one) of subject and object is confronted. This results in the highest form of samadhi, called nirvikalpa in Vedanta. The struggle of PAZ is now a gentle and loving sharing.

THE FIRST AETHYR: LIL

Name: LIL can be pronounced either El-ee-el or Lee-el and means "the first Aethyr."

Gematria: LIL=76=TABAAN (governor, ruler)
76 is also the Hebrew words ChBIUN (secret place) and NIChCh (peace)
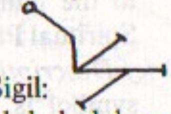
also 76=38x2, where 38=OL (maker)
38 is also the Hebrew word ZKAI (innocent)

Governors:



1. OKKODON Tablet: Water Sigil:

a. Name: OKKODON, Oh-keh-koh-doh-en
KOKO-DO-N can mean "He whose name is Renewal"

b. Gematria: OKKODON=744=KIKLE-TOTO (mysteries of cycles) also 744=93x8, where 93=TOL-QAA (all of creation)

2. PA$^{x}_{s}$KOMB Tablet: Water Sigil:

a. Name: PASKOMB, Pah-ess-koh-em-beh
PAS-K-OMB can mean "He who precedes understanding"

b. Gematria: PASKOMB=447=KRAL-PAGE (joyous rest) also 447=148x3, where 149= T-TIANTA (like a bed)
149 is also the Hebrew words DLIQH

(fire) and KVCh HDMIVN (imagination)

3. VALGARS Tablet: Water Sigil:
a. Name: VALGARS, Val-gar-ess

VAL-G-ARS can mean "He who works with that which is"

b. Gematria: VALGARS=205=NIBM (season)= PARM (to run, to flow)

205 is also the Hebrew words GBR (man) and HR (mountain)

Location: The first Aethyr is the highest region conceivable to the human spirit. It is located at the apex of the Spiritual Plane just below a Ring-Pass-Not for the spirit.

Brief Description: LIL is the first stage of non-duality. Its symbol is a little child or babe, the embodiment of innocence and purity. As ARN is the Aethyr of Babalon, so LIL is the Aethyr of the beast. But the unruly beast of the lower Aethyrs is now tamed and is changed into a child. This child represents the fruition of the Great Work. The ancient Egyptians embodied this idea in Hor-pa-Khrat or Harpocrates, the child Horus.

Comment: LIL is the highest Aethyr possible for man to enter and still be able to return to talk about it. Beyond LIL is the realm of non-dual divinity about which nothing can be said.

THE AETHYRS

The Relationships Between The Aethyrs.

The relationships between the thirty Aethyrs can best be seen through numbers. In addition to the gematria numbers, whole numbers from 1 to 8 can be found by adding up each gematria number. This method of addition is called AIQ BKR or the Qabalah of Nine chambers.

First, it can be seen from Figure 31 that the Aethyrs can be broken up nicely into three groups; in the Astral, Mental and Spiritual. Each cosmic plane is separated by a Ring-Pass-Not or spherical barrier. The first is between NIA and TOR and this bars the intellect. The second is between IKH and ZAX (although it could as well be said to be ZAX itself) and this bars the human mind. The third is between LIL and the unspeakable realms of divinity that lie beyond the first Aethyr and this bars the human spirit.

Table IX shows the Aiq Bkr values for each Aethyr. It can be seen that the three Ring-Pass-Nots divide the thirty Aethyrs into three groups each of whose total numerical value can be reduced to 7, the occult number for completeness. There is a hidden relationship between each Aethyr of corresponding numerical values. The student is left to determine these relationships for himself. As an aid, each number has an occult significance as follows:

1 unity, oneness, extension, spirit
2 duality, divine will
3 matter, manifestation, intelligence, space
4 solidity, firmness, time
5 spirit and matter mixed, man
6 animation, life, mind
7 completeness, wholeness, satisfaction
8 cycles, spirals

It should be noted that the only Aethyr with a value of 2 is TAN, the Aethyr of the Great Balance. Also, no Aethyr has the number 9. Finally, if all thirty Aethyrs are added together by Aiq Bkr, the total reduces to 3, the number for manifestation.

How to Visit the Aethyrs in the Spirit Vision.

Each of the Aethyrs can be visited in the Spirit Vision although few magicians ever get past ZAX, the Abyss. The procedure used is identical for each Aethyr.

Step 1. Begin by reciting the appropriate Call.
Step 2. Invoke the support of the Governors. Trace their sigils in the air while vibrating their names.
Step 3. Concentrate on the signposts of the Aethyr. Use imagination and the will to mentally leave the body and enter the Aethyr.

A CAUTION. The student should be very careful to visit the Aethyrs one at a time, in succession. Visit TEX first. Only after TEX has become familiar should one advance to RII. Become familiar with RII before attempting BAG, and so on. Do not jump into one of the higher Aethyrs. Rising in the Aethyrs should be a gradual and orderly progression.

Example No. 1. The student should begin by entering TEX as follows:

1. Stand facing North (i.e. face the Watchtower of Water which contains the four governors of TEX).
2. Recite the Call for TEX: "The Heavens that are in the Thirtieth Aethyr, TEX, are mighty in those regions of the universe . . . " etc.
3. Vibrate the names MPH-ARSL-GAIOL and RAAGIOL.
4. Vibrate the name TAOAGLA and trace his sigil in the air. The sigil should be blue, the color of the Watchtower. This Governor is kindly and righteous. He rules in the subquadrant Air of Water.

5. Vibrate the name GEMNIMB and trace his sigil in blue. This Governor is very judgmental, but his judgments are temporary and can be changed. He rules in the subquadrant Water of Water.
6. Vibrate the name ADUORPT and trace her sigil in blue. This Governor is feminine and passive like the moon. She rules in the subquadrant Air of Water and Water of Water, partaking of both.
7. Vibrate the name DOZIAAL and trace his sigil in blue. This Governor is very emotional and he can bestow either pleasure or pain, joy or sorrow. He rules in the subquadrant Water of Water.
8. Concentrate on TEX, a region divided into four sections:
   a. TAOAGLA governs the West.
   b. GEMNIMB governs the North.
   c. ADUORPT governs the South.
   d. DOZIAAL governs the East.
9. Meditate on each of the four Governors and their attributes. Try to see the Aethyr divided by karma, desire, silence and restriction. The inhabitants of the North will be mainly governed by their karma. Those of the East will mainly be controlled by their desires. Those in the South will largely be quiet and reflective. Those in the West will, for the most part, be like captives; bound by their own sense of limitations.

Example No. 2. After experience is gained in TEX, the student can try to enter RII as follows:

1. Stand facing South (i.e. face the Watchtower of Earth that contains the three Governors of RII).
2. Recite the Call for RII: "The Heavens that are in the twenty-ninth Aethyr, RII, are mighty in those regions of the universe . . ." and so on.

3. Vibrate the names MOR-DIAL-HKTGA and IKZHIKAL.
4. Vibrate the name VASTRIM and trace his sigil in the air. The sigil should be black, the color of the Watchtower of Earth (this sigil is a straight line going from left to right). This Governor is ugly to look at but his nature is merciful. He rules mainly in the subquadrant Fire of Earth but also slightly in Earth of Earth.
5. Vibrate the name ODRAXTI and trace his sigil in black. This Governor has the power to create and destroy and he does both according to his strong sense of justice. He rules in the subquadrant Earth of Earth.
6. Vibrate the name GMOTZIAM and trace her black sigil in the air. This Governor is a personification of self-love and self-concern. She rules in the subquadrant Fire of Fire.
7. Concentrate on RII, a region divided into four sections: judgment, purgatory, heaven, and stagnation. The three Governors overlap all four sections.
8. Meditate on each of the three Governors and their attributes of mercy, justice and selfishness. Try to see the Aethyr and its inhabitants; those deceased persons who are awaiting judgment, those who are being judged after death, and those who have already been judged, as well as those who are in a mental stupor and who refuse to acknowledge what is happening to them.

Example No. 3. After experience is gained in TEX and RII, the student can try to enter BAG as follows:

1. Face South, recite the Call for the twenty-eighth Aethyr, BAG, and vibrate MOR-DIAL-HKTGA and IKZHIKAL as in Example No. 2.
2. Vibrate the name TABNIXP and trace his black sigil in the air. This Governor likes to put labels on everyone who enters BAG. He labels most of the inhabitants as sinners. He rules in the subquadrant Fire of Earth.

3. Vibrate the name FOKLSNI and trace his black sigil in the air. This Governor visits the inhabitants of BAG and brings forth those he deems to be worthy. He rules in the subquadrant Earth of Earth and Fire of Earth.
4. Vibrate the name OXLOPAR and trace his sigil in black. This Governor has the power to control the inhabitants of BAG due to their own sense of unworthiness. He knows their personal past histories and uses this to manipulate them. He rules in the subquadrant Earth of Earth.
5. Concentrate on BAG, a region permeated by feelings of unworthiness and doubt and a tendency towards self-pity. The inhabitants of BAG have rather low opinions of themselves and do not feel worthy of the higher Aethyrs.

Note. The remaining Aethyrs can be visited in the same way as the above examples. Remember that all sigils of Governors in the Watchtower of Air are all yellow. The only exception is in ZAX where the Governors have no sigils.

A SPIRIT VISION WORK SHEET

It is a good idea to make up a work sheet for each operation. Such a work sheet should contain all of the major elements that you should need for your operation and would serve three primary functions:

(1) Preparation. It will allow you to prepare yourself for the operation beforehand by familiarization with the material and its goal in your mind.

(2) Data Base. It will serve as a source of information, a data base, when you record your results in your diary and plan for future operations.

(3) Structure. It will help structure each operation in a way that is magically progressive and spiritually rewarding because it will force you to learn something from each operation.

Each student is advised to use a work sheet such as the one shown on page 223. This is a general work sheet that can be used for Spirit Visions in the Watchtowers or Aethyrs. If you like, you can tailor each sheet to fit your specific operation. They should be used in a scientific manner. The purpose is to faithfully record as much information as you can. You won't know what is important until these sheets are analyzed at a later time. Meanwhile, always record as much data as you can. After a series of operations, you will be able to go over these sheets and look for patterns and messages which can indicate your progress in Enochian Magic. For example, you may find that you got poor results on days when your health was also poor. You may find that on some days of the week or certain periods of the month you recorded better results than at other times. By experimenting with weapons and preparations you are almost certain to find a combination that works well for you. You may discover that some regions are easier to visit than others, you may learn more in some regions than in others, and so on. Results of such self-analyses will show you your own biorythmic cycles with regard to Magic and will help you to measure your own progress, or lack of progress. All beginners will have periodic good results and poor results. The important thing is to find your own cycles and to determine the preparations and times that work best for you.

CHIEF HAZARDS OF THE AETHYRS

In addition to the normal hazards associated with Astral Projection and Rising on the Planes, each Aethyr is associated with special dangers for the unwary magician. Awareness of these pitfalls beforehand can prevent unnecessary sorrow.
